third debutante tea of the week | beim. will be out on the Main Line today. and Katharine Hancock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hancock, will be the deb to be introduced this time. The tea will be given at the Radnor Hunt Club, and believe it is the first debutante tea that has ever been given at that most attractive of clubhouses, and the idea certainly seems good to me. It's so much less trouble to give a party away from the house. Just think of the bliss of being able to jump into your motor and ride home after an afternoon and evening of receiving and bowing and scraping and dancing, and not even have to think to have all cleared away, but to find the use quiet and no signs of the late fubilation! It is a great idea, believe me! Katharine will be surrounded by a beyy of other debs, figuratively speaking. She is a cousin, you know, of Caroline and Binney Brinton, who came out year before last, and May Brinton is another cousts. Katharine has been for the last several years at school at St. Mary's on-the-Hudson, an Anglican convent chool conducted by the Sisters of St Mary, which has become very fashlonable of inte. Betty Brook is another debatante who went to school there; so did Bessie Downs, who came out last year, and Helene Martin and Elizabeth mpson, and scores of others.

The tea this afternoon will be at 5 e'clock and the girls in the receiving party will be Suzanne Elliot, Katharine Lea. Elizabeth Packard, Mary Packard, Betty Brock, Violet Welsh, Betty Miller, Nancy Cook, Lorraine Graham, Mary Brooke, Harriet Biddle, Patty Borie, Sophie Baker and Anne Walker Meirs. not Waln nor Weightman as various persons designate her. She is named after her greataunt, Anne Weightman Walker Penfield, so it is well to get the name etraight.

Mr. and Mrs. Hancock will give a ball at the Bellevue-Stratford on Thursday evening, December 21, for Katharine, There seem to be no end of balls for the coming winter, after all; indeed, so far seems as if there would be more even than last year, and last year there were some few, you will admit.

Then this evening there will be the dinner-dance at the Philadelphia Country Club which Mr. Sydney Wright and Mrs. William Anthony Platt are to give for Emily Harris. Mrs. Platt will, of course, not be present owing to the death of Mr. Charles Platt, Jr., which occurred on Tuesday of this week, so Mr. Wright and Miss Pepper will do the receiving. Tomorrow Mr. Chambers and Katharine and Christine will give a tea for Emily Harris, who will spend the greater part of the winter here with Mr. Sydney Wright, who is her greatuncle.

Each little bride as she comes along naturally thinks her wedding the only one that ever was and her flance the only lover that ever lived, so to speak, but she does not usually express it in words. Still very few are what might be called responsible when attacked by the "grande passion," and so we are not astonished at what she proclaimed at the Postoffice last week. She was very particular about her invitations and insisted on mailing them herself, so she had the chauffeur drive her in to Ninth and Chestnut streets, and while he was handare first-class invitations." Now, what- Mrs. Caroline Atwater Mason, author of ever did she mean? Of course, we all know she is the luckiest girl in the world, having discovered the only man worth having, but still-first-class matter does not always mean first-class invitations, does it? However, we must forgive her, because she is "way, way off in a little world of her own," from which I hope she will not soon awaken if she ust awaken eventually. So let her enjoy it while she may.

The market day and country fair and alphabetical effect, whatever it all is, which is to be given for the benefit of St. Francis's Home for Convalescents at Darby, opened this morning at 10 o'clock and will continue tomorrow also. The women interested in the good work have certainly spared no pains to make this annual happening its usual success. The house will be open for the inspection of those interested, and luncheon, tea and supper will be served by the indefatigable restaurateurs and their aids. So as there will be eats, let's go.

Doctor Goat was on the wire and he told her to be careful of the powder he had given Billy Bumpus for his snoring. He explained that it was a very powerful snore powder, and that if any one snored it would stop them, but if some one took it who did not snore, it would make them snore.

Mrs. Bumpus understood.
If Doctor Goat could give her anything to make him stop snoring, she would be very grateful.
In a little while Biliy came home with the snore powder.

"Your troubles are over, wifte dear," he said as he put the bottle on the table. "A tenspoon, please."

Billy took a dose of the snore medicina and before he realized what had happened he was fast asleep in a chair.

But he did not snore.

Mrs. Bumpus was pleased at this, but she did not realize that she was to stay awake that night, too!

GERMANTOWN CELEBRATES 232D BIRTHDAY TODAY

Pastorius Brought First Settlers Over in 1683

Germantown is 232 years old today. It is the anniversary of the landing of the first party of German settlers who landed on the continent in 1683.

They came to this country to avoid a bitter religious persecution and organized the Frankford Land Company, purchasing a tract of land from William Penn. Francis Daniel Pastorfus, who led the colony to America and who was its recognized leader and law giver, directed the negotiations. Thirteen families from the Palatinate, who

Tioga Business Men Elect

At the annual meeting of the Tioga Business Men's Association last night, at 3543 Germantown avenue, the following officers were elected: President, Wilbur H. Zimmerman; vice presidents. Thomas Bluett and Edward Snyder, Jr.; secretary, Matthew Donoho; financial secretary, Edgar A. Hob-son, and treasurer, Jacob Loux. The assoclation which has nearly 500 members, is arranging for its fifth annual jubilee and industrial exhibition the week beginning october 30.

you would prefer that." Anstruther smiled and wrung his hand. There were some good fellows left in the world after all. The three officers acted in pure good nature. They were assisting a man apparently down in his luck, who would soon be called on to face other dificulties by reason of his engagement to a girl apparently so far removed from him in station. And the last thing they dreamed of was that their kindly loan was destined to yied them a better return than all the years of their naval service, for their fifty sounds had gone into the pocket of a pocential millionaire, who was endowed with the faculty, rare in millionaires, of not for-getting the friends of his poverty-stricken

At this moment I want to tell you, her father, why she could never, even under other circum-stances, marry Lord Ventner."
Then he proceeded to place before the astounded baronet a detailed history of his recent career. It was a sordid story of woman's perfidy, twice told. It carried con-viction in every sentence. At the conclusion Sir Arthur bowed his head between his hands.

Thus, for a little while, these two were friven apart, and Austruther disdained to arge the plea that not many weeks would chapse before he would be a richer man than his rival. The chief sufferer was Sir Arthur Deane. Had Iris guessed how her father was tormented, she would not have remained on the bridge, radiant and mirthful, while the gray-haired haronet gazed with stony-eyed despair at some memoranda which he extracted from the content of the content with stony-eyed despair at some memo-randa which he extracted from his papers. "Ten thousand pounds!" he muttered. Not a great sum for the millionaire finan-cier, Sir Arthur Deane, to raise on his note of hand. A few months ago men of-fered me one hundred times the amount on no better security. And now, to think that a set of jabbering fools in London should so destroy my credit and their own that not a bank will discount our paper unless they are assured Lord Ventner has joined the board! Fence me of all they are assured Lord Ventner than being the board! Fancy me, of all men, being willing to barter my child for a few pieces of gold!"

while he yielded to utter despendency, was quite true that a comparatively sm. amount of money would restore the stability of his firm. Even without it, were his credit unimpaired, he could easily tide ever the period of depression until the first fruits of his enterprise were garnered, men would hall him as a genius.

Wearily turning over his papers, he suddenly came across the last letter written to him by Iris's mother. How she doted on their only child! He recailed one night, shortly before his wife died, when the little Iris was brought into her room to kiss her and lian her infantile prayers. She had deand lisp her infantile prayers. Given back to him! For what-to marry that black-hearted scoundrel whose past-time was the degradation of women and the defaming of honest men? That settled it. Instantly the cloud was lifted from his soul. A great peace came upon him. The ruin of his business he might not be able to avert, but he would save from the wree that which he prized more than all else-is daughter's love.

The engines dropped to half speed—they were entering the harbor of Singapore. In a few hours the worst would be over. If Ventnor telegraphed to London his withdrawal from the board, nothing short of a cabled draft for ten thousand pounds would prevent certain creditors from filing a bank-ruptcy petition. In the local banks the baronet had about a thousand to his credit. Surely among the rich merchants of the baronet had about a thousand to his credit. Surely among the rich merchants of the port, men who knew the potentialities of his scheme, he would be able to raise the money needed. He would try hard. Already he felt braver. The old fire had returned to his blood. The very belief that he was acting in the way best calculated to secure his daughter's happiness stimulated and encouraged him. He went on deck to meet Irls skipping.

stimulated and encouraged him.

He went on deck to meet Iris skipping down the hatchway.

"Oh, there you are?" she cried, "I was just coming to find out why you were moping in your cabin. You are missing the most beautiful view—all greens and blues and browns! Run, quick! I want you to see every inch of it."

She held out her hand and pulled him gleefully up the steps. Leaning against the taffrail, some distance apart from each other, were Anstruther and Lord Ventnor. Need it be said to whom Iris drew her father?

"Here he is, Robert," she laughed. "I do believe he was sulking because Captain Fitzroy was so very attentive to me. Yes you didn't mind it a bit."

The two men looked into each other's yes. They smiled. How could they resist eyes. They smiled. How could they resist the contagion of her sunny nature? "I have been thinking over what you said to me just now, Anstruther," said the shipowner slowly. "Oh!" cried Iris. "Have you two been

"It is no secret to you—my little girt—"
Her father's voice lingered on the phrase. When we are on shore, Robert, I will explain matters to you more fully. Just now I wish only to tell you that where Iris

"You darling old dad! And is that what all the mystery was about?"

She took his face between her bands and kissed him. Lord Yentnor, wondering at this effusiveness, strolled forward.

"What has happened, Miss Desne?" he inquired. "Have you just discovered wist, an excellent parent you possess?"

The baronet laughed, almost hysterically. "Fon my honor," he cried, "you could not have hit upon a happier explanation."

His lordship was not quite extinted. "I suppose you will take iris to Smith's Hotel?" he said with cool impudence. Iris answered him.

"Yes. My father has just asked Robert to come with us—by inference, that is. Where are you going?"

That adrolt use of her lover's Christian name goaded his lordship to sudden heat. "Indeed!" he musried. "Sir Arthur Deane has evidently decided a good many things during the last hour."

"Yes." was the shipowner's quist retort." I have decided that my daughter's happiness should be the oblef consideration of my remaining years. All else must give way to it."

way to it."

The Earl's swarthy face grew rallow with fury. His eyes blazed and there was a tense vibrato in hir voice as he said;
"Then I must congratulate you, Muss Deans. You are fated to endure adventures. Having escaped from the melodramatic perils of Rainbow Island, you are destined to experience another variety of shipwreck here."

shipwreck here."

He left them. Not a word had Robert spoken throughout the unexpected scene. His heart was throbbing with a tremulous joy, and his lordship's sneers were lest on him. But he could not fail to note the malignant purpose of the parting sentence. In his quietly masterful way he placed his hand on the baronet's shoulder.

"What did Lord Ventnor mean?" he asked.
