DEACON DORSEY HAS HELD HATS OF MANY MIGHTY PERSONAGES

Celebrates 39th Anniversary of Connection With Top-Piece Department of Union League—"Toppers" Going Out, Veteran Hatman Declares

Deacon Dorsey—Charles H. Dorsey, to use the proper but less familiar name—in celebrating the thirty-ninth anniversary of his connection with the Union League today by "jazz workin'."

Deacon Dorsey has been hat man there "ever since (that) was such a job," he says, and although he appreciates the responsibility of such an office he doesn't see any use of making a fuss about the anniversary.

The members of the club insist, however, that this is a real occasion in the history of the organization, and it was whispered about the clubhouse today that more than one multimillionaire broke the rule against tipping today just because it was Deacon's birthday.

Deacon has held the hat of every President of the United States since the term of Grant excepting Cleveland and Wilson, and as he explains it, "They're Democrats anyway and I'm one of them black Republicans."

John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Carnegie and J. Pierpont Morgan are just a few examples of the sort of men he has served.

"And they're gentlemen, every one of them," says Deacon. "The most important man always kindest to the humble folks."

Deacon Dorsey has a sense of humor and he remembers every joke and amusing incident in which he has been involved in the thirty-nine year. But the story he delights most to tell concerns ex-President Taft.

The late William T. Tilden, then president of the League, whom Deacon describes as the "most finest man that ever lived," was entertaining Mr. Taft at the club. They had dinner together and Mr. Taft was obliged to leave hastily to keep a speaking engagement.

Deacon had left just a moment to fetch a sandwich for himself, and the President couldn't wait.

So he reached for the hat himself as Deacon was returning. "Please let that hat alone; that belongs to the President," pleaded the negro.

"Well, I'm the President," responded his Excellency, surreptitiously presenting a new half dollar into Deacon's hand.

"I know," he explains, "cause I handles hundreds of 'em. Even on these State 'casion folks is wearing derbies moah and moah."

"The bigger the man the smaller the hat," is the way Deacon expresses it. He is also a student of styles and announces with an air of authoritative certainty that the high hat is a thing of the past.

GRAND DEFENSE, KAISER'S ANSWER TO FOES' DRIVE

The capture of the Rumanian fortress of Silistria is regarded as of special importance by the German and Bulgarian commanders.

The council is of vital interest to Germany, because it is believed that upon it depends the economic as well as the military welfare of the Teutonic allies.

The matter of food is a serious one in Germany, and more so among her allies.

Von Bethman-Hollweg will announce the result of the conference when he makes his opening speech in the Reichstag on September 23.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The greatest importance is attached to the present conference at the Kaiser's headquarters on the eastern front by correspondents stationed in Holland and Switzerland.

Besides the Kaiser, Chancellor von Bethman-Hollweg, King Ferdinand and Crown Prince Boris of Bulgaria and Enver Pasha, Turkish War Minister, several leading diplomats of the Central Powers are reported in consultation.

Rome heard from Swiss sources today that the Kaiser ordered King Ferdinand to attend the conference with the Crown Prince as hostages to give assurance that Bulgaria would not abandon the German forces within her boundaries to attacks by the Allies.

VARE AND DOYLE ARGUE ABOUT ARMOR PLANT

Continued from Page One. rens. Among the other Senators present to represent their States were Senator Chilton, of West Virginia, and Senator Swanson, of Virginia.

In a statement prepared by Representative Vane, as an argument for the location of the plant in Philadelphia, the attention of the Naval Board was called to the recommendations made by a congressional committee that an armor plate plant be located at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

Mr. Doyle presented a list of reasons as to why the plant should be located at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

"It is close to deep water, while at the same time it is adequately protected by reason of the fact that it is not directly on the seacoast," he said.

"It is the best labor market in the United States, where there is an abundance of high-grade mechanics, tool and mold makers.

"It is close to the manufacturers of guns, armor plate and shells.

"There is adequate space for this plant at the Philadelphia Navy Yard without the expenditure of a dollar for land."

Opens Its Doors—Friday

It has been a subject of some criticism of large stores that a busy man or woman is delayed in making purchases because of what was thought to be necessary clerical routine.

The New Earle Store has installed the latest electrical equipment, so that the purchaser may not only finish the transaction promptly, without waiting for clerical entries to be made, but by simply making the selection and obtaining the information as to the price, may depart from the counter.

Moreover, a battery of "on-the-minute" delivery wagons will deliver merchandise to any part of the city or suburbs, upon a moment's notice, either by phone or request at the counter.

Packages a purchaser desires to take away from the store can be wrapped, marked and delivered under the new system without any of the delays which heretofore have been so annoying in great stores.

In other words, when you enter this store, from the usher who receives you to the small errand boys, the watchword from all to you shall be "your service."

We believe that a department store can be made just as personal in its relations with its customers as was the habit in the old days of Philadelphia, when our Grandmothers went to one store for their muslin, another store for their dress goods, another shop for their boots and shoes.

You are cordially invited to examine our new store and see for yourself what we have done.
