PLAN TO DEMOLISH CITY HALL OPPOSED

Municipal Finances Will Not Permit Project, Officials Assert

Because of the many costly projects planned by the city administration, the scheme to dismantle and demolish the $12,000,000 City Hall that now houses the not partitions, advanced by the municipal affairs committee of the Board of Trade, will receive no encouragement from Councilors of the heads of departments...

The plan to abandon the present costly and inadequate structure has been discussed from a number of angles by persons familiar with the fact that the present building is overcrowded to such an extent that stairways are now being used for offices and that stenographers and clerks are crowded into the least desirable spaces in many departments...

The idea of abandoning the hall entirely was given concrete form in the communication sent to Councils yesterday by the Board of Trade members favoring the change...

Separate buildings for municipal departments to be built along the line of the Parkway have long been advocated and, according to members of Councils Committee of Finance, constitute a dream of the future that may or may not be realized...

Many of the rooms on the upper floors have been finished and Councils no longer ago than last July appropriated more than $100,000 for completion and improvement of the building which the Board of Trade now advocates moving...

Among the municipal financiers who are in record as being convinced that the financing of the $114,525,000 loans will place the city in a position of being unable to contemplate any such monster project as a new City Hall are nearly all of the present members of Councils Finance Committee...

GERMAN PRISONERS OF WAR SEEM CONTENT "BEHIND THE WIRE"

Ellen Adair Interviews Troopers From Rhineland Mending Roads on Scottish Moorland—Many Apparently Glad to Be Free From Kaiser's Army

By ELLEN ADAIR

LONDON, Sept. 22.—It was up on a moorland road in Scotland that I first met and talked with a German prisoner-of-war. He was a good-looking young fellow in a carefully patched uniform, digging peacefully at the roadside under the escort of an armed guard...

Not very far away were about a hundred of his countrymen, working in leisurely fashion under the eyes of a few sentries. But it was the solitary prisoner who caught my attention. He was carrying out some "expensive" work in road-mending, and smiled as he worked...

TEUTONIC ETHICS! I confessed that I saw nothing in the least curious in the rescuing of a drowning enemy. "British tradition demands that sort of thing," I explained. "Wouldn't your officers have done the same?"

He shook his head, while a perplexed look came into his fine blue eyes. "Very few of them would," he said. "I don't see why they should."

I did not at the moment feel equal to expounding codes of ethics, but asked him if he was longing to return to fight.

"Never again do I wish to see a German battle-ship, nor hear the sound of a gun!" said he fervently.

And further along the road, in the prisoners' camp, there was much contentment. When the warriors returned from their day's work, they lit their pipes, read their magazines and books, played their little games and chatted interminably.

But there was no talk of war! If I might interpret the words of one much-battered and elderly German who had been captured during the horrors of Mons, they would run like the refrain of a once-popular song. "This is the Life."

I gather from these interviews, from stories told by officers on leave and from many varying circumstances, that prisoners are often only too willing to be captured—and at rest.

"Close to the battlefield," said a young British officer, "there is a busy road. It is employed not only for the wounded. Wedged in between two companies are a horseman with a Red Cross on his arm and a small, unkempt Boche hanging on to his stirrup."

"Fritz has a very slight head wound, and he is obviously the happiest man in the procession. You see, he is now on the way to rest and regular meals for the duration."

"He is bound for a well-wired-in inclosure not many miles behind the white lines. New wire—coils of it—has been made impossible for the inhabitants—by the inhabitants! Those within the wire frontiers have little more to do than proudly survey their work the livelong day. For the predecessors of Fritz built their own prison."

"My tour of the camp emphasized the iron discipline of the German soldier. Different States of the Kaiser's empire were represented, and, without exception, all the prisoners sprang to attention when I approached and remained rigid while being addressed."

"For disciplinary purposes, they are under their immediate superior. In this case the senior is a sergeant-major from a Rhineland infantry battalion—one of the two men who speak English. He stands no nonsense from his men."

"But that far the most interesting of the interned were a Red Cross private and a rakishly thin infantryman from Berlin. If you've ever shouted 'Water' in the grill room of a well-known London restaurant...

The genuine Pianola—for the price of an imitation

The Stroud Pianola at $550 gives you a player-piano with all the patented Aeolian features. This instrument contains not only the Themedist, but even the world-famous Metrostyle patent, which invention has caused such eminent critics as Paderewski and Rosenthal to pronounce the Pianola as "the best, unsurpassable, supreme."

In all, 312 patents protect the Pianola from imitation, but yet here is a style in the Stroud at a price much lower than that asked for undeniably artless imitations. Terms as low as $3 per week will be accepted on the Stroud; and even your piano will be accepted as part payment.

Remember, in purchasing the Stroud you secure an instrument made completely by the great Aeolian Company, the world's largest piano manufacturers.

The Aeolian Family of the player-piano world is on sale at Heppe's At Factory Prices as follows:

- Steinway Pianola.....$1250 Wheelock Pianola.....$750 Weber Pianola.....$1000 Stroud Pianola.....$550 Francesca-Heppe Player-Pianos.....$450 Aeolian Player-Pianos.....$395 Terms—Cash, or charge account, or rental-payment plan. All rent applies to purchase.
