

CAMERA NEWS-GATHERERS DISCOVER PERSONS OF PROMINENCE IN UNFAMILIAR FIELDS

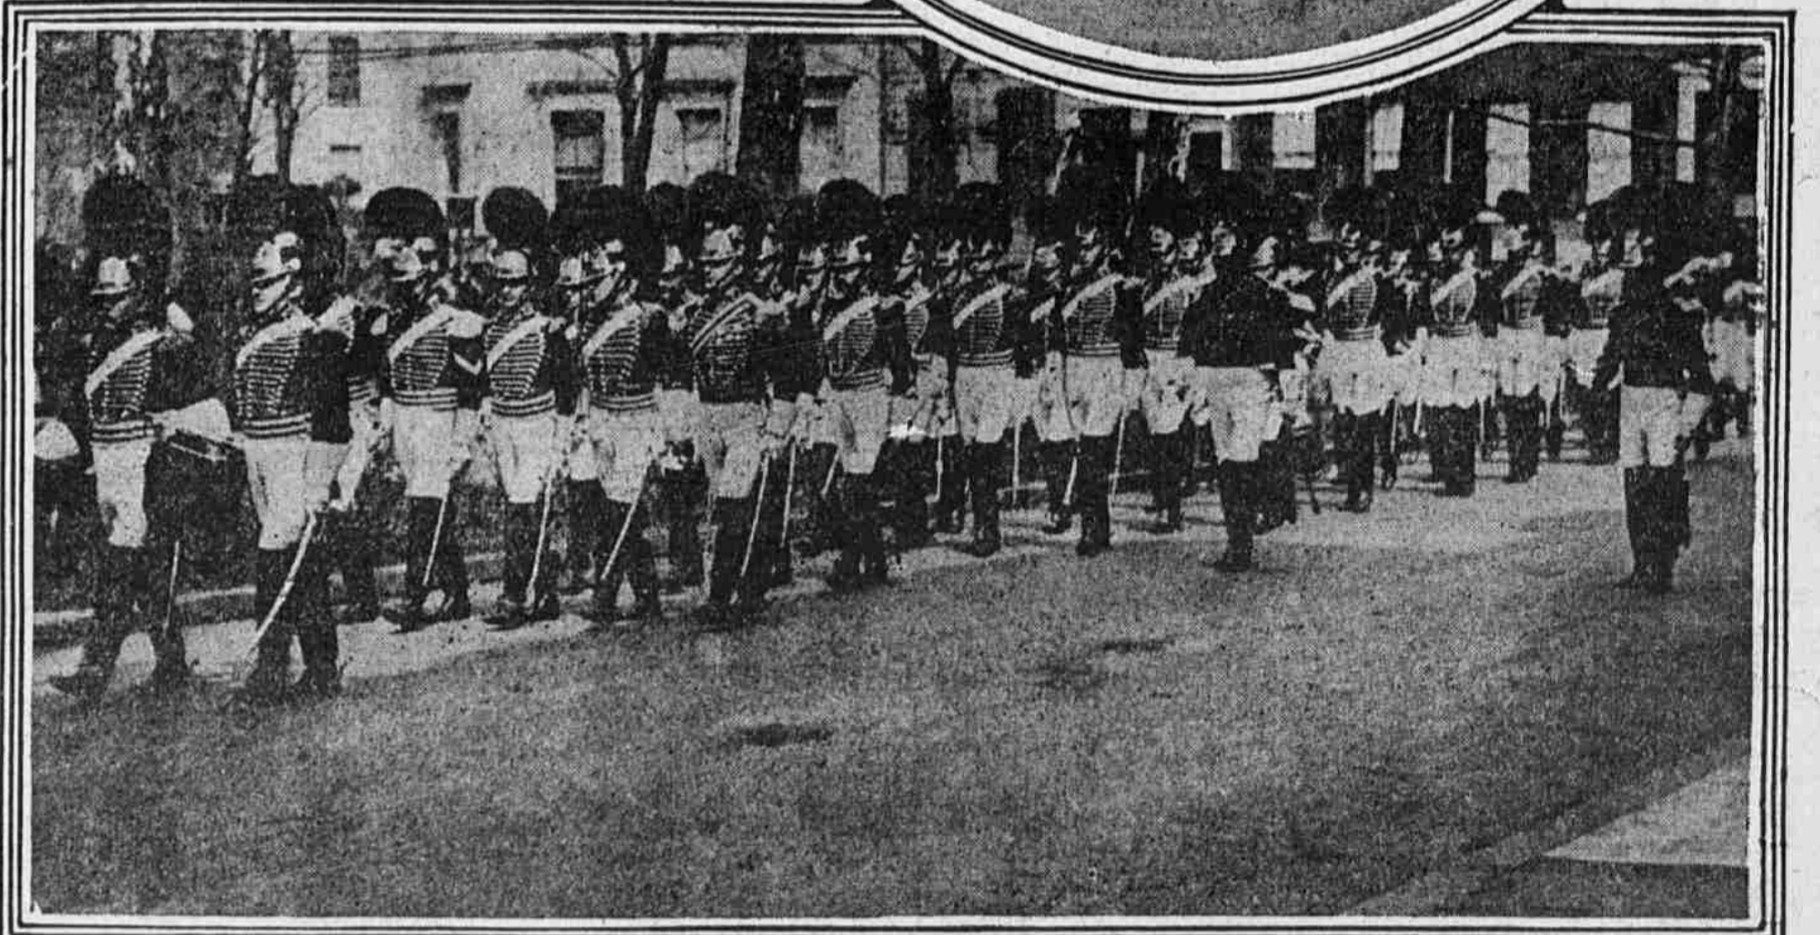

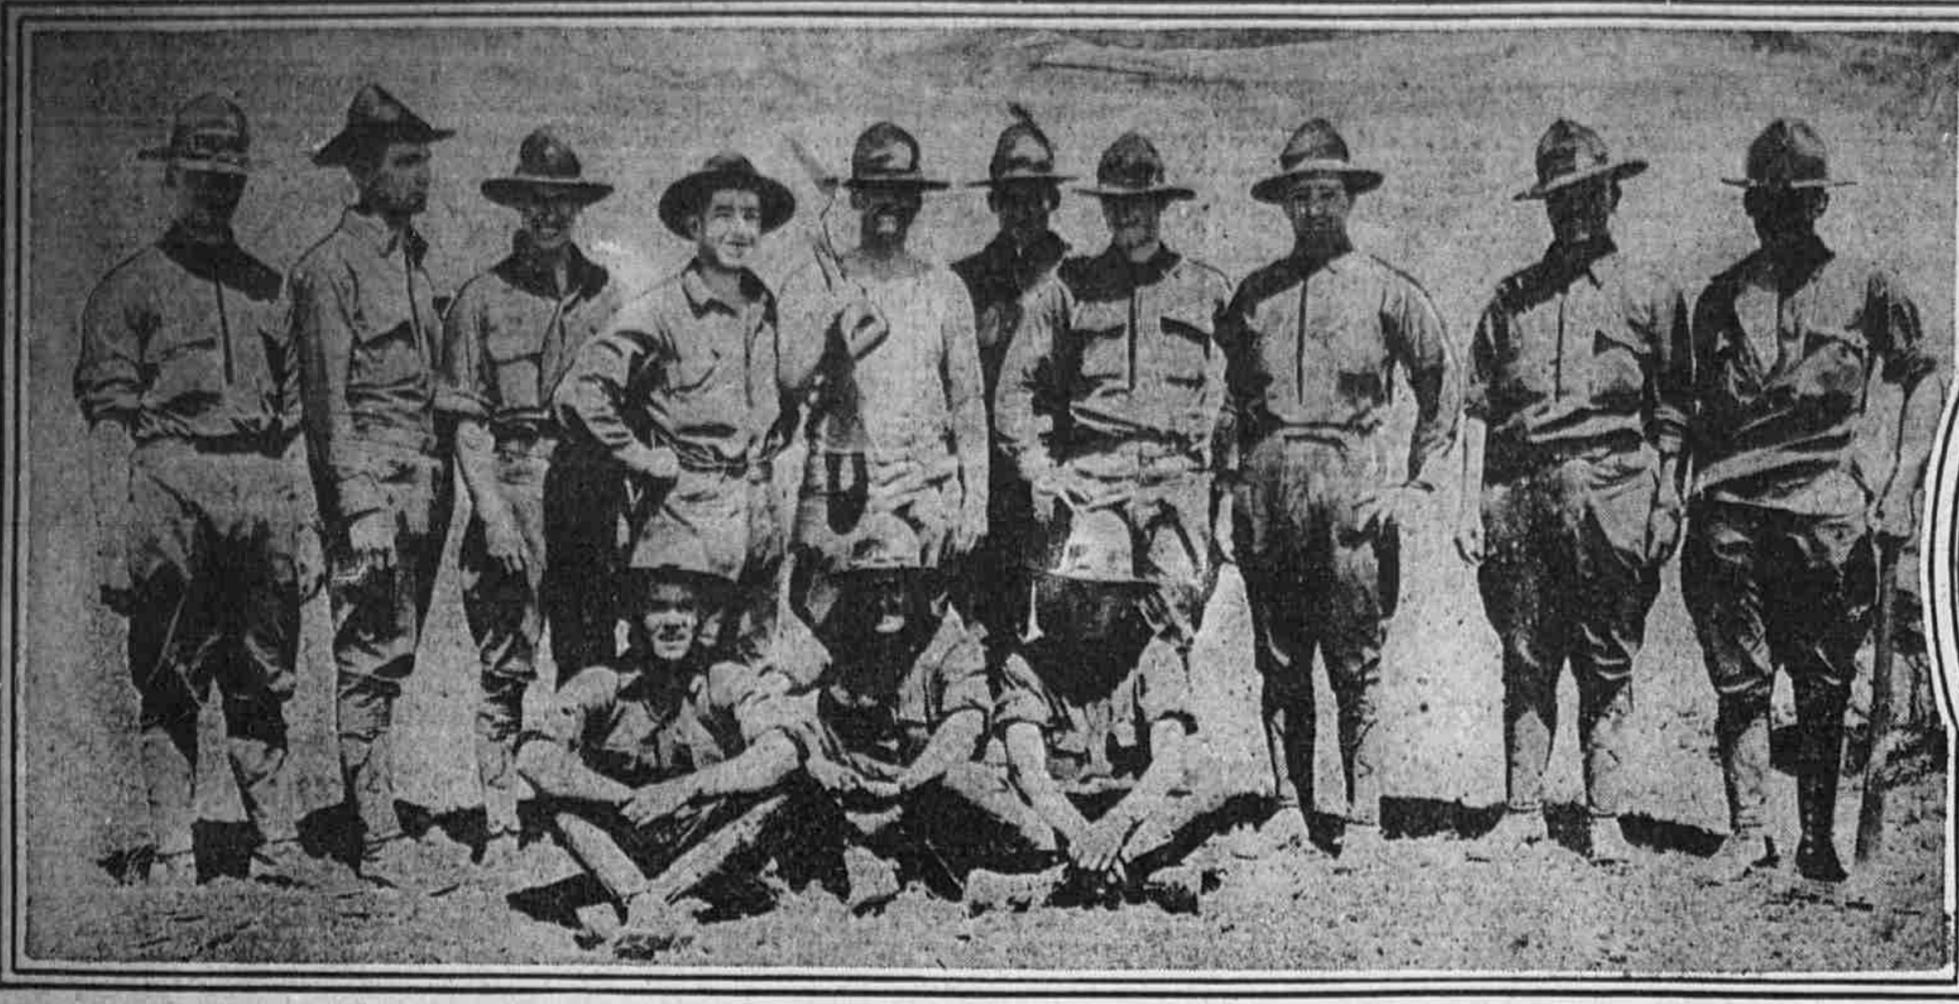

Photo by Underwood & Underwood

NOW TROUBLING THE WATERS OF LITIGATION
Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean are enjoying themselves in the water. Mr. McLean, as son and heir of John R. McLean, has begun a legal battle in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia to prevent production in court of private correspondence of his father.

Photos by EVENING LEDGER Staff Photographer.

THE DAPPER CITY TROOPERS AT WORK AND AT PLAY PRESENT STRONG CONTRAST
Just by way of versatility these members of the First City Troop are demonstrating in Texas that their abilities are not confined to the ballroom or parade ground. Shown here in the upper left as the EVENING LEDGER Staff Photographer snapped them are, reading from left to right, John C. Groome, Jr., Leonard Kent, P. P. Chrystie, Charles H. Wetter, Lincoln Godfrey, Alexander D. Thayer, George Brooke, 3d, George Gordon Meade, C. N. Taylor, W. N. Davis, Schofield Andrews, Edward Crozer Page and Morris D. Stroud. They may be a bit hard to recognize at first, but their Philadelphia friends will speedily identify the two diggers in upper right as Alexander Thayer and Newbold Taylor, of Captain McFadden's historic command now on the border. In showy full-dress uniforms in the lower picture, the City Troop certainly does furnish a contrast to active service regalia, but it is equally at home on Chestnut street or down in sun-baked Texas.

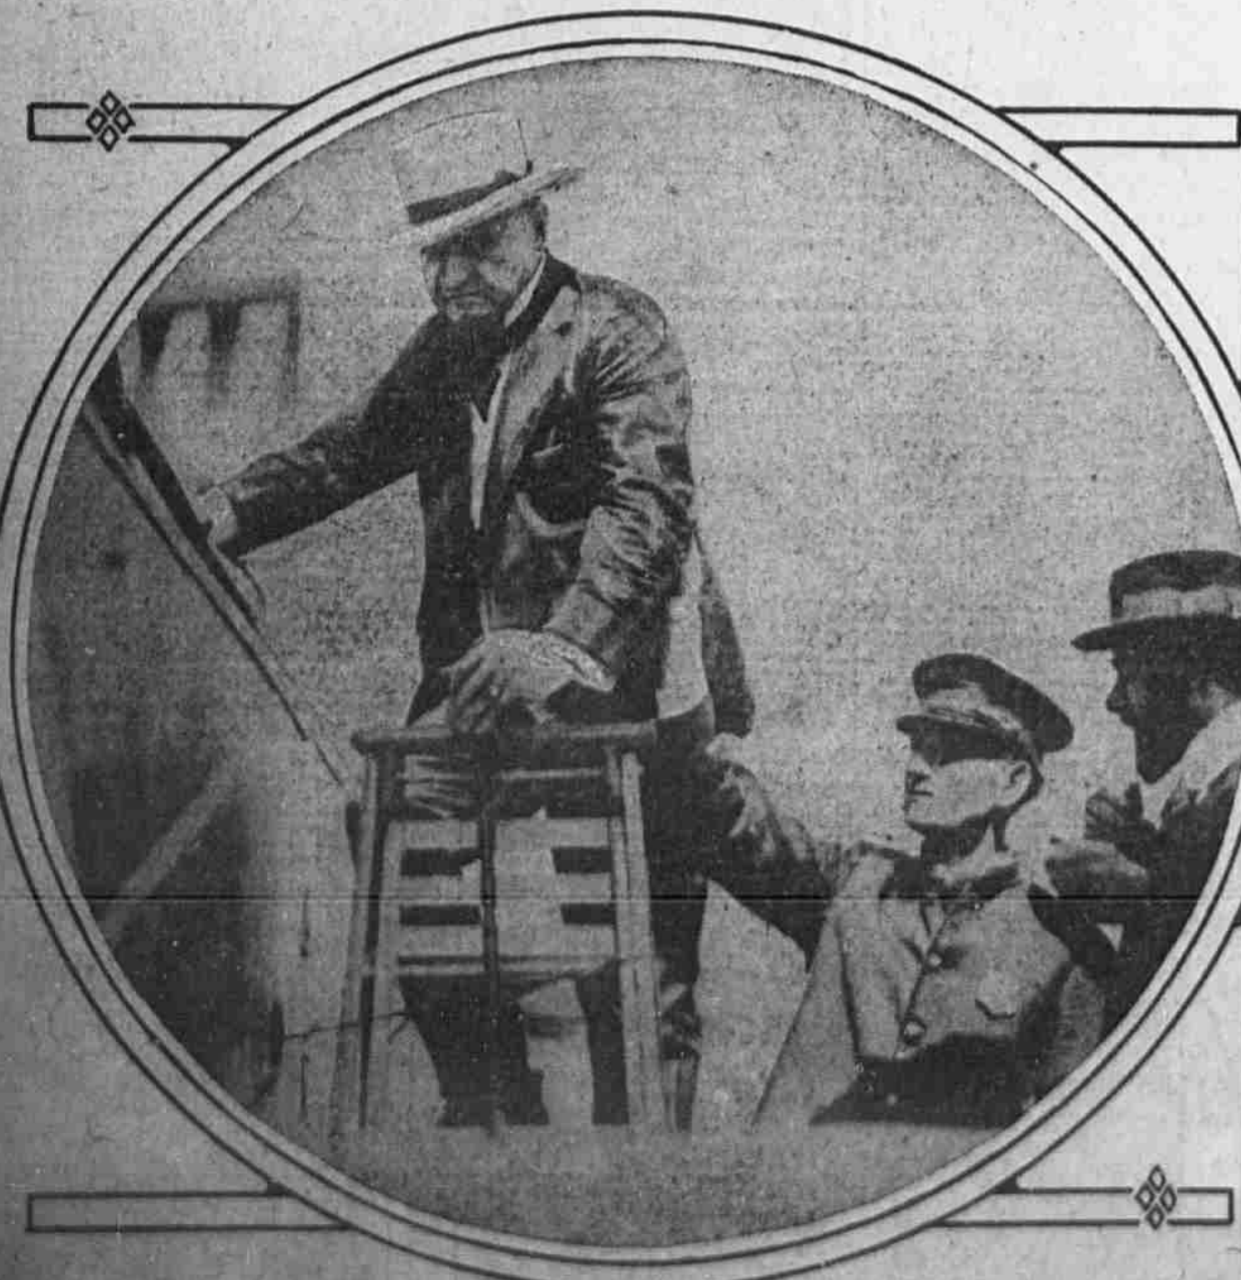

Photo by Harris & Ewing

"FITCHFORE BEN" IN A NEW ROLE
The South Carolina Senator lacks some of his former fiery dash and impetuosity, but his health permits him to poke about in quest of information. Here he is exploring one of the aeroplanes which the National Aerial Coast Patrol Commission placed near the Senate Office Building in Washington.

Photo by International Film Service

KING GEORGE REVIEWING CANADIAN HIGHLANDERS
The British sovereign is inspecting a regiment of his overseas troops as they pass before him, just prior to the launching of the Allies' "big push" in France.