

NANCY WYNNE CHATS OF NIGHT PAGEANT

Misses Frances and Leta Sullivan Take Part in American Ambulance Hospital Benefit

SUMMER residents at Bar Harbor are still talking of the really lovely night pageant held on the lawn of the Swimming Club there Thursday evening. It was an evening of dances, fittingly termed "Tersichore" by John Murray Anderson, who devised and staged it under the direction of Mrs. William Lawrence Green, and represented the progress of the dance through four ages. The prologue, which was written by John Kendrick Bangs, was read by Enid Howland, and then followed the dances of antiquity, the first Egyptian and then the Grecian. The role of Tersichore was taken by Constance Binney; she, you will remember, danced in this city at several charitable performances during last season. She is a niece of Mrs. George Dunning, who, in spite of the heat, has been working away for the suffrage cause during the summer.

The first dance of the Renaissance was the gavotte, executed gracefully by Frances and Leta Sullivan, and this was followed by a Minuet de la Cour, in which Edith Gracie, Charlotte Delafield, Sylvia Van Rensselaer and Helen Smith took part.

Katherine Force, Mrs. Dick's sister, and Georgia Schofield appeared in the nineteenth century group. The latter commanded one of the companies at the National Service School for Women, held at Chevy Chase in May. I use the word commanded advisedly, for one heard many rumors of her Spartan methods while captain of Company C. It was told as a good one on her that when one of the rookies, having sprained her ankle, reported the fact to her youthful captain, the latter, tired of hearing about sprained ankles so close to exhibition day, was heard to murmur "Darn" under her breath. I do not know whether the unfortunate rookie had her town leave taken away or was summarily dismissed.

However, to get back to Thursday night's pageant, I understand there was quite a representative gathering present, including the Charlie Wrights, from this city, also the Bob Lo Contes, Mrs. Mason Campbell, Mrs. J. Madison Taylor, "Bliss" Large, the Honorable Mrs. Alfred Anson, the Edgar Scotts and the McGargers Wrights.

A number of prominent Main Line women connected with the Woman's Suffrage party of Montgomery, Delaware and Chester Counties have started preparations for a large tricorn lawn fete, to be held on October 4 on the extensive lawns at Windybrook, Mrs. Ferrie Brinton, Jr., of the Chester County division, is general chairman of the affair, which promises to have many unique features. Others actively interested are Mrs. E. Mitchell, of Ardmore; Mrs. E. P. Flannery, of Wynnewood; Mrs. A. M. Wilson, of Wayne, and Mrs. Clarence Gardner, of Cynwyd.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas De Witt Cuyler, who are occupying Stone Cliff, their summer home at Bar Harbor, will give a dinner this evening for their daughter, Miss Eleanor C. Cuyler, and her fiancé, Mr. Joseph Walker, 3d, of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence T. Paul will entertain at dinner this evening at their villa in Newport in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Denckla Mills.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Robins are entertaining a house party over the week-end at their cottage at Tuxedo Park, L. I.

Mr. and Mrs. William Lyttleton Savage gave a luncheon today at Dennison Cottage, Bar Harbor.

Miss Sophy Mercey-Worth, who has been visiting in Bar Harbor, is now at Cape May. She will leave shortly for Chelsea, where she will visit Mrs. Louis Rodman Page, Jr., who will be remembered as Miss Katherine Herman Kremer.

Mr. William Hare, of Radnor, will leave on September 6 for the United States Military Training camp at Plattsburg, where he will spend several weeks. Mr. Truxton Hare has returned from Plattsburg.

Dr. and Mrs. Lewis H. Adler, Jr., of the Belgrade, are spending the summer at the Chalfonte Hotel, Atlantic City. Their son, Mr. Frank H. Adler, who has been spending some time with them, left yesterday for the Canadian Rockies, to camp for several weeks.

Along the Main Line

WYNNWOOD—Mr. and Mrs. Phineas Prouty, of Hathaway lane, have returned to their home after spending 10 days at the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec.

ARDMORE—Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Boyer, who are spending the season at the Dennis, Atlantic City, accompanied by their family, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Remington, Irving and Mrs. H. Allan George, have returned from a motor trip to Cape May and along the Jersey coast.

HAVERFORD—Mr. and Mrs. Rowland Comly, of Pamunkey road, have returned to their home after spending some time at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

BRYN MAWR—Mr. and Mrs. George Purvis have moved into their new home on Centre street.

Miss Lillian Gilliams, of Montgomery avenue, moved this week to 310 Chestnut avenue, Narberth.

WAYNE—Miss Sue Edna Brown, of Bryn Mawr, is spending several weeks as the guest of Mrs. Joseph Pearce.

Germantown

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis M. H. Hanson announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Anna Hanson, to Mr. Norman Thompson Moore, son of the Rev. George C. Moore and Mrs. Moore, also of Germantown.

The marriage will take place in November. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Passit Mitchell, of 145 West School House lane, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Margaret Smith Mitchell, to Mr. George W. Carson, on Wednesday, September 6, at 1:30 o'clock in the Church of the Advocate, Wayne avenue and Quisen lane.

Mr. and Mrs. William Miller, of 47 East Philadelphia street, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Florence Miller, to Mr. Clarence Gregory on Monday evening, August 28, at the Church of the Brethren, Germantown avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Limeburner and their daughter, of 4213 Morton street, are spending several weeks in Ocean City, N. J.

Miss Ann Meyers, of 2444 Wakefield street, and Miss Emily Brown, of 2444 Wakefield street, are spending two weeks at the Columbia, Cape May.

MR. AND MRS. HAROLD CHARLES BOND
Whose wedding took place on Tuesday at Wyncoke. Mrs. Bond was Miss Alice Lorraine Dixon

Bala-Cynwyd

Miss Margaret Feichter, of New York, will be the guest of Miss Del Rio Macan, of Montgomery avenue, Cynwyd, for the first two weeks in September.

Miss Minnie F. Scholler, of Cynwyd, who has been visiting Miss Cordella Vaughn, of Devon, has returned to her home. Later Miss Vaughn, accompanied by Miss Scholler and Miss Eleanor Wilson, will motor to Mt. Pocono.

Weddings

BRADFORD—McCORKINDALE. WILMINGTON, Del., Aug. 19.—The marriage of Miss Pauline Frederick McCorkindale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. McCorkindale, of 2810 Chestnut street, and Mr. Sidney G. Bradford, of 1235 South Melville street, are on a motorboat cruise in the Delaware Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. William Scull, of 5 South Forty-fourth street; Mr. Alexander Gillespie, of 1423 South Forty-ninth street; Mr. John Campbell, of 3810 Chestnut street; and Mr. Lincoln Drinkwater, of 1235 South Melville street, are on a motorboat cruise in the Delaware Bay.

Mr. Samuel C. Latta, of 4226 Market street, has gone to Atlantic City to spend 10 days.

Miss Blanche Jones, of 5402 Chestnut street, has returned home after having spent a month in Virginia visiting relatives.

South Philadelphia. Miss Beatrice Louise Thomas, of 2825 Ventnor avenue, Chelsea, entertained a bridge on Thursday afternoon in honor of Miss Edna Boothby, of 1427 South Broad street, who is visiting friends in Chelsea.

Mr. Herbert Boland, of 1623 Ritten street, is visiting in Atlantic City.

Mr. Raymond Vincent is spending several weeks in Wildwood with friends.

A party was given in honor of Mr. Benjamin Dudowsky's return from California this week. The guests were entertained by Mr. Samuel Jacobs, who sang a number of popular songs.

North Philadelphia. Miss Lulu Fleming Wright, of 2820 West Sunquahanna avenue, left yesterday to pass the week-end in Ocean City, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl T. Kramer, of 2923 North Twenty-fifth street, are spending a fortnight in Wildwood. Mrs. Kramer, who is Miss Anna May O'Brien, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ogden, of 2523 North Thirty-second street, was a June bride.

NEELY—MEREDITH. Mr. and Mrs. William Rhoads Meredith, of 215 Harvey street, announce the marriage of their daughter, Louise Meredith, to Mr. Walter Clark Neely, on Friday evening, August 19, at 6 o'clock, in the Westside Presbyterian Church. The Rev. William Porter Lee officiated. After a wedding journey through the West Mr. and Mrs. Neely will be at home after November 1 at 7130 Creashelm road, Chestnut Hill.

GORDON—ROSEN. An interesting wedding will take place, after a courtship of five years, when Miss Elizabeth Gordon will become the bride of Mr. Herman Gordon tomorrow evening. Only a few friends of the families will be present. The couple will leave for Atlantic City immediately after the ceremony.

WOODWARD—MAHONY. Miss Sarah May Mahony, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Mahony, of 1806 North Tany street, became the bride of Mr. Howard L. Woodward, of 3000 West Cumberland street, on Wednesday evening. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. E. W. Hart, of the Columbia Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. Frank W. Woodward, a brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man, and Miss Edna Marks was maid of honor.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Passit Mitchell, of 145 West School House lane, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Margaret Smith Mitchell, to Mr. George W. Carson, on Wednesday, September 6, at 1:30 o'clock in the Church of the Advocate, Wayne avenue and Quisen lane.

Mr. and Mrs. William Miller, of 47 East Philadelphia street, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Florence Miller, to Mr. Clarence Gregory on Monday evening, August 28, at the Church of the Brethren, Germantown avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Limeburner and their daughter, of 4213 Morton street, are spending several weeks in Ocean City, N. J.

Miss Ann Meyers, of 2444 Wakefield street, and Miss Emily Brown, of 2444 Wakefield street, are spending two weeks at the Columbia, Cape May.

West Philadelphia

Miss Rosalia Ward, of 117 South Thirty-eighth street, is spending several weeks in Portland, Me.

Miss Frances Murray, of West Philadelphia, is spending a portion of the summer at her aunt's home in Washington, D. C.

Dr. and Mrs. Gerald Fitzgerald Proctor will occupy their new home, 5613 Cedar avenue, this week. They will be at home to their friends after September 1.

Miss Anna Ivey is spending the summer at Wildwood, accompanied by Miss Florence Sutcliffe and Miss S. Kavanah, of Wissahickon.

Mr. and Mrs. William Scull, of 5 South Forty-fourth street; Mr. Alexander Gillespie, of 1423 South Forty-ninth street; Mr. John Campbell, of 3810 Chestnut street; and Mr. Lincoln Drinkwater, of 1235 South Melville street, are on a motorboat cruise in the Delaware Bay.

Mr. Samuel C. Latta, of 4226 Market street, has gone to Atlantic City to spend 10 days.

Miss Blanche Jones, of 5402 Chestnut street, has returned home after having spent a month in Virginia visiting relatives.

South Philadelphia. Miss Beatrice Louise Thomas, of 2825 Ventnor avenue, Chelsea, entertained a bridge on Thursday afternoon in honor of Miss Edna Boothby, of 1427 South Broad street, who is visiting friends in Chelsea.

Mr. Herbert Boland, of 1623 Ritten street, is visiting in Atlantic City.

Mr. Raymond Vincent is spending several weeks in Wildwood with friends.

A party was given in honor of Mr. Benjamin Dudowsky's return from California this week. The guests were entertained by Mr. Samuel Jacobs, who sang a number of popular songs.

North Philadelphia. Miss Lulu Fleming Wright, of 2820 West Sunquahanna avenue, left yesterday to pass the week-end in Ocean City, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl T. Kramer, of 2923 North Twenty-fifth street, are spending a fortnight in Wildwood. Mrs. Kramer, who is Miss Anna May O'Brien, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ogden, of 2523 North Thirty-second street, was a June bride.

NEELY—MEREDITH. Mr. and Mrs. William Rhoads Meredith, of 215 Harvey street, announce the marriage of their daughter, Louise Meredith, to Mr. Walter Clark Neely, on Friday evening, August 19, at 6 o'clock, in the Westside Presbyterian Church. The Rev. William Porter Lee officiated. After a wedding journey through the West Mr. and Mrs. Neely will be at home after November 1 at 7130 Creashelm road, Chestnut Hill.

GORDON—ROSEN. An interesting wedding will take place, after a courtship of five years, when Miss Elizabeth Gordon will become the bride of Mr. Herman Gordon tomorrow evening. Only a few friends of the families will be present. The couple will leave for Atlantic City immediately after the ceremony.

WOODWARD—MAHONY. Miss Sarah May Mahony, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Mahony, of 1806 North Tany street, became the bride of Mr. Howard L. Woodward, of 3000 West Cumberland street, on Wednesday evening. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. E. W. Hart, of the Columbia Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, at the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. Frank W. Woodward, a brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man, and Miss Edna Marks was maid of honor.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Passit Mitchell, of 145 West School House lane, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Margaret Smith Mitchell, to Mr. George W. Carson, on Wednesday, September 6, at 1:30 o'clock in the Church of the Advocate, Wayne avenue and Quisen lane.

Mr. and Mrs. William Miller, of 47 East Philadelphia street, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Florence Miller, to Mr. Clarence Gregory on Monday evening, August 28, at the Church of the Brethren, Germantown avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Limeburner and their daughter, of 4213 Morton street, are spending several weeks in Ocean City, N. J.

Miss Ann Meyers, of 2444 Wakefield street, and Miss Emily Brown, of 2444 Wakefield street, are spending two weeks at the Columbia, Cape May.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Limeburner and their daughter, of 4213 Morton street, are spending several weeks in Ocean City, N. J.

Miss Ann Meyers, of 2444 Wakefield street, and Miss Emily Brown, of 2444 Wakefield street, are spending two weeks at the Columbia, Cape May.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Limeburner and their daughter, of 4213 Morton street, are spending several weeks in Ocean City, N. J.

Miss Ann Meyers, of 2444 Wakefield street, and Miss Emily Brown, of 2444 Wakefield street, are spending two weeks at the Columbia, Cape May.

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Limeburner and their daughter, of 4213 Morton street, are spending several weeks in Ocean City, N. J.

THE PHILADELPHIA WAR

BY LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE "THE Author of BRASS BOWL"

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Traill, a young New York society favorite, and Captain Hans von Holzborn, attached to the German Embassy in London, are rivals for the hand of the beautiful Lady Herbert, formerly Julia de Neve, of Richmond, Va. The German is engaged to the widow, but Traill, who in the two years following the death of his wife, has remained in the United States.

Immediately upon Traill's arrival in London, he is attracted to the young Lady Herbert, who is the daughter of a wealthy American family. Traill, who is a member of the party, is attracted to the young Lady Herbert, who is the daughter of a wealthy American family.

Von Holzborn, who is a member of the party, is attracted to the young Lady Herbert, who is the daughter of a wealthy American family. Traill, who is a member of the party, is attracted to the young Lady Herbert, who is the daughter of a wealthy American family.

The next night in Traill's apartment, he is attracted to the young Lady Herbert, who is the daughter of a wealthy American family. Traill, who is a member of the party, is attracted to the young Lady Herbert, who is the daughter of a wealthy American family.

At first they are disappointed, but later, when Traill is attracted to the young Lady Herbert, who is the daughter of a wealthy American family. Traill, who is a member of the party, is attracted to the young Lady Herbert, who is the daughter of a wealthy American family.

CHAPTER XIV—(Continued). DE NETZIE approaching at that moment, the surgeon reopened his case of instruments with professional alacrity.

"Your own wound, sir?" he suggested. "Nothing of consequence," asserted the Russian. "The man struck wildly, and the knife penetrated the fleshy part of my shoulder. I handled it myself at a more suitable time. Thank you, monsieur."

Chine shut his case with a disappointed snap. "Mrs. Morchester?" Julia called. "Yes, Julia?"

"We will go on up to the hall now, if you please. Fritz and Eunice will accompany us. And may I requisition your man, Mr. Sevance? Grady might help Fritz back with the litter. It has been decided."

Explained, "that it would be too dangerous to attempt to remove Captain von Holzborn to the Myosotis tonight. We shall carry out our original purpose, therefore, and take refuge in Salsacres Hall. Monsieur de Netze will accompany us, and I venture to ask Mr. Traill and Mr. Sevance to be our guests for the night. You will command, that is, you gentlemen," she concluded, with a wan, pitiful simulation of her smile.

There was, of course, no question as to that. In the morning, when she decided to go to the city in company with the servants and Mrs. Morchester, while Sevance and I, by special request of von Holzborn, were asked to remain and help guard that gentleman against further attack, should there be any.

If I had had my way about it, I should have announced my intention of letting him go to the devil at his convenience, and through whatever agent Providence might designate. Such an announcement being, to say the least, inadvisable, as well as inhuman, I schooled myself to a silent acquiescence.

CHAPTER XV. Capture and Escape. THERE was a little bustle and confusion; and then my heart's desire, with her party, moved away and was swallowed up in the shadows of the woodland. Chine returned to his patient, whom Captain Keen had never left.

The seamen from the Myosotis huddled together at a distance, gossiping in undertone. I decided to go to the city in company with the servants and Mrs. Morchester, while Sevance and I, by special request of von Holzborn, were asked to remain and help guard that gentleman against further attack, should there be any.

After a while Keen arose and issued a succession of orders, which they sprang with alacrity to obey, seizing the bodies of the dead men and carrying them quietly down the stairs to the beach below. Monsieur de Netze explained this matter quite plausibly. It was advisable, he said, that the affair should be kept quiet, as possible. It was for that reason alone, for instance, that her ladyship had given orders that no more than three trusted servants of the family should be employed about Salsacres Hall during this clandestine flight.

"I am desolated," said the Russian, "to think that I should be the cause of such trouble to my most kind friends. It is a sad thing, but the fact is that all this was arranged on my account alone; we could imagine no more safe hiding place in all England than this same Salsacres Hall. It seems almost incredible, but it is so."

He sighed wearily. "Now, these caresses," he continued, indicating the bodies with a scornful wave of his hand, "are to be carried out to sea, buried, and then there will remain no dead men to tell tales upon us."

He laughed unpleasantly. "What is the motive for this persistent desire for your life?" Sevance asked. "That is, if I am not asking too much."

"Ah! not in the least, monsieur! To the contrary—what have I to hide? You are aware that my services are held in some slight esteem by His Majesty the Czar. So! My life is therefore, a thing obnoxious to the Secret Chapter of the revolutionary party."

"Why didn't they shoot you outright, then?" "They wished to take me alive, and to keep me so, for a time. As to the end—I have no doubts at all! But, while living, they might have persuaded me to talk more than I could out of captivity."

"Persuade?" said Sevance. "Even today there are methods of persuasion," said De Netze calmly, "not inferior to those practiced by the Inquisition, mes amis."

In due course Grady and Fritz returned with a litter. Von Holzborn was laid upon it, groaning pitifully. Chine administered a stimulant, made favorable allusion to Captain Keen and turned toward Salsacres Hall, accompanied by the surgeon and three sailors from the yacht.

If any member of the mysterious Secret Chapter lurked about, he was at pains not to make his presence known. Before starting Grady found time to inform me that Thompson, the lodge keeper, had seen an automobile pass the lodge, northbound, with a bareheaded man for its sole passenger, some ten minutes or so after the probable time of the encounter on the cliff.

It but confirmed our suspicions that one of the assassins had made good his escape. The Russian's brow furrowed with anxiety. When I informed him of this incident, nevertheless, he maintained, we were assured of three or four days' respite from further annoyance or assault. It would take some time, he was confident, to assemble in our neighborhood enough members of the revolutionary party then in England—enough for a successful attack upon our party, he amended. There would be plenty of time to devise a way out of the difficulty.

Our arrival at the Hall was devoid of incident. Von Holzborn was at once carried upstairs to a bedchamber assigned to his use. De Netze accompanying him with the surgeon, Sevance and I were left standing below in the great hallway, warmly and courteously, and almost in hysterics because of the dreadful strain he had endured, the woman told us, and begged to be excused until the following morning.

In the meantime, we were informed, our rooms were being prepared for our reception; we would be shown to them after supper; we acquiesced apathetically, too weary for words.

Supper was served up alone in the breakfast room. Grady attended; he had no news; he had been given to understand that his room was preparatory to his company, it seemed, promptly upon the arrival of the litter from von Holzborn's apartment. De Netze, however, had told the Irishman that for every duty during the night, a special task which he was to share with the seamen from the Myosotis.

A bucolic lackey lighted Sevance and myself to our rooms. They proved adjoining ones. I, gathered, a remote wing of the building. Sevance did not remember ever having entered either before; and the darkness of the night together with my own total unfamiliarity with the place made it impossible for me to determine precisely where they were situate.

However, they were large, they were heated, and each contained a roomy and fashioned bed. Shortly after we began to undress Grady appeared with a lot of today, which he said, Doctor Chine had suggested might be acceptable. We proved the truth of his supposition by dozing the draught without much ceremony.

Between my fumes and my overpowering fatigue, I fell into a dreamy slumber at the twinkling of an eye. Sevance asserts that the case was the same with him. I doubt if a thunderbolt falling squarely in either of the rooms would have roused us. We had slept the appointed time during that day.

The shades were drawn at the windows, and the big room was quite gloomy. I could not even see the face of my watch distinctly. After hunting uselessly about for a watch, in a moment of anxious groping, I suddenly flashed of intelligence and, going to the window, drew up the shades. Broad sunlight streamed in, a golden the contrary—what have I to hide? You are aware that my services are held in some slight esteem by His Majesty the Czar. So! My life is therefore, a thing obnoxious to the Secret Chapter of the revolutionary party."

"Why didn't they shoot you outright, then?" "They wished to take me alive, and to keep me so, for a time. As to the end—I have no doubts at all! But, while living, they might have persuaded me to talk more than I could out of captivity."

"Persuade?" said Sevance. "Even today there are methods of persuasion," said De Netze calmly, "not inferior to those practiced by the Inquisition, mes amis."

In due course Grady and Fritz returned with a litter. Von Holzborn was laid upon it, groaning pitifully. Chine administered a stimulant, made favorable allusion to Captain Keen and turned toward Salsacres Hall, accompanied by the surgeon and three sailors from the yacht.

If any member of the mysterious Secret Chapter lurked about, he was at pains not to make his presence known. Before starting Grady found time to inform me that Thompson, the lodge keeper, had seen an automobile pass the lodge, northbound, with a bareheaded man for its sole passenger, some ten minutes or so after the probable time of the encounter on the cliff.

It but confirmed our suspicions that one of the assassins had made good his escape. The Russian's brow furrowed with anxiety. When I informed him of this incident, nevertheless, he maintained, we were assured of three or four days' respite from further annoyance or assault. It would take some time, he was confident, to assemble in our neighborhood enough members of the revolutionary party then in England—enough for a successful attack upon our party, he amended. There would be plenty of time to devise a way out of the difficulty.

Our arrival at the Hall was devoid of incident. Von Holzborn was at once carried upstairs to a bedchamber assigned to his use. De Netze accompanying him with the surgeon, Sevance and I were left standing below in the great hallway, warmly and courteously, and almost in hysterics because of the dreadful strain he had endured, the woman told us, and begged to be excused until the following morning.

In the meantime, we were informed, our rooms were being prepared for our reception; we would be shown to them after supper; we acquiesced apathetically, too weary for words.

Supper was served up alone in the breakfast room. Grady attended; he had no news; he had been given to understand that his room was preparatory to his company, it seemed, promptly upon the arrival of the litter from von Holzborn's apartment. De Netze, however, had told the Irishman that for every duty during the night, a special task which he was to share with the seamen from the Myosotis.

A bucolic lackey lighted Sevance and myself to our rooms. They proved adjoining ones. I, gathered, a remote wing of the building. Sevance did not remember ever having entered either before; and the darkness of the night together with my own total unfamiliarity with the place made it impossible for me to determine precisely where they were situate.

However, they were large, they were heated, and each contained a roomy and fashioned bed. Shortly after we began to undress Grady appeared with a lot of today, which he said, Doctor Chine had suggested might be acceptable. We proved the truth of his supposition by dozing the draught without much ceremony.

Between my fumes and my overpowering fatigue, I fell into a dreamy slumber at the twinkling of an eye. Sevance asserts that the case was the same with him. I doubt if a thunderbolt falling squarely in either of the rooms would have roused us. We had slept the appointed time during that day.

The shades were drawn at the windows, and the big room was quite gloomy. I could not even see the face of my watch distinctly. After hunting uselessly about for a watch, in a moment of anxious groping, I suddenly flashed of intelligence and, going to the window, drew up the shades. Broad sunlight streamed in, a golden the contrary—what have I to hide? You are aware that my services are held in some slight esteem by His Majesty the Czar. So! My life is therefore, a thing obnoxious to the Secret Chapter of the revolutionary party."

"Why didn't they shoot you outright, then?" "They wished to take me alive, and to keep me so, for a time. As to the end—I have no doubts at all! But, while living, they might have persuaded me to talk more than I could out of captivity."

"Persuade?" said Sevance. "Even today there are methods of persuasion," said De Netze calmly, "not inferior to those practiced by the Inquisition, mes amis."

In due course Grady and Fritz returned with a litter. Von Holzborn was laid upon it, groaning pitifully. Chine administered a stimulant, made favorable allusion to Captain Keen and turned toward Salsacres Hall, accompanied by the surgeon and three sailors from the yacht.

If any member of the mysterious Secret Chapter lurked about, he was at pains not to make his presence known. Before starting Grady found time to inform me that Thompson, the lodge keeper, had seen an automobile pass the lodge, northbound, with a bareheaded man for its sole passenger, some ten minutes or so after the probable time of the encounter on the cliff.

It but confirmed our suspicions that one of the assassins had made good his escape. The Russian's brow furrowed with anxiety. When I informed him of this incident, nevertheless, he maintained, we were assured of three or four days' respite from further annoyance or assault. It would take some time, he was confident, to assemble in our neighborhood enough members of the revolutionary party then in England—enough for a successful attack upon our party, he amended. There would be plenty of time to devise a way out of the difficulty.

Our arrival at the Hall was devoid of incident. Von Holzborn was at once carried upstairs to a bedchamber assigned to his use. De Netze accompanying him with the surgeon, Sevance and I were left standing below in the great hallway, warmly and courteously, and almost in hysterics because of the dreadful strain he had endured, the woman told us, and begged to be excused until the following morning.

In the meantime, we were informed, our rooms were being prepared for our reception; we would be shown to them after supper; we acquiesced apathetically, too weary for words.

Supper was served up alone in the breakfast room. Grady attended; he had no news; he had been given to understand that his room was preparatory to his company, it seemed, promptly upon the arrival of the litter from von Holzborn's apartment. De Netze, however, had told the Irishman that for every duty during the night, a special task which he was to share with the seamen from the Myosotis.

A bucolic lackey lighted Sevance and myself to our rooms. They proved adjoining ones. I, gathered, a remote wing of the building. Sevance did not remember ever having entered either before; and the darkness of the night together with my own total unfamiliarity with the place made it impossible for me to determine precisely where they were situate.

However, they were large, they were heated, and each contained a roomy and fashioned bed. Shortly after we began to undress Grady appeared with a lot of today, which he said, Doctor Chine had suggested might be acceptable. We proved the truth of his supposition by dozing the draught without much ceremony.