recaptured from the British by the Germans, the War Office announced today. Longueval, which was captured by the British at heavy cost of life in a resumption of the great Allied offensive, was stormed and retaken by the Germans in heavy fighting last night. With the capture of Delville wood it marks the greatest success for the Germans in their counter-attacks on the British front since the Allied offensive began. By recapturing Longueval, the Germans not only hold up the British advance toward Bapaume over the highway from Bray, but check any further advance by the French north of the Somme

GENERAL HAIG ADMITS LOSS OF PARTS OF DELVILLE WOOD AND LONGUEVAL

LONDON, July 19. The Germans dented the British line last night in their most successful counter-attack since the great Allied offensive began. The recapture of the village of Longueval, at the intersection of two highways, seven miles south of Bapaume, and of Delville wood was claimed in an official statement issued by the German War Office this afternoon.

An official report from General Haig admitted the Germans had obtained a footing in northern outskirts of Longueval and had recaptured part of Delville wood., The battle is continuing, General Haig, reported, and has become very violent.

The Germans hurled large forces against the British right wing at about dusk, after an intense bombardment of Longueval village and the Delville wood. As the German guns lifted thick masses of German infantrymen advanced to the attack. They swarmed forward in the face of sheeted machine-gun and rifle fire, and according to the British official report suffered very heavy losses. Further east repeated German attacks against the Waterlot farm were repulsed. Thus far the new battle north of the Somme is being confined largely to the British right wing. The German official statement claimed the repulse of attempts by the British left to draw closer to the village of Posteres and also announced the defeat of French attacks southwest of Pe-

THE WEATHER

Many of us are selfish without knowing. It is true that often we do things for others when actuated only by a desire to shine in a philanthropic limelight. And sometimes it happens that the favor which we bestow on one causes unhappiness to others. Right in our midst at the present time several persons in officialdom have been temporarily thrown out of employment. The question has been raised generally in this neighborhood "Were they sacrificed" to give favorite friends jobs? Let us hope not. It is very difficult to please nearly two million persons all at the same time. But it seems that just about two years ago there was no such revolution going on in our midst. Perhaps it was due to the fact that there was no cause for it. Yes, it was a very pleasant menth of July, despite the normal heat.

PETROGRAD, July 19. For the first time since the Russian re treat from the Carpathians more than a year ago Russian forces are again ham mering at the Carpathian mountain passes barring the way into Hungary.

On a 60-mile front, extending from the Jablonitza pass in a southeasterly direction to near Kirlibaba, Russian and Austrian detachments are in constant clash. The main Russian army is rapidly draw

The Austrian line has been completely broken in the Delatin section,

New battles are developing in Volhynia and Galicia, where the Russians are advancing with inexorable steadiness against their two main objectives-Lemberg and the Hungarian plains. All of the German reserves that can be spared from the Russian front are being sent into Galicia in an effort to save Lemberg. A new engagement has opened along the Lipa River, where the Germans retired from their positions southwest of Lutak before the powerful thrust of General Kaledines' forces. drew up directly under the chute and pulled the lever, releasing the sand Davis and his companions were in the bin, which contained about 198 tons of sand Davis was standing in the centre of the bin and was the first to go down when Washman pulled the lever below.

The other four men were standing on the sides of the bin. Brannan and Matthieu were also completely submerged, but Snyder and Swiggert managed to stop themselves as the sand reached their shoulders. Workmen extricated them and then they rescued Brannan and Matthieu. When Davis was found he was dead.

Mrs. Ashbridge was summoned at 10:45 a. m. She came into a crowded courtroom from a side alcove; she wore no hat and was neatly but inexpensively dressed in a white shirtwaist and a dark skirt, but with extremely modish boots. Besides her wedding ring she wore two pieces of jewelry, a ring with a ruby stone and a plain gold barpin.

She was not asked to testify, and had no counsel to direct her. The proceedings were wholly in the hands of the Recorder and the Presecutor, who was in this case A. De Unger.

No friends were with her, not even her children. Her husband, of course, was back in the jail he escaped from when he killed the turnkey and severely wounded Keeper Withal, though, the atmosphere of the courtroom was decidedly sympathetic. The spectators were made up of the generally
