

"BULL" MOVEMENT IN EGG BEVERAGES, WITH RISE IN MEAT

Fewer Go Down as Cost Goes Up.
Dealers Plead Rise in Other Products as Excuse

"SHELL" GAME "SCORED"

The drinks are going up. Therefore fewer are going down. Eggs themselves starting to rise in price a few days ago. No one seems to know why. There are not as many chickens around as ever, according to suburban statisticians, and they expressed no desire to join the New York strikers.

Considerable "enlightenment" was thrown on the egg situation today by a dealer.

"That's goin' up, ain't it?" he said; "well, yes, eggs is goin' up, too."

As cows or pigs do not lay eggs, and corned beef doesn't come from chickens, outside the fact that they eat corn, it was somewhat difficult to see the logic of the butcher man's philosophy.

The chief work of those who are connected with eggs in any way seems to be to "pass the buck." It, of course, reverts to the farmer, that indefinite individual, who has too far away for us to inquire about. To make matters worse, all kinds of eggs are going up—"fresh selected," "extra fresh," "nearly selected," "strictly fresh," and even the honest-to-goodness, ordinary, unadorned eggs, which always seem to be around.

The real classy fellows, which look as though they just came from the barn, and gave at you with a superior touch-me-not attitude, are not in the least dismayed at forty-eight cents a dozen.

Right here is a quick illustration of how the scarcity of eggs causes an increase in the price of milk. The Philadelphia drink, "egg and milk," used to be content to go for ten cents a glass, but with the price of eggs at four cents each (retail) the drink has jumped to fifteen cents. Which means that to be thoroughly consistent the cafes ought to sell milk at eleven cents a glass—but they don't.

If milk is five cents a glass and an egg is four cents, why not stick to the ten-cent figure and be satisfied with one cent a glass profit? Ah, no. For fear of losing the drink dealers shifted the price to the figure named with the result that the increase will help them reach the millionaire class at bigger leaps and bounds.

But that is not all—eggs and milk are bringing twenty cents a glass, and there are no medals on the egg end of it at that. Some fellows, to show their appreciation of their heart's choice, may give eggs as birthday presents. On the shell the fair maiden's initials could be scrawled. Attached to a string of beads these eggs would make a good necklace.

It would be necessary, of course, to be against wearing the eggs in crowds. Incidentally, it has been noted that because eggs are dear many maidens, who like things when they cost a lot, are casting longing eyes at placards, which announce egg drinks at fifteen, twenty, yes, and twenty-five cents a swallow.

All of which proves that the egg is the father of the best shell game ever.

MORALS COURT TO BE ESTABLISHED TO UPLIFT UNFORTUNATE WOMEN

Social Workers and Others Who Believe Offenders Should Have Chance to Reform Interested in Project

JUDGE BROWN IN CHARGE

Philadelphia will soon have a unique tribunal, the like of which no other city can boast. Not far from City Hall, where each day criminals of all stripes are put through the grind together with those whose offenses are trivial in comparison, will be a morals court for the regeneration of unfortunate women caught within the dragnet of the police or vice squad.

Social workers, charitably inclined women, judges and others who believe such women should be given an opportunity to see the error of their ways rather than be railroaded to prison, have endorsed the idea of the new court.

The new tribunal will occupy the remodeled Roberts Vaux School, Seventeenth and Wood streets, which was abandoned by the Board of Education several years ago. The operation of remodeling the building has been going on for almost a year. It will be completed within three weeks. The cost of the improvements is approximately $50,000.

Meanwhile, President Judge Brown, of the Municipal Court, who will preside over the morals branch, his associates and others interested in the innovation, are working out details for caring for women prisoners. It is proposed to deal with the problem of vice scientifically through the new court.

Women brought there will be examined mentally and physically, and those suffering from disease of any kind will be immediately sent to a hospital, where they will remain until cured. Social workers will thoroughly investigate the living conditions of prisoners and other points which will aid the judge in passing sentence.

One of the interesting points to the new court, and one not in operation in any other city, is the proposed parole system. Under this system women not old offenders will be released on parole, but must report regularly to a probation officer until the court believes they are reformed.

The new courthouse will be well equipped for the work it is to perform. The first floor will contain the judge's court, a room 40 by 30 feet. There will also be a large waiting room, a judge's room, clerk's room, keeper's room, two cells and a lavatory. The second floor will contain a general ward, two clinics, nurses' room, two private rooms for treatment of patients, rest room, matron's rooms and treatment room. A dormitory, sitting room, kitchen, storeroom, dining room, pantry and four private rooms will occupy the third floor. The basement will contain a large storeroom, cells and a steam-heating apparatus. A sterilization plant is housed in a newly-constructed building.

The misdemeanants' division of the Municipal Court was established June 25, 1915, under an act of Assembly.

An advisory committee, of which Theodore J. Lewis is chairman, will aid Judge Brown in the organization of the new court. Associated with Mr. Lewis in this work are Mrs. E. T. Stotsbury, Mrs. Robert M. Lenley and Mrs. Leon M. Hagedorn. Dr. Francis C. Van Gieson, a member of the Court Aid Society, will head the medical department of the new court.

THREW BRIDE FROM WINDOW; HANGS HIMSELF IN PRISON

New Yorker Commits Suicide Rather Than Face Trial

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—Facing a charge of attempting to murder his bride of two weeks by pushing her out of a sixth-story window of an apartment building, Isador Millrad hanged himself today in his cell in the Bronx County jail. He used a strip of bedding attached to the bars at the top of the cell.

Mrs. Lena Millrad, the suicide's widow, is rapidly recovering from the effects of her six-story plunge yesterday. She says he pushed her out of the window. A clothesline stretched across the court of the apartment building broke her fall and she is suffering from bruises only.
