ANCY WYNNE IS INTERESTED IN DEBUT OF PHILADELPHIAN

ughter of Mr. William E. Carter Will Be Given a Dance Tonight in Newport and Will Make Formal Debut Here in November—Other Matters

NATURALLY as the little debs of each year generally are subjects for discussion during the busy season, I am interested in the Newport debut of Lucile Carter, the daughter of Willie Carter and granddaughter of Mrs. William C. Carter of this city. Lucile is spending the summer at Newport with her mother, Mrs. George Brooke, at her villa, but her father will give the dance tonight in honor at his villa Quatrefail, as it is said. There are to be about 300 guests, including debutantes from New York and this city as well as the usual number of Newporters. The large ballroom is to be used for dancing, while supper will be served in a tent on the lawn, the latter having been erected especially for the occasion.

Lucile's debut in this city will take place on Tuesday, November 14, at a large tea given by her father at the Ritz-Carlton. A number of functions will also be given for her by her mother, Mrs. Brooks. Besides this, her grandmother, Mrs. Carter, and her aunts, Mrs. Joe Leidy and Mrs. Dickerman, of New York, are sure to entertain for her, so you see she has every prospect of an exceedingly gay winter.

Lucile is quite a horsewoman and may always be seen at the shows here, for she takes a great interest in sports. She is very tall like her cousin, Cornelia Leidy, but unlike Cornelia, who takes after the Leidy side of the family and is rather dark, Lucile is dark and very much like her father. She has had many thrilling experiences in her young life, perhaps one of the most thrilling any one could have and live through; that she was a passenger on board the Titanic, and with her brother and parents was saved from an awful death on that never-to-be-forgotten trip. The Reggie Vanderbilts will give her a dinner before the dance tonight. Mrs. William Disston will entertain before the dance for Pauline.

The Ned Pages reached home last week, I understand, in time for the funeral of their little son, George Tucker Bispham Page, which took place Monday. They were in Banff, Can., when the summons came, and rushed home by train as fast as possible. Both little girls were attacked in the same way. I understand it was due to something which all three children had eaten which affected their throats. The little girls who had not taken very much of the food are well on the road to recovery, but the little boy could not be saved. Mr. and Mrs. Page had been gone a month on a motor trip through California and Canada. It was certainly a sad home-coming and the sympathy of their friends is universal. I understand that the same sort of poisoning attacked one of the Emory Michael's children some two years ago, but the little one recovered.

Taffy Maiden Chorus Girls a Possibility

Scouts Investigate Qualifications of Atlantic City Confection Dispensers

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 5.—Scouts have been busy here during the last week, visiting the "nickel-and-dime" stores, salt-water taffy factories and the restaurants where females attend to the wants of customers. They are in search of young girls with a possible fancy for stage life, there being a dearth of available material to supply the demands for "merry-merry" chorus girls for the coming season. Chorus girls are scarcer than munition workers, and if the demand is not filled from cities outside of New York and Philadelphia the girls who have been doing duty in musical comedies for years will be able to command any salary they may ask for next season. An unusual number of musical comedies of the "girlie-girlie" type are to be sent on the road next season, the majority of producing managers having a hunch that the public want the light and frothy style of entertainment this year. Burlesque companies, which now carry from 16 to 30 chorus girls, have drawn heavily on the supply, it being estimated that at least 2000 girls will be required to fill the ranks of the companies on the three circuits now in existence; tabloid musical comedies playing in the popular price vaudeville houses will require a small army of agile and pretty girls, and with the big extravaganzas scheduled for an all-season run in New York getting the pick of the experienced girls many a manager will be compelled to break in new girls. There has been as much wire-pulling here by competing managers to sign up chorus girls during the last two weeks as at a national presidential convention.

An unusual number of Philadelphia actors and actresses have been summering here, many of whom had been lured away from this city by resorts near New York in the last few years. When conditions were bad in the theatrical business it was necessary for people to be in the vicinity of New York city so that they could make a round of the various agencies every day or two in order to secure engagements for the coming season. New methods have been adopted in the booking of vaudeville acts, personally appointed agents securing long routes for performers without their presence in the metropolis, and legitimate actors and actresses do not have to live in New York during the torrid summer months, as they are aware of the fact that managers know their particular type and will send for them if they need their services for new plays or old successes. Of course, there is a vast army of profesionals doing the daily posing and parading on Broadway, but Atlantic City has reaped a rich harvest this summer from theatrical people who wisely invested a portion of their winter savings in a summer vacation at this resort.

After much discussion on the subject a number of theatrical people, born and raised in the Quaker City, have made up their minds that a city which gave Edwin Forrest, the Drew family and numerous other stars to the stage in olden days, and later George W. Monroe, Walter Kelly, Eddie Wynne, Billy Fields, Harry Fern, Tommy Grady, Joe Mitchell and hundreds of others, should be placed on the theatrical map. This band of show people have therefore agreed that during the coming season, when registering at hotels throughout the country, they will place Philadelphia on the hotel book instead of New York, as is customary with actors and actresses.

After completing their preliminary arrangements for next season a number of New York managers spent the week here taking one solid week of recreation before entering on the strenuous duties of a theatrical season. All of them are more sanguine than ever over the prospects for the season opening on Labor Day. Reports from every section of the country indicate a decided desire for theatrical attractions, and hundreds of theatres used exclusively for motion pictures during the last three years will play nothing but theatrical combinations next season.

A few wise managers are delaying the opening of their companies until the middle of September, claiming that there will be such a mad rush for coin at the opening of the season that the public will be surfeited and not give all attractions the amount of business necessary to make a tour successful. Quite a few professionals here will not be called away for rehearsals until the middle of September, with an opening two or three weeks later, and they will linger here and enjoy the beauties of the best month in the year at a seaside resort.

William Locker, treasurer of the Girard Theater, is a weekly visitor, the nonclosing of that house necessitating his taking his vacation in homeopathic doses.

Billy Hart ran down for a few days during a three days' lay-off of the vaudeville team of Marie and Billy Hart. He exhibited a shirt of unusual design, gorgeously decorated with roses as big as those used on wallpaper.

Mike Needham, a Philadelphian and the youngest old clog dancer in the world, is spending the few idle days he has in this city. He has met with success in "Tango Shoes" and is re-engaged for that same vaudeville novelty for next season. He is accompanied by his wife, professionally known as Vivian Wood.

Joe Mitchell, of Quinn and Mitchell, is spending his summer in Philadelphia, preparing for the team's starring tour in "The Funny Mr. Dooley," but he manages to put in week-ends here.

Ethel Golden, who maintains a home in Philadelphia even when she is singing syncopated melodies in vaudeville theaters throughout the county, is here for the month of August.

Walter Davidson, formerly director of the orchestra at the Walnut Street Theater, but now located in New York, is meeting many of his friends during his week's vacation here.

Desmond Place, formerly of the Walnut and Lyric Theaters, has purchased a home in Ocean City and will spend the balance of the summer there.

Frank Stroud, assistant treasurer of the Forrest Theater, is cruising around the water of Barnegat Bay during his vacation time, but expects to stop here next week on the last leg of his journey home in order to open that house on Labor Day.

Summering at Ocean City, the quiet resort across the bay from here, are Charles Wanamaker, manager of the Garrick; Lynn Hardy, of the Lyric and Adelphi; Walter Stewart, of the Adelphi; Fergus McCusker, of the Forrest; George Fish, formerly manager of Forepaugh's Theater, but now a resident of Cincinnati; James Simpson, a moving-picture magnate, and William Gane, assistant manager of the Walnut Street Theater.

Louis Lustman, who has led orchestras in the Nixon theaters for 17 years, is taking a real vacation of two months, but will be back in harness in Philadelphia next season.
