Tennis at Narragansett Attracts Many Philadelphians. Interesting Bits of News and Matters About Persons One Knows

THE great thing this week is the ten-I nis tournament at the Paint Judith Club, Narragansett Pier, which is followed each day by tea. Great interest settled about the playing of the two Japanese men, Kumauga and Mikami, and Craig Biddle, who goes over from Newport to play in this national affair.

The Craig Biddles were the guests of the John Fells for lunch on Tuesday, and to see the people on the lawns of the clubhouse at tea in the afternoon one would never believe it was Narragansett, it was so like our Country Club or the Philadelphia Cricket Club, where tennis matches are so often held. The Archie Thomsons were there and beautiful May Hobson Brown, and her sister Kitty Penn-Smith, Lisa Norris, the Philip Randolphs senior and junior, Emlyn Randolph and Mrs. Ben Chew, who was Anne Thompson and is a great favorite in the married set. Then, of course, Bessie Samuel and Mrs. Campbell Madeira, who has been visiting her, appeared on the lawn; but Bessie and Mrs. Madeira have come down here for a few days, I understand, so they did not appear yesterday. Of course Mrs. Charles Randolph Snowden is an ardent attendant. She certainly is one atunning woman, and especially is she stunning in tailored costumes. I do not know any woman who looks as well in sports clothes. The night the First City Troop went through on its way to El Paso she was at the B. and O. with her mother to give packages of small comforts to Brother Bill, and she had on a brown sports suit, tailored waist with a stiff collar and a sports hat of rather deep tan, and believe me, she was "some good looker." To return to Narragansett, Miss Fanny Sinnickson and the Caryl Robertses were other people from our own home town who were enjoying the tennis and tea.

"How shall we get to New England without passing through New York?" is the question of the day among those who have intended to go to those resorts for the summer, so serious is the fright about infantile paralysis, which has increased so much in New York this month. The railroads have about decided to come to the rescue, and the Federal Express is to be put on again to carry Philadelphlans and Baltimoreans and Washingtonians up to New England far out of reach of peril for the little ones, it is hoped. The Isaac Starrs, I understand, have given up their trip to Watch Hill, owing to the New York epidemic, and quite a number of others have about decided to stay home, while many will go by steamer from Philadelphia to Boston.

I was greatly interested lately to hear news of Eddie Toland, who has returned again to the front and is working with the Ambulance in Paris. In a letter written quite recently he tells a most delightful bit about his trip over. It appears Calve was on the same steamer returning to France and he was able to assist her on several occasions when benefits and such were the order of the day on board. Well, when they were about to land the great prima donna dispatched him down to his cabin to don his Red Cross uniform, and when he returned she led him to the side of the ship and as they were about to land bade him join her in singing the "Marseillaise." It was a most wonderful thing, he said. The people on the dock and those on board ship sto like statues, with the tears pouring down their cheeks, so great is the en thusiasm of France, especially in these days when victory seems to be in sight. Poor men, fighting each other, killing, wounding, maiming, and for what? I wonder if we will ever know? There is just this to be said: not many of those who do the fighting are responsible for it. May the end be soon!

Young Toland is much impressed by the entirely different atmosphere in Paris now as compared to when he was there at the beginning of the war, or rather near the beginning in 1914. He says there are very many more men to be seen and the city is no longer under the gloom and darkness of the first year of war. The French are such plucky souls, it would be hard indeed to down them perma-NANCY WYNNE. nently.

WILDWOOD, July 20. Dizzy departures in styles among both bathers and promenaders are furnished daily in great abundance along the beach ront. Flower designs on the crowns of siquant bathing caps worn by the fair surf levotees are among the most notable of these innovations. Large white daisles, suf-frage-hued sunflowers and flaming peonies flaunt their hues from the heads of the mermaids, and when, as often happens, a con-siderable number of bathers wearing this style of headgear are brought together, the effect produced is that of a flower garden over which the breakers are swirling in cheerful abandon. On their nether extremities are to be discerned natty half hose also running to yellow and bright crimson or greens as the case might be. The "back to nature" tendency in leg apparel, noticeable at the beginning of the season is becoming more pronounced as the season progresses. Miss Edna Moyer and Miss Ida Haug-stoffer, of Centre Square, Pa., are at the Hotel Derbyshire.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Blumblum, Miss Bertha Blumblum and Mr. George Sheer are spending their vacation at the Jones cottage on East Andrew avenue.
