Bad weather has halted the new French effensive north of the Somme, it was officially announced today.

The French spent last night improving their newly captured positions. The Germans made no attempt to recapture the positions taken by the French yesterday.

German counter-attacks on the Vaux-Chapitre wood, on the Verdun front, were all repulsed, although they were prossed home with great determination.

The Allies are now on the outskirts of Combies, on the Somme front, and it is believed that another great push, such as that launched on Sunday, will put the Anglo-French forces in possession of the village.

The new positions between Ginchy and Clery were strongly organized by the Allied Clery were strongly organized by the Allied forces during the night, despite the heavy artillery fire directed upon them by the Germans. These positions include the villages of Forest and Clery, which were held against strong German counter-attacks.

The Allied attack resulted in the captule of 3000 German prisoners and more than seventy-five cannon and machine guns. The attack flung back large German forces and succeeded in everything that had been hoped for it. The Germans rettred in disorder and the field is covered with their

French troops began the attack just about noon, after their guns had thundered all night and through the morning, smashing the German trenches and lines of shell holes. North of the Somme the French in-fantry jumped from their trenches all along a front of nearly four miles, from the region

north of Maurepas to the River Som HAND-TO-HAND FIGHTING Across the shell-pitted strip between the trench lines tore the pollus with what the French War Office describes as remarkable French War Office describes as remarkable dash. French troops from Maurepas took the village of Le Forest, directly east of it, while further to the south the village of Clery fell to the French. There was deadly hand-to-hand fighting in both villages, where the Germans had made of every cellar a fort. Whole underground cities had been dug, with passages for streets and dugouts for houses, but the French took them all.

The French troops in Le Forest pushed further north, and took all the German trenches from Le Forest to Combles. Between Le Forest and Clery they passed the road that connects these towns and took the German trenches at the other side.

the infantry had to scramble and fight the; way up a slope. The troops that took Le Forest had the longest advance to make, but those who fell were replaced by a second or a third wave that followed the first, and between waves ran the nettoyeurs, the "trench cleaners," who descended into the German dugouts and with their bombs "cleaned out" the survivors.

BRITISH ALSO PARTICIPATE

By night the reports began coming in from all the captured positions, which had been hidden all day by great clouds of smoke and dust from machine guns and exploding German shells. Putting these to-gether roughly, the report reached General Joffre that 2000 German unwounded pr.son-ers had been taken all along the front, with ers had been taken all along the front, with more probably to come. In the single sector of Le Forest 12 German cannon were taken and 50 machine guns. All the booty cannot be counted until today.

At the same moment that the French began their dashing attack the British in their left had "gone over" their trenches and started for the German lines. Their artillery fire had been accurate all the morning, when the men in the trenches had seen the British aeroplanes direct the guns where to fire and drive back German machines that tried to interfere.

The British on the extreme right of their line, where it meets the French, and the French there made the most important advance of the day, an advance that makes

CHARGE IN GAS MASKS

CHARGE IN GAS MASKS

From trenches in the outskirts of Guillemont the British sent forth thick clouds of black smoke, so that the Germans in their trenches could not see them. Then the British jumped out, and, wearing gas masks, dashed for the Germans with the bayonet. Long and anxiously the officers waited, and then came the news that the British had driven the Germans entirely out of Guillemont.

The British artillery went to work on the German lines back of Guillemont again and more infantry was sent into the captured village. The first troops had pushed on in the face of heavy fire from German machine guns and field artillery and did not stop until they had thrown the Germans out of all their trenches for 500 yards beyond the town.

Further to the north the British made progress in the village of Ginchy, on the Great Fires Reported Started in Raid That Ended in Smashing of Airship.

BERLIN, Sept. 4.—Great fires were caused and heavy damage was done in the Zeppelin raids over England Saturday, according to the following statement issued by the Admiralty today:

Ships of the Entents Allied fleet sank a German submarine yesterday off Phaleron. It is currently believed here that the Entents fleet desires to establish a navail base at Pirasus as a base of supplies for the Entents Allied armies' west wing on the Macedonian front, which could be more assily supplied by rail from Pirasus than from Salouica. Should this action prove to be of military value to the Entents Powers, the Greek Government, it is understood, will not object.

CONVENTION TO DECIDE SENATORIAL BATTLE OF DELAWARE DEMOCRATS

Bayard, Wolcott and Handy, All of New Castle County, Each Will Fail of Majority in Caucus

LITTLE HARMONY HOPE

WILMINGTON, Del., Sept. 4 .- According to best information obtainable the fight for the Democratic United States senatorial nomination will be thrown directly on the floor of the State Convention at Dover to morrow Seldom before have Democratic primary returns developed such a perplexity of contention. Of the three principal candidates in New Castle County-Thomas F. Bayani. Josiah O. Wolcott and former Congress. man L. Irving Handy-the last named appears to have won the greater number of delegates to his banner. The question, however, is whether he has gained a sumcient number for a majority in the county caucus which will be held tomorrow in Dover just before the convention. Present indications are that no one of the three will have a majority, which will mean that New Castle County will present no name to the Castle County will present no name to the convention with its solid support.

The Kent County caucus is expected to nominate Henry Ridgely, of Dover, Mr. Handy also is a resident of Kent, although he practices law in Wilmington. Susser County probably will cast its vote for Andrew J. Lynch, of Georgetown. From all of this it is readily deduced that unless the leaders of the rival candidates are able to get together on one tonight in Dover much confusion and bitter fighting is to be anticipated in the convention itself. It is known, of course, that the leaders are particularly anxious for harmony, as they are convinced the Democrats have more than an even chance not only of more than an even chance not only of defeating Senator Henry A. du Pont, the Republican nominee for Senator, but of electing a State ticket and swinging the State to Wilson. In this they are counting upon the prospective "third party" Republican ticket which is being engineered by Alfred I. du Pont, cousin of the Senator, under a "purify-the-party" propaganda.

An old feud between the present Democratic Senator, Willard Saulsbury, and excongressman Handy, and also between Saulsbury and Wolcott, who is at present the State Attorney General, also adds to more than an even chance not only of the State Attorney General, also adds to the complexity of the situation. Saulsbury is expected to throw his influence to Bayard, although there are re-ports that he would like to see a down-State man nominated and insure his own renomination two years hence.

Naturally the division of the State offices will hinge largely upon the outcome fices will lings largely set. It appears a of the senatorial contest. It appears a foregone conclusion, however, that Alfred F. Polk, of Georgetown, Sussex County. will be named for Congress if Sussex does not get either the nomination for Senator or for Governor. or for Governor.

Kent County claims the right to nominate the candidate for Governor and is centering its forces between James L. Hughes, of Dover, with John A. Saulsbury.

Hughes, of Dover, with John A. Saulsbury, also of Dover, "in the running."
For State Attorney General James M. Tunnell, of Georgetown, is putting up a stiff fight, but will have to overcome the support in New Castle County for Deputy Attorney General Armon D. Clayter, Jr.
