MOTHER MARY PATRICIA BURIED

Archbishop Celebrates Mass at Funeral of Founder of Mater Misericordiae Convent

The Rev. Mother Mary Patricia Waldron, founder of the Mater Misericordiae Convent of the Sisters of Mercy at Narberth, and mother general of that order in this city, was buried this morning in the cemetery of that institution following an impressive funeral ceremony at which Archbishop Edmond F. Prendergast was the celebrant of the funeral mass.

The services which began at 10 o'clock were attended by the sisters of the convent, local clergy, visiting sisters from other dioceses and parochial school children. The entire attendance that crowded the chapel formed into a processional and escorted the body to the grave.

Mother Patricia, who was in her 83d year, was one of the most distinguished women in religious orders in the United States. She was the head of the Convent and Sisters of Mercy, St. Mary's House for Catholic Working Girls, adjoining the convent at Broad street and Columbia avenue; the Mater Misericordiae Convent and Academy at Merion and the Misericordia Hospital, now building in West Philadelphia.

Two Sharks on Kensington Avenue

Two sharks are being displayed in front of 3928 Kensington avenue today where George S. Bliss has a fish market. They were caught by him and Jacob Kohn, of the Enterprise Fish Company, yesterday off Corson's Inlet, near Sea Isle City. The men were fishing some 15 miles off shore. Three sharks were caught in their net. An 80-pound one and a 65-pound one were the specimens brought home and now on exhibition. The big fellow, about 10 feet long, escaped, tearing the net and spoiling a big catch. The fish they have in Kensington are about five and four feet long, respectively.
