good a time as those who rush off at the first sign of heat. The other evening a crowd of us dined on one of the roof gardens after an exceedingly hot day, and though a terrific thunder and lightning storm was going on during most of the evening, even the most nervous of the party forgot fears in the delightful air and pleasant surroundings. By the way, my wee bird friend tells me she lunched at the Bellevue-Stratford one day last week, and nearly lost an eye watching a certain gay young widow who was there with several men. During luncheon she arose and went over to speak to some friends at another table. In the meantime, says the wee bird, her companions grew restless and one joined her and took her by the arm urging her to come back. She continued to talk, however, and so he dropped her arm, but his arm just slid naturally about her waist, and there they stood talking earnestly to their friends while every eye on the roof garden was strained, indeed, not knowing what would happen next. What did happen was that

It is astonishing how the craze for golf grows. I was highly amused at the remarks I heard one man make to another as they were riding in from one of the golf clubs which is a most popular spot these warm days. One had just paid his first visit to the place, and was highly pleased with all he saw. "But," said he, "it strikes me pretty funny how the course winds in and out back to the clubhouse about every three holes. There seems to be plenty of room for more extended links, and yet you find yourself back near the start every now and again. However," he added," it's very refreshing to be able to stop in the clubhouse every once in so often, you know." I wonder what he meant; don't you?

she returned to her seat, and after much carving proceeded to eat some chicken.

The national polo tournament began yesterday at the Point Judith Country Club, in Narragansett, and that, together with the tennis tournament, which is also on this week, will make the famous clubhouse more popular than ever. So many Philadelphians go to Narragansett every year one feels at home right away when one goes there, and really sometimes one wonders if there are many more beautiful spots than the great rocks which stretch way out into the bay and form those lovely natural aquariums.

Hannah Randolph and her father and brother are at their villa there as usual, but Narragansett will miss the Alfred Norrises this year, for they have taken a house in Newport. The Fells are at Narragansett, however, and the Phil Stevensons, whose marriage has turned out so happily. Of course, the John Norrises are there, and Lisa is having the time of her young life. Lisa has always had a good time, for that matter, but when one has been out one winter and comes to one's first summer out, the times seem to get even better, at least so the one-year girls tell me.
