

JACK DILLON FINDS FRANK MORAN EASY PREY—GOLF, TENNIS AND SPORTS OF OTHER SORTS

GOOD LITTLE MAN CAN BEAT GOOD BIG MAN; DILLON PROVES IT BY EASY WIN OVER MORAN
Blonde Was 1000-to-1 Shot at Start of Battle, but Odds Reversed Near Close After Hoosier All but Annihilates Opponent

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL
BROOKLYN, June 30.
The main bout of the evening had progressed nine rounds. A big blonde warrior, wearing a startling resemblance to the picture of the vikings of old, staggered around the ring, while a smaller person rained blow after blow on his head, face and body.

body while getting away. In the tenth round Jack landed a hard blow on Moran's eyes and more blood streamed down his face. The big man was nearly blinded when the final bell rang.

Pat Moran came in when the gates were opened, took a seat at a table near the ring and stayed there until the show was over. Murray McGraw also was present and the pair of managers picked up some good stuff which can be used when the pennant race becomes close.

There was a long delay before the final bout was put on and the principals did not appear until nearly 11 o'clock. The delay was caused by an announcement that the moving picture privilege had been sold for $10,000. Moran insisted on getting $4000, and he got it.

Joe Bush, the well-known pitcher for the Athletics, was among those present in the grandstand.
Habit is a curious thing. The quiet inhabitants of Brooklyn were so accustomed to watching the ball games last year from other side of the city that they had to climb on roofs, telegraph poles and trees to take a look at the proceeding last night.

There is no doubt that Moran underestimated his opponent. He entered the ring in very poor condition, with rolls of fat hanging from his neck and a big athletic clubman about to take some exercise about spending the winter in an easy chair. He started out with a quizzical expression and a grin and grinned rather sheepishly, as if he did not relish the job of chastising that little kid who had the nerve to challenge him to physical combat.

But Francis Charles was all wrong. He had things his own way for three rounds and almost put Moran down, but after that he just trailed along, taking the blooze blooze stuff on the chin, head and every other place, and weathered the storm only because of his ability to assimilate punishment.

When the men entered the ring and removed their robes, it was apparent that the stories of Moran's wonderful condition and his work in great outdoor were pure bunk. Frank's white, muscular body with nothing that even resembled sunburn on it, and he seemed fat and flabby. Dillon, on the other hand, was brown as a berry, and appeared to be in the very best of condition.

Moran's pasty white skin had a pale and corpse look under the curious glare of the green lights used for moving-picture purposes, and he looked as if he were about to drop when the blood began to flow from his nose and mouth. Dillon landed those cruel cutting blows which chopped the big man's features as if he were made of wax.

Moran started out with all of the confidence in the world and bullied the little man for three rounds. Frank was the favorite with the crowd, and the 16,000 persons who crowded the arena into the ball park were on their feet shouting for a knockout. In the third round Moran backed Dillon to the ropes, landed several hard rights to the head and body, and the smaller man ready to take a count. He drew back his terrible right fist, which flattened Jim Coffey twice, shot it home with terrific force and wondered how Dillon could stand up under it.

Near the end of the session and when the spectators were about to hurry for the exits, Dillon came to life. He slid away from that fat, pasty body and then charged forward, head down, and with a crouch, ward with lightning rapidity, every blow landing smack on Frank's face. He varied his attack with crushing wallops to the body and was fighting hand and foot. This was the turning point of the battle. Moran discovered that he didn't have a soft job on his hands and that bored look vanished. He tried hard to land his right smash to the head but Dillon with a crouch similar to that used by Jeffries, which protected the lower portion of his face, and Frank's blows glanced off Jack's shoulder without doing any damage.

In the fifth round Dillon began to show his superiority. The boxers fell into a clinch and Moran dropped his head on Jack's shoulder. His face was exposed underneath and the bear cut drove a dozen uppercuts against that surface. When they were separated, Moran's face was covered with blood, the result of the blows landed on the nose and mouth.

It was the same in the following rounds, with Dillon squirming out of danger and shooting lefts and rights to the head and

EVANS SETS TWO NEW RECORDS IN NATIONAL EVENT

Western Champion Tops Field for Open Golf Laurels—Reid Second
MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., June 30.—Breaking two course records, Charles Evans, Jr., Western amateur champion, yesterday recorded 139 strokes for the first 36 holes of the national open golf championship, and led the field of 64 by three strokes. Wilfrid Reid, of Wilmington, Del., was second with 142.

FINAL ROUNDS ON TODAY

Evans started at a fast pace in the morning, breaking the Minnikahda course record for the first nine holes with 32 strokes. He had some hard luck on the return journey, but finished the morning round with 70, equaling the course record, as did Reid. In the afternoon Evans took 33 for the outward trip, but came home in a brilliant 33, setting a new record of 69 for the 18 holes and adding another to his long list of records. Two years ago, at the Midlothian Club, Chicago, Evans came from behind to win the title. He won today with 149 strokes and tied with five others for 13th place.

J. S. Worthington, the only English competitor, was far down in the list at the end of today's play, as were the other amateurs, except Evans. Reid registered a 76 in the morning and had 33 strokes for the first nine holes in the afternoon. Then he started putting badly and required 39 for the second nine.

James M. Barnes, of Philadelphia, and Bob Peebles, of Kansas City, were tied for the first nine holes in the afternoon. Barnes started putting badly and required 74 in the afternoon, while Peebles had a 75 and a 72.

Bob MacDonald, of Buffalo, and George Sargent, of the Interlachen Club, of Springfield, were tied for 75 and 71 and MacDonald's totals were 74 and 72.

Tom McNamara, Gilbert Nicholls, Fred McLeod, "Abe" Foster and several other stars landed below tenth place.

Today 60 players will compete in the final championship rounds.

OPEN AIR BOUTS AT CAMBRIA; PROGRAM AT LINCOLN TONIGHT

Borrell vs. Brusso and Carey vs. Welsh Respective Feature Bout
Joe Borrell, middleweight, will not meet Jack McCarron at Allentown, as scheduled for the morning of July 4, because of a financial reference. Tonight the Philadelphia will pair off with Noah Brusso, the French-Canadian, in the star scrap of the open-air Cambria Club.

The Lincoln Club, of West Philadelphia, also has a program arranged for this evening. Joe Welsh and Tommy Carey will meet in the wind-up, and it will be a set-to between a fighter and boxer. Carey has worked faithfully for the contest.

Frelon numbers at the Cambria follow: Joe Koons vs. Jack McCloskey, See-saw Kelly vs. Joe Wagner, Al Werner vs. Lew Whalen and Leo Flynn vs. Frankie Lynch. Charley Dalley and Johnny Lincoln will meet in the Lincoln's semi, while in the other numbers Johnny Kelly takes on Frankie Williams, Joe Gavin faces Bobby Lincoln and Al Edwards opposes Tom Martin.

Johnny O'Leary's match with Shamus O'Brien at Rochester last Monday night was not staged because of a misunderstanding between the latter and the promoters. O'Leary will show in a 10-round bout with Shamus O'Brien, and he will come to Philadelphia for a short vacation.

George (Kid) Alberts, of Reading, will visit Philadelphia next Monday night and enter the bout of the Derby Casino and his boxer opponent, "Big" Taylor. Taylor has arranged to fight Alberts at the Derby Casino. Taylor is a New York City fighter and is expected to be in Philadelphia to fight on July 4.

Jack Harris, former boxer and instructor at the Star Garden Park, is expected to be in Philadelphia to fight on July 4. He is expected to be in Philadelphia to fight on July 4.

A busy summer campaign has been mapped out for Willie Brown, New York, tonight, he will fight Frankie Foster and Andy Brandt. Frankie Foster is expected to be in Philadelphia to fight on July 4.

Willis Hanson and Al Nelson will meet in the main six-up of a three-hour program at the Midlothian Club, Chicago, on Saturday night. Hanson is expected to be in Philadelphia to fight on July 4.

Three special bouts between Al Smith and Mike Russell were arranged for the Derby Casino and the Ace of Spades and Joe Sawe, in addition to a variety of other attractions. The Derby Casino will feature the boxing part of the program at the Derby Casino.
