Letters to the Editor of the Woman's Page

Dear Madam—When a person wishes to state one who has to do something, and if a person speaks loud does that mean that the person is a loud speaker? Does it mean that the person is a loud speaker? Does it mean that the person is a loud speaker?

MARION HARLAND'S CORNER

Plants to Exchange. I have a couple of requests to make. One is, will some reader exchange a small amount of salmon pink? I should like to exchange a red carnation for the species which you name as the century plant.

Helps Young Writers. In reply to Louise S. for a manuscript matter, I should like to state that the book she has been looking for is now in the ninth edition, and being frequently revised, is always up to date. Louise S. is no doubt a beginner at the art of writing, and I should like to suggest that she subscribe to a journal for literary workers, which gives the needs of a magazine editor, photographer, and writer with all practical suggestions that may be on at the time.

Author of a Poem. I was asked today if a poem, such stanza of which ends with "My mother," was written by the late James W. Riley. I can tell you that I have never seen the poem, and I do not know whether it is true or not.

Unexpected Guests—No Milk in the House. Such a situation does not trouble the woman who always keeps her pantry supplied with Eagle Brand Condensed Milk.

Beading in Colors. Beading in color and contrast with the bright colors of wool and silk jersey suits is the latest fad. Conventional designs, old-fashioned sampler patterns and stiff squares of circle outlined flowers are chosen for the bead work which appears on the left side of the coat, and at the cash ends, and on the pockets of coats and skirts alike.

Hints for "Stouts." If drapery makes the woman with the large hips appear to have smaller ones than heretofore, a few folds and slight drapery is an improvement rather than otherwise, but when they come to be distended by crinolines, whalebone, etc., they lose any semblance of grace and the amount of material required is exasperating.

ASK FOR and GET HORLICK'S THE ORIGINAL MALTED MILK. Cheap substitutes cost YOU more price.

SEEN IN THE SHOPS

SMART SERGE REDINGOTE

THIS redingote is one of the popular fall models. It is developed in navy serge with white satin, which forms an effective contrast on the collar and cuffs. A wide band of white plush adds an attractive note of color. The redingote features a yoke effect, which is outlined by cording, finished with large buttons similar to those adorning the sleeves.

The hat is a variation of the popular tam-o'-shanter. It is fashioned of black panne velvet with the brim of Lyons velvet. A band of black grosgrain ribbon in platted effect encircles the crown. A silver bird ornament adds distinction. In black or ordered in any color. Price, $6.50.

The name of the shop where these articles may be purchased will be supplied by the Editor of the Woman's Page, EVENING LEDGER, 408 Chestnut street. The request must be accompanied by a stamped self-addressed envelope and must mention the date on which the article appeared.

Keep Your Brushes Soft. It is impossible to overestimate the danger to the hair of unclean combs and brushes. Such toilet instruments should be carefully cleaned and disinfected once a week, and there is a way to do it so as not to injure them.

Breakfast Cape. An interesting rumor from Paris has it that for the lady of leisure who likes to sip her chocolate or coffee abroad there is a new little cape made of silk, or cretonne, or linen in pattern and coloring to match the wall paper or hangings of the bedroom.

Young people need clear complexions. If you find yourself "left out" because of a poor skin, and want a clear, fresh complexion, use Resinol Soap at least once a day. Wash thoroughly with a warm, creamy lather of it, then rinse the face with plenty of cold water.

Spats in all Wanted. Colors $1.75 and Up. An exquisite creation of beautiful lines, especially adapted to the wearing of spats—permitting them to fit snugly over it. In both patent and dull—$4.75 and up.

Resinol Soap. should be used by a little Resinol Ointment, in severe or stubborn cases. Resinol Soap and Ointment are sold by all druggists. For trial fee, write to Dept. 26-K, Resinol, Baltimore.

Walk-Over Russia Calf Walking Boot $6. Rich, deep shades, in Russia calf are particularly smart for early Fall wear.

GOOD FORM

Good form queries should be addressed to Deborah Rush, written on one side of the paper and signed, on the full name and address, though initials ONLY will be published upon request. This column will appear in Monday's, Wednesday's and Friday's Evening Ledger.

Tin Wedding. Dear Deborah Rush—What do you think would be an appropriate present to give to a married couple who have been married ten years for their anniversary?

The tenth wedding anniversary is the tin one. There are so many articles in tin or aluminum ware which are useful. I should advise your walking into the housefurnishing department of any store, and you will find articles from a five-cent tin spoon to all sorts of aluminum pans, pots and kettles for large sums.

Wedding Procession. Dear Deborah Rush—I see that in arranging a wedding procession you say the flower girls walk just ahead of the bride, and the maid or matron of honor follows, and again they are way up the aisle. Is it ever allowable to have the bridesmaids and the maid of honor in front of the bride instead of the flower girls?

Of course, there are variations from the manner set down in an answer to another letter in last Friday's column. Sometimes the little flower girls walk between the bridesmaids and ushers, and again they are placed between the bride and maid of honor, or again between the maid of honor and the bridesmaid.

Debutante's Frock. Dear Deborah Rush—I am giving my young daughter a small party next week. It will be her first party, and I am sure she will suppose in a way she is a debutante, though we are not society. What should she wear? MRS. T. C.

White is the most appropriate thing for a young girl to wear at her coming-out party. A dainty frock of georgette crepe, silk or organdie would be appropriate.

More Street Car Comment. Dear Deborah Rush—I have frequently read your column letter from readers regarding the growing habit of men to keep their seats in street cars when women are standing. Some of your readers it is unnecessary to say your masculine readers claim that one reason for their standing is that when they are frequently met with a stout glances and the so-called ladies to whom they have preferred it takes the seat with never a word of thanks.

I happen to be one of the above-named so-called ladies, and to give an example, the other morning I was riding in a cross-town car when a man gave his seat up to me. I looked at him and nodded, but before I could possibly thank him he had turned his back completely upon me and was reading his paper. What is one to do in a case like that? And I assure you they are frequent. So many men apparently want to do the right thing, but they are so fussed over the mere act of getting up and thus calling attention to themselves that they turn red and bury their faces in their newspapers rather than give a woman an opportunity to properly express her thanks. And it must also be remembered that no lady is going to make herself conspicuous by thanking a man in a very loud tone or staring at him several times for her or some one else will think she is trying to flirt with him.

Bertha has certainly made a good point here, as I have noticed the same sort of thing on many occasions. DEBORAH RUSH.

THE CHEERFUL CHERUB

Oh please excuse my back today I've had a mishap here My fountain pen just gave a sob And shed a sloppy tear.

Parting. Without one bitter feeling let us part; And for the years in which your love has shined A radiance like a glory round my head, I thank you—yes thank you from my heart.

Farewell for ever now! In peace we part; And should an idle vision of my tears Arise before your soul in after years, Remember that I thank you from my heart. —Adelaide Procter.

Curtain for Trunk. When staying at a hotel in traveling, spending the summer in the sometimes limited confines of a farmhouse bedroom, or even while visiting friends, one is often compelled to make daily use of one's wardrobe trunk.

The drawers hold the supply of lingerie, blouses and accessories, and the wardrobe side contains frocks and wraps. The trunk must stand open in order that things may be readily accessible, and because it is too heavy to be closed every time it is used; yet this standing open subjects the open section to the dust. To protect the garments hanging in the wardrobe, make a slightly full, heavy curtain of chintz or plain denim to match the interior finish of the trunk, and run it on the nickel or brass rod which holds in the hanger-rod. Make the curtain a foot longer than the trunk, so that it may be tucked in behind the bottom of the drawers or even in the open, should the trunk be left open. This will rise from the floor and settle down. This not only keeps the frocks fresh and the shoes free from dust, but gives the trunk a neater appearance when it stands open.

In an article in the Phila. Public Ledger, Saturday, Sept. 9, the following statement is made: "Our study of the disease convinces us that the malarial is not developed until it reaches the intestinal tract. The germs are carried into the stomach by food that has been contaminated."
