She Wonders If the Shark Scare Will Penetrate Cape May and Atlantic City—Amusing Incidents in Daily Life Help to Bear the Heat

WITH the presence of the sharks in the ocean the scare for bathing is a bit abated, though even the most timid are venturing in again because of the excessive heat. At Cape May and Atlantic City the danger does not seem to be as great, as the water is comparatively shallow and there is no need to go far out in order to get a good bath. At Beach Haven and Bay Head, where one goes straight into deep water, there are not very many in the surf these days, though in a few weeks the scare will probably be over and we will all go on as if there had never been any sharks except those persons who are closely connected with the victims of these horrible catastrophes.

Cape May expects to hold a large swimming meet at the Corinthian Yacht Club this afternoon for the women only, and every one has been preparing all week for the exhibition. The Yacht Club is really a most delightful spot on a hot night. They have music every evening and the porch is inclosed with netting, so that the breezes enter, but the mosquitoes do not. The Joe Norries have gone down to the New Stockton Villa, which, by the way, is the name of the young hotel which Mrs. Sussex Davis, in other words Sadie Cannel that was, has opened this year. Mrs. Henry Biddle, of Riverton, has gone there, too, and the Myers Patters. And the last person I hear is going down is Mrs. Hollinshead Taylor.

When I went on to New York recently I was struck with the way in which the baggage is handled on the Pullman cars. Just before we reached the city all the bags were gathered up by the porters, and when I reached the platform I found the usual motley crowd of people gathered about the luggage, and there was no way to prove which was whose. Fortunately, I had a very distinctive kind of suitcase, so there was no mix up for me, but listen my dear, to the gay little tale I have to impart of what befell a certain well-known and attractive bachelor doctor of this Quaker City on a trip he took to that metropolis a fortnight or so ago. He was going over to New York for an important dinner and had his dress suit in his bag, also pumps and a certain article of clothing which comes in pale blue and has two portions to its make up. Well, the porter acted as usual, and when Doctor W went on the platform he found his bag, which he recognized by the peculiar way in which it was fastened. He had not gone more than 50 feet when a strange dog came to his mind, and with the thought "I had better make sure this is mine because I cannot afford to be late for this dinner, our hero placed the bag on the ground and stooping over undid one side. Sure enough there were his light blue articles of apparel neatly folded on top of his slippers, so without more ado he went on his way. Arrived at the hotel he opened the bag to don his dress clothes, and lo! and behold, instead of "his" blue pajamas he had "her" blue nightgown. Such is the fate of man who only looks to color and not to style. The rest of the story was not so funny, however, for he had great difficulty in making the officials pay attention to his story when he caught up the railroad. They evidently thought and asked him, "How many diamonds do you lose?" However, finally it sank through, but not in time to locate the dress suit for the dinner. It only reached the hotel at 11 o'clock, and, of course, he had to go to his dinner minus dress clothes. But it makes such a good story, and life is full of good stories if one only knows how to find them and how to enjoy them, even if they are at one's own expense! NANCY WYNNE.

SUCCESSFUL TOMBOLA AMONG WEEK'S CHARITABLE EVENTS

Italian Fair Held on Thursday in Chelsea Was Largely Attended—Pertinent News From Other Resorts Along the Jersey Coast

THE Children's Seashore Home was thronged with cottagers and visitors on Thursday afternoon, when the annual tombola, or Italian fair, was held, under the direction of Mrs. William H. Bennett, for the purpose of raising money to endow a ward to be named after one of the children's characters in Charles Dickens. Vessela's Orchestra played on the upper veranda during the early part of the afternoon, after which the orchestra from the Chelsea rendered several selections, much to the delight of the poor little cripples and invalid children, to whom a few days by the sea means a new life. Refreshments were decorated with bowls of summer blooms and tea and lemonade were served in the reception room. Assisting Mrs. Bennett were Mrs. Edward J. Posten, Mrs. J. Benton Foster, Mrs. S. Bartram Richardson, Mrs. Townsend, Mrs. Frederick Meade Russell, Miss Louise Rustis, the Countess Crombrughe, Mrs. J. Harrison Smith, Mrs. John W.
