SEWING ADVICE-READERS' CORRESPONDENCE-MARION HARLAND-M'LISS COMMENT

MEN ARE SLAVES TO WOMEN, CORRESPONDENT TELLS M'LISS

He Knocks the Woman's Rights Movement and Declares That He and His Brothers Are in Need of Emancipation

CECIL MONTAGUE loves the ladies, he but I defy you-real terrible like-to tells me in the following letter. I show me that the women ever minded have a mental picture of Cecil demonstrating his love. Eons ago he would which, today, in order to have some have approached the damsel of his choice and bashed her over the head with his into romances. Of course, the man might club while murmuring of bellowing fervently. "I love you."

Civilization has worked a change in Cecil, as it has in women. Law and the ady herself would make it dangerous for n to pursue such tactics. So he bashes her with pen and ink, or typewriting, to be exact. Writes he to me:

"Dear M'Lies-After giving your daily ffusions mature deliberation. I have coneluded that you are suffering from the same philosophic disorder as are nearly all women in this modern, peculiar age, While not particularly morbid about it, you evidently believe that something must be done to relieve woman from her terrible existence. You are right, undoubtedly -that much I concede from this safe distance, but I am very sure we would quarrel vociferously concerning the quality of that terrible existence.

You are inoculated with that theory which loudly demands the emancipation of women and credits men with being base creatures, exploitive as a sex and totally lacking in the 'finer sensibilities.' But you are wrong-absolutely, emphatfeally and unequivocally. The women as a sex, instead, are base, and in support of that argument I present history. The women, also, rather than the men, are lacking in ideals and in support of that argument I present women themselvesthe women of this age, who, with far more so-called liberty than they had in any other age, have so stulfified themselves that they support newspaper women's pages (I mean the women's pages of newspapers), and the awful sex literature that not even yet has reached the zenith of its might. And the fashions, the artificial beauty and the refined viciousness of mixed conversation! Such are the omen whom the prophets of equal rights are calling to.

"It was our old friend Tolstoy-an authority upon the subject, if you remember-who said that women do not need to be emancipated from men as much as men need emancipation from women; and I add that what we need in this age is not a new type of woman, because the new type is horrible, but we do need a new type of man!

"We men are the ones who need to be liberated from the effeminacy that has bured us from the fight for our convictions. We are living in a woman's age, when cant and deceit run riot. There is nothing manly about our literature, our drama, amusements-they are all efspired and made holy by the whisperings of war brides and neurotic uplifters- have proved that many men do not have the spirit of the Crusaders has fled, and men now, like old women, sit down and for "going that way." wait to be courted by the highest bidder, which has always been a woman's way.

stave She may have been highly an exploitation of her womanhood for "what she could get out of it"; but she never has been oppressed because she human race has been economically exploited since the first seeds of organized society began to sprout, but this form of exploitation knows no sex. It takes hold of men just as firmly as it does of women, with this differencevery often go that way.

shielded her from the fight and risked in war. Always the women were saved, linist" or men's rights movement. possibly-no, actually-for other men, the change, except in isolated cases, thing to inspire us, we have converted have been gruff sometimes. But he was always the meal ticket, and used as such -don't forget that! And that's what counts if you're talking about slavery. Besides, men were not gruff only to their women-they were gruff to other men (even murdered them).

"Yes, sir, we men need liberation-not you women. We need to get away from supplying women with all the necessities and luxuries of life for no other reward than a smile and a kiss that may be of the 'Judasses' kind. "The woman's rights movement is one for which I can feel only the greatest contempt, because it is an accentuated or aggravated sex-groping affair; but that movement, what its name is, that en courages woman to seek her own daily bread in an honest fashion, disdaining tricks of the feminine trade, is one which appeals to me. At least the latter shows that some women are growing tired of owning slaves.

"That's what man is-a slave. Go to a clubhouse, go to any gathering ex clusively of men, and what is the chief topic of conversation? War? Not so that you can notice it. Business? Not out of business hours, and very often during business hours. 'Tis woman, morning, noon and night, while they are awake and while they are seleep. With their eyes open daytimes they watch her on the streets; asleep at night, they dream of her. They're nuts.

"The woman knows the man is her slave-although the poor dub himself de nies it. For a sparkling eye men will go through hellfire. The only 'right' a woman is in need of is the right to cease her shameless oppression, her shameless exploitation. As it is now she has noth ing but a lackey always following her around, spending all his wages or gamblings upon her, trampling on himself, allowing himself to be robbed just for a smile, and, maybe, a kiss from the female Judas, who, after all, is nought but what Kipling called her in "The Vampire.'

"I certainly do love the ladies. I finish with that sentence, because you may think I'm a woman hater. I'm not, Hate is too strong a word. We don't hate that which we hold only in contempt,

"CECIL MONTAGUE."

The economical exploitation of the human race which, Cecil tells us, takes hold of men as it does of women causes the latter to "go that way" which he infers feminate, amorous-no longer armorous. Is the reprehensible way of the primrose When we do fight it is for greed, in- path and the bright lights. He does not add, however, that history and tradition to have the excuse of economic pressure

Ultimately the change in woman's status will bring about, it is to be hoped, "The woman has never been oppressed, but is not promised, an equal standard It is foolish to talk of her ever having of morals for men and women, but until that happy day eventuates mothers will immoral—and she is yet—consenting to continue to worry more about their boys "going that way" than about their girls.

In answer to another of your charges, Cecil, from personal experience, I would was a woman. The great majority of the say that judging from my correspondence, just as many men, yourself not excepted, seem to enjoy being "stultified" by the woman's pages of newspapers. In conclusion, Cecil, it shows exceptionally bad judgment for a man to spend his life supplying a woman who that the women see a way out of it, and is a female Judas with "all the necessities and luxuries" when there are so Woman has always had life lightened many wholesomely attractive women in for her by her slave-the man who the world. Only the slave kind-a very minor, abnormal type-would do it. Did his own neck so that she might have he exist in large numbers, I should be food. It was the man who was killed one of the first to enlist under a "mascu-

SERVICEABLE WHITE COAT

THE white chinchilla coat, which has been the summer staple for years and years, is with us again, but, as to be expected, with modifications to make it a strictly 1916 affair. The sports clothes, which have swept everything before them for the last year or so, are doubtless responsible for the numerous patch pockets, that are as practical as they are smart. As a further practical feature, we have the convertible collar, which may be worn opened or closed. Price $15. For those who desire a longer coat-seven-eighths or full-length—it may be ordered for $20.

Here is an unusually smart hat with a number of novel touches. It is of silver gray faille silk with a navy blue taffeta facing and graduated straps of the same edging the brim and trimmed with a novel handle effect of taffeta with loops and ends. It also comes in white and navy or white and black, or may be ordered in any combination,

Oil of citronella was procured by wholesale. A half dram or less was poured in the palm of the hand and then anointed on the feet, ankles, hands and face. This would secure immunity for four hours at least, and sometimes for the entire night. Perhaps a good method of using citron-ella would be that suggested by General Holmes. Pieces of gauze dipped in oil are bound around the wrist, ankles and fore-

Mosquito Netting.—Most of the men on shipboard slept in hammocks. It is not an easy matter to cover a hammock effectively with mosquito netting. In the first place, it is difficult to keep the netting in position;
in the second. If the netting touches the body the mosquitoes can feed through it.
In contrast with the average commercial

Given arranged a mesquite netting over hoops so that the whole had the shape of a torpedo. When this was drawn tightly at the head and foot of the hammock it was mesquite-proof and the netting was held away from the body. A netting over a hammock is troublesome to put in position, tears easily and stops some of the air on a hit night. A piece of netting 6 by 9 feet is required.

Efforts to keep mosquitoes out of the ship by placing wire screens over the portholes, scuttles and ventilators were worse than useless. The gauze kept out some air, the mosquitoes got into the cabins anyhow, and, having gotten in, could not get out, and remained to torment. All breeding places on shipboard were cleaned out. The blige water on lifeboats and rowboats was found to be a great breeding place.

Diet for Bright's Disease

Referring to your answer to "J. J." relative to "Albumen in Urine. You say to "get clear out definite, detailed directions and follow them." Will you tell what thinss are right to est and what to let alone? Also will strength our symmasium work or swimming tend to bring on the albumen? Does smoking in a mederate way affect the albumen? H. B. F. There is more than one kind of Bright's isease. What is a proper diet for one would be improper for another except as to general lines. In acute albuminuria or Bright's disease the patient should cat little Bright's disease the patient should eat little meat or none. In chronic Bright's disease the patient needs more meat and a generally heavier diet than in acute disease, though less than a well man requires. Again, the amount of meat that can be allowed depends on the peculiarities of the individual. Therefore, I repeat to you the advice given J. J. to get clear cut, definite, detailed directions and follow them.

2. Do not overcat, ever. Avoid heavy meals, such as result in a feeling of fuiness in the atomach. Eat sparingly of meats, gravies, and rich foods. A sample of low protein diet is as follows: Breakfast—A large pinte of fruit and milk or cream, followed by abundant careal and milk, with hread and batter, No meat, eggs or fish.

THE CHEERFUL CHERUB

I lose the illusions I had The more I knock up I feel so unsettled I think I'll begin To believe in them over SASTIL.

Artistic Summer Luncheons August is the time for goldenrod, and nothing is more delightful for home decoranothing is more delightful for home decorations than the beautiful, yellow flower. One woman made use of the goldenrod season to give a goldenrod luncheon. She really had to give the luncheon, and since she felt she did not care to spend a large sum on table and house flowers she decided to use the wild flowers that were peeping in at her back yard.

Have bowls of goldenrod all around the shady porch and on the luncheon table for artistic effect. Yellow ribbons or crepe paper ones running from the centre bowl to the place cards is pretty, too, if you want to give a touch of the unusual to your decorations. A good cold luncheon menu is more acceptable in summer time than an elaborate and heat-producing bill of farc. Here is a sample list which is easily prepared and cooling to the system: Cold cuts such as chicken, Virginia ham, plain boiled ham, tongue, veal, lamb, etc., with Russian dressing.

Russian dressing is made by beating two raw eggs well in a large bowl. Add a bit of pepper, a quarter teaspoonful of salt, a little paprika, a teaspoonful each of finely chopped peppers, both green and red, pickles and a half cupful of tarragon vine-gar. Mix well. Now add two cupfuls of chill sauce and two of mayonnaise. Stir well. The mayonnaise should be very

Saratoga chips, sliced tomatoes and cucumbers on watercress with French dressing, or fruit salad with oiled mayonnaise sandwiches and individual molds of gelatine with whipped cream on the top with fancy cakes make a delightful luncheon

A green and white luncheon is another inexpensive color scheme, for the greens may be furnished by any convenient ferns, etc. that you have on hand. Most summer places have ferny woods around them, so that it is easy to get the greens fresh. Have a large circular reflector in the centre of the table and bank this with mosses and greens. If you add a toy boat and the banking is done well one can hardly tell the difference between that and a miniature lake. A large fern ball in full bloom suspended above the table and reflected in the "lake" adds to the picturesqueness of the whole Place cards should be white, painted with a fern design in water colors. Write he names in green.

Here is a luncheon that carries out the green color scheme and is easy to prepare: Puree of pea and spinach soup, served in cups with a teaspoonful of whipped cream on top Minced chicken baked in ramekins, with parsley on top, sweetbread salad in green sweet peppers, an ice-colored green with spinach juice or pistachio ice cream, small cakes, iced with green and large green mints. Creme de menthe may be served with the coffee.

Rose Petal Sandwiches

Are greatly in demand in the fashionable, hotels at teatime. This is how they make them: Get a pound of fresh, unsalted butter. Pack it away in a closed case with a covering of fragrant rose leaves. Of course it is unnecessary to say that every rose petal should be gone over with an eye to the ubiquitous bug. The more highly scented the leaves the better your butter will staste. Spread round or diamond-shaped slices of bread or angel cake out very thin with the butter the next day. Put a few rose petals in between so that
