A TRIPLE LAYER OF PASSENGER TRANSPORTATION TRACK
The new bridge for the Frankford elevated line has brought about this peculiar arrangement at Kensington and Lehigh avenues. On the ground are the street car tracks. Just above is the Reading Railway bridge, while overhead the "L" trains will cross at right angles.

YORK HOSPITAL PROUDLY EXHIBITS ITS UNIFORMS FOR NURSES
At the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, where the convention of the American Hospital Association is in progress, these dainty dolls are exhibited by the York (Pa.) Hospital, Dispensary and Training School, dressed in the uniforms of its three grades of nurses.

DAUGHTERS OF WEALTHY FAMILIES DO A 100-MILE "HEALTH HIKE"
Barefoot, they walked from South Woodstock, Conn., to Sharon, Mass., in four days as a "back to nature" experiment, which they found rough on the feet. They are pupils of a school of outdoor dancing.

COMPLETED SECTION MAKES FRANKFORD "L" LOOK LIKE BUSINESS
This is a view looking northward on top of the structure from Front and Berks streets. It gives evidence of a bigger and better transportation system for Philadelphia.

PICTURES FROM THE "OLD COUNTRY" ILLUSTRATE THE BEGINNING OF ROSH HASHANA, THE JEWISH NEW YEAR, WHICH WILL BE CELEBRATED TONIGHT
A grandfather and grandson at the entrance of a Susha, which comes immediately after the Day of Atonement.
A father and son bringing home a stranger for the holidays, in accordance with an ancient Jewish custom.
A family assembled around the table before the holiday meal. The grandfather is about to say the prayer of Kiddush, holiday grace.
A father and son, in the uniform of Russian postmen, bringing New Year's greetings to the children.
A young man speaking to his fiancée, expressing a wish for their mutual happiness and good luck in the future.
