NANCY WYNNE SPEAKS ABOUT VARIOUS DOINGS IN SOCIETY

Curious Things Are Done by Persons in Society-Needlework Guild on Main Line Flourishes in Summer as in Winter place as far as looks are concerned. Just walk up Walnut, Spruce or Locust streets from about Sixteenth street out toward the Schuelkill and you will see a land of deserted homes. One does not mind the desertion part so much as the dust and dirt of the pavements, which are left from May or June until October and November unswept, unwashed and covered with the dust of ages. However, there are still some of the high lights left in town, though it is really hard to believe in these days of democracy that any persons should wish to give the false impression that they have left town when they haven't. Such is the case, however, as I have reason to know, and, my dear, it was discovered in the funniest way! I had read in several society columns that Mr. and Mrs. So and So and their family had gone to a northern resort that is, Mrs. and her daughters had and Mr. would join them later. In fact, the notice had been written in the lady in question's own hand writing I was told by the one who published it. Well, on Thursday afternoon, you remember, there was a sudden strange flash of lightning and violent clap of thunder without sign of rain. I happened to be walking up the street at the moment, when suddenly the window in the third story of a certain home was flung up and the shutters unbolted, while two frightened women, gowned in kimonos, gazed out to see what the noise had been. They quickly closed the windows on seeing some one passing, but not quickly enough to prevent recog nition. I walked on wondering what all the secrecy was about. Many persons stay in town all summer for business reasons or for pecuniary reasons, but why be ashamed of it and seek to hide the fact by stifling back of closed windows all summer?

Though we are past midsummer, as I have observed before, the interest in working for the soldiers has not abated, steaming hot weather or not, and every Tuesday during the summer those women living on the Main Line who have not gone north, south, east or west meet at the home of Mrs. W. W. Montgomery Jr., in Radnor. They sew for the mer abroad under the auspices of the Queen Mary Needlework Gulld. Among those who attended the last meeting were Mrs. Bob Montgomery, Miss Julia Wood, Mrs. Kest Willing, Mrs. Murdock Kendrick and Mrs. Joe Du Barry, 3d. Mrs. Du Barry is the younger sister of Mrs. W. W. Montgomery; you know Mrs. Montromery was Fannie Brock and Mrs. Du Barry was Ella Brock. An informal luncheon was served after the sewing.

The Horace Eugene Smiths and family are at Cape May this season, and are the center of many delightful parties. They have their houseboat in the thoroughfare, and entertain® on it as well as at the Yacht Club and Golf Club. Tomorrow night they will give a dinner at the Corinthian Yacht Club, and the guests will dance afterward. The Smiths are great favorites and their invitations are eagerly sought after ever since the first party they gave when Edith came out. It was a Halloween affair, you remember, and the guests wore fancy costumes. So great was the success thereof that each
