MESSAGE TO GUARDSMEN

Telegram to General Clement Assures Him of Prayers of Association's Members

BEDFORD SPRINGS, Pa., June 29 .-"Dyspeptic, despotic, splenetic and silly were some of the adjectives applied to the Judge who browbeats attorneys, in the address delivered this morning by Richard Hays Hawkins, of Pittsburgh, at the final session of the Pennsylvania Bar Association's twenty-second annual meeting. His speech upon "Judicial Abuse" was a caustic commentary upon the "antics of the bench" and occupied the whole of the morning. He simed his criticism at Judges who make their opinions vehicles of abuse and ill-tempered reflections upon attorneys appearance before them or other Judges.

tempered reflections upon attorneys appearing before them or other Judges.

Mr. Hawkins cited Jeremiah Black, once Attorney General of the United States and Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, as one whose opinions bristled with vehemence and vituperation. He placed in the same category such prominent jurists as Judge Dean, Chief Justice Ellis Lewis, Chief Justice Lowrie, Justice George W. Woodward and Chief Justice John Bannister Gibson, all of Pennsylvania.

"JUSTIFIED AT TIMES." "I admit that the abuse of an attorney is justified at times," said Mr. Hawkins, "but to tell a lawyer that he is an ass, a pettifogger or bore does not tend to make him wiser. This abuse, if temporary or translent, might be tolerated, but when spread upon the pages of reports that will be read for many years, the bar has a right to proper many have no personal test. Though one may have no personal experience of such practices, yet there is aroused a feeling of disgust in reading the decisions of our higher courts."

GREETING TO SOLDIERS. The association voted to send a message of greeting to Brigadier General Charles Clement, who is at Mount Gretna with his ommand awaiting a call to the border. The text of the telegram follows:

General Charles M. Clement, Mt. Gretna, Pa. WIVES, MOTHERS, SWEETHEARTS AWAIT ARRIVAL OF SOLDIERS

Baltimore and Ohio Station at Twenty-fourth and Chestnut Streets Crowded for Hours by Devoted Women

The man who can't understand patience should go to the Baltimore and Ohio depot, at 24th and Chestnut streets. | wonder of a woman who is going around wherever she sees some particularly depressed person, and when she leaves, good There are scores of women there who have been waiting more than 24 hours for a glimpse of their soldier husbands or sons, and just because the Mount Gretna troop trains haven't arrived yet is no reason, they say, why they should be impatient. Just as if it were the most ordinary thing In the world these women tell how they have been waiting since yesterday at 5 a. m. or 7 to 9 or 11 a. m., and are prepared to wait a week if necessary.

Their preparation consists in wilingness

Their preparation consists in willingness to sleep on hard benches and money enough to patronize the station restaurant. Under no conditions will they eat the food they have brought along for the soldiers dear. Take the story of the mother of Alexander Adaire, who before he went away with Company L, of the 2d Regiment, lived at 1227 West Lehigh avenue. She came to the station before most persons were at breakfast yesterday, and she hasn't left since. She brought with her a sister of since. She brought with her a sister of young Adaire, and met a charming soul, whose name is Mrs. Charles McConahy and whose husband is in Company B. of the 2d. Their home is at 2135 Corlies street. As Adaire's mother and sister put it. "We don't see how we'd of got along without Mrs. McConahy. She has certainly kept our

MRS. McCONAHY'S WAY.

Mrs. McConahy (and she has no especial liking for war and its potential disasters to her) is the merriest person one ever wants to meet. She sees a laugh in everything, and the way the rest of the women flock around her is proof enough that they need her good humor to keep them normal. Without her that station would be gloomy to distraction.

When the various waiters told how they When the various waiters told how they had spent the night there, and some curious one asked if they slept well, it was Mrs. McConahy, who broke in and said they didn't sleep at all; they had too much fun. And she kept up all this by-play, not to enjoy herself, but for the sake of the other waiting mothers and wives. She is a real, human woman if there was human woman, if there ever was one

TWO OTHER PATIENT WAITERS. Mrs. Norman Shenton, of 2220 Fitzwater street, waited yesterday from noon to mid-night and was back again at 5 o'clock this morning. It is her husband she waits for. He is in the 2d Regiment's band. Before he had to go to camp he played in the Police Band when he wasn't on his beat out of the 20th and Fitzwater streets police station. Mrs. Shenton had a wonderful luncheon put up for him. With her is waiting Mrs. Robert Porter, of 2227 Fitzwater street. Her son, Robert, a strapping boy of 18 to judge from the picture she showed, is in the 2d Regiment. too, and it is up to Policeman Shenton to take care of him. Mrs. Shenton laid that injunction on her husband before he left, and Mrs. Porter feels better on that account.

Good samaritans vie with trouble-makers in the railroad station. One woman yesterday approached many of the patient waters, and told them they would have to give way to the Woman's Americanization Committee when the troop trains came in; they said the society women on that committee would take precedence over the mothers and sisters in receiving the soldiers.

GOOD SAMARITANS ANSWERED.

You should have heard the way these You should have heard the way these mothers said they answered this woman. After hearing them tell it, there isn't any doubt that the first to receive the soldiers when they come in will be the mothers and sisters, and no organization representatives. For the moment they forgot their concern for those they came to see, in their indignative that they have been also been the concern for those they came to see, in their indignation that some one else would want to get in ahead of them.

And the Good Samaritans! There is one

NEW YORK, June 29.—Health Commissioner Emerson has issued orders to heads of all bureaus to turn every available man over to Dr. Simon Blatteis, of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, to assist him in the fight against the spread of infantile aralysis. Other department activities, nore or less special in character, will be ropped until the epidemic is under conparalysis.

Today there are at least 20 department physicians and a large squad of nurses, sanitary inspectors and sanitary police at work in the infected districts, looking for new cases, supervising the care of cases already reported and enforcing a strice

Several years ago Amies' father received a threatening letter signed "La Mana Perl," or "Italian Black Hand." Death was threatened if money was not paid. The elder Amies turned over the letter to the authorities, and fear is entertained that in retaliation members of the band came to this country and followed the son until a favorable opportunity to kidnap him pre-sented itself.

The kidnapping theory concerning the disappearance of the Schilder girl was accepted by the police after search for the little girl's body in the river had proved fruitless. From investigations, it is believed she was carried away in a boat from the search of the sear Kensington. She told little girl companions that she was going to take a boat ride before she went home. Her disappearance occurred Monday.

Oslinsky has not been seen since April 17. On the morning of that day he left home for school. Two days later he was seen on a farmer's wagon at 3d and South streets, but since then he has dropped out of sight. He is described as being 4 feet 2 inches tall, 90 pounds in weight, of dark complexion, dark hair and gray eyes. He has three scars on one side of his head and another on the left side of his neck.
