NANCY WYNNE CHATS ABOUT THINGS WHICH INTEREST MANY

Several Affairs Given at the Various Resorts Tonight for Benefit of Soldiers-Officers of the Navy Yard Hold Dance on Ship

BOTH Atlantic City and Spring Lake is visiting her aunt. Mrs. Robert Sayre Broadhead, of Strafford.

two large affairs are to be given at these popular resorts. At the former a dance will be given under the auspices of the Soldiers' Ald Committee and for the benefit of that association. Most of the cottagers and guests at the various hotels are greatly interested in the ball and a number of dinners will be given before the dancing starts. Mr. Agnew Dice, president of the Reading Railway, and his wife will be hosts at a large supper at the Shelburne after the affair. The event scheduled for Spring Lake is a Colonial ball; this is given by the management of the Sussex and Essex Hotel, and the guests will wear Colonial costumes, so it is well assured that, as a spectacular affair alone, it will be a succenn.

But here at home, even if it is July and late in the month at that, the remaining officers at League Island have planned to give a dance tonight on board the Connecticut, and many of the stay-at-homes are looking forward to this evening with great pleasure. After quite a lull in the dancing craze, with the exception, of course, of the roof gardens, every one seems ready to take it up again with renewed vigor and pleasure.

Another pastime for those who stay at home or near the city is the swimming craze, which "cycle" seems to have struck young and old all at once, and Asher's, Adam's, the Armory and numerous other pools are daily filled with human fish, who, adorned "a la Annette Kellerman," disport themselves gaily in the limpid waters. Such sounds as "One. two, thureee!" in stentorian tones, may be heard all through the day, as one passes by, and one woman teacher insists on yelling to her pupils, "Lay still." Perhaps she does not approve of lying, like George W. of old. I think the expressions on the faces of those who are just learning to swim or float is a perfect screame They either puff out their cheeks or hold their mouths wide open, as if by swallowing quarts of water they might learn. This is a time when avoirdupois is a blessing for the weighty, strange to say, float lightly on the water's top, while their skinny sisters have to make violent efforts to keep up. The latest news from our troops at the border is not as happy as it might be; it appears they have neither enough clothes nor drinking water, and after all one can do with very little clothes, whereas water is a real necessity. One enterprising mother of a border boy was heard to say she thought she would forward some crates of bottled water, but that does not seem exactly practical, as by the time the water reaches El Paso the men may have moved on. Speaking of persons doing with few clothes, I read a very funny story in a current paper this week about a Methodist minister, who asserted from his pulpit, apropos of the short skirts and open necks, "Eve, it is true, did not realize that she was not dressed until she ate the apple, and I rather wish that some of the young women in my congregation would eat an apple." Roses in profusion were flung into the carriages. The soldiers stuck them at ridiculous angles into their helmets, behind their ears and very often among the bandages. I have seldom seen such smil-ing bravery as those boys showed.

"Hi, where's my Lizzie?" called out an ilderly man who was lying in a motorcar with his knees strapped out on a temporary stretcher.

"Here, John, here !" cried an excited voice from the crowd, and "Lizzie" darted for-ward. She was a large, stout woman in a "bugled" bonnet, but in a trice she had whiaked the door of that slowly moving automobile open and was beside her John, overing his unshaven face with kisses.

"Three cheers for Lizzie !" cried the crowd. And Lizzle graciously waved her hand as though she and her wounded hus-band were royalty in state procession.

Motor after motor and carriage after about after motor and carriage after carriage went slowly past. Part of the toll of the great offensive was before us now. But though they were pale and weary from their cross-Channel journey, a great optimism shone on the faces of those wounded men. "We captured the first-line German trenches all along our line!" called out the box. "We've taken hundreds and out the boy. "We've taken hundreds and "The Red Cross chaps found me lying under a heap of dead." continued the first; "some were British and some were German. It's a hard matter to pick out the wounded from the dead, but I managed to get an arm loose and signaled to the bearers." A pale-faced boy, who was lying on a stretcher close beside a wagon, told me his leg had been blown off at La Bolselle, and he had hain out on the battisneld for 30 hours.
