9000-Tc Ship Goes Down in Mediterranean Sea; Dispatch to Lloyd's Blames Submarine

VESSEL CARRIED GUNS

LONDON, Aug. 19.—The 9000-ton Italian liner Stimpalia has been sunk, presumably by a submarine, says a dispatch to Lloyd's today. The Stimpalia sailed from Genoa on a passenger line between New York and Genoa on July 16. There may be United States citizens aboard.

The Stimpalia was in the New York Channel on July 16 and was seen by the La Veloce, a German submarine, which was ordered to attack and sink her. She was probably carrying a big passenger list.

The Mediterranean Sea has long been infested by swarms of both Austrian and German submarines and it is supposed that one of the underwater boats was lying in wait for the liner somewhere in the Mediterranean.

HEEP TO MAYOR IN VICE CRUSADE

Sends Grand Jury Report, but Withholds Testimony Pending Court Order

VICE SQUAD ELIMINATED Police Lieutenants Now Responsible—Gamblers Show No Anxiety

District Attorney Rotan, writing from Hot Springs, offers to assist Mayor Smith in every way in cleaning up vice conditions in Philadelphia.

The letter, was sent by Mr. Rotan to his office in City Hall. It was postdated Philadelphia, and delivered at the Mayor's office by Joseph P. McClean, a District Attorney's detective.

In the letter Mr. Rotan explains to the Mayor why he cannot furnish the latter with a copy of the testimony before the July Grand Jury. His letter follows:

"Honorable Thomas B. Smith, Mayor of the City of Philadelphia, City Hall, Philadelphia.

"Dear Mr. Smith—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of August 14, requesting me to furnish you with a copy of the Grand Jury's report.

"I am inclined to furnish you with a copy of the Grand Jury report, but I assume that you intended to ask for a copy of the testimony of the witnesses who appeared before the Grand Jury.

"I should be very glad to furnish you with a copy of the testimony were I not of the opinion that the proceedings before the Grand Jury are secret and confidential and should be kept as such.

"I do not wish to hamper, but to help you. In conclusion I wish to assure you that I am willing to assist you in every way I possibly can to eliminate vice in all its forms.

"Very truly yours, (Signed) Samuel P. Rotan, District Attorney."

VICE SQUAD DISBANDED

Superintendent Robinson formally disbanded the vice squad this afternoon, and his action placed the responsibility for the district it occurs and the captain in whose division it occurs.

The vice squad has been in existence for many years, and in its recent shape up to the time of disbanding for five years. The chief difficulty the authorities found with it, they say, was the tendency of lieutenants in various police districts to use the squad as it and not on themselves, and thus shift the responsibility when anything wrong was found out.

This can't happen any more. The responsibility rests from now on squarely on the lieutenant and the captain. If a lieutenant wants to do some vice investigating he need only go to his captain, and with him he has the privilege of using any of the 700 policemen in the city to do whatever work he thinks should be done.

Nobody will know about the request except the lieutenant himself, the captain he appeals to, Superintendent Robinson, and the two who are named to do the work. The 20 members of the squad have been taken to their respective districts to do their duty. The head of it was sent to the Detective Bureau last week. Jesse Wister, his successor for a few weeks, will go back to the Detective Bureau tonight.

GAMBLERS NOT NERVOUS. Gamblers and other law-breakers exhibited no nervousness today over the conference yesterday of Mayor Smith with police heads.
