

Evening Ledger PUBLIC LEDGER COMPANY EDITORIAL BOARD: CHAS. H. CURTIS, President; JOHN W. LEITCH, Vice President; JOHN W. LEITCH, Secretary and Treasurer; PHILIP B. QUINN, John H. Williams, Directors.

of the little Texas Midland road is $2,321,000, or about $400,000 more than the outstanding securities. These are the first appraisals that have been announced since the Commission began to make physical valuation of railroads under the direction of Congress.

PERSONAL government soon gave way to majority government in the early days, luckily for this Republic. It was the Democratic party which caused this swerve from oligarchy to democracy, that party which Mr. Wilson never tires of describing as the one party which has survived, which is the only party he believes will survive, its contemporaries.

When the Democratic party captured the House in the 1910 elections and elected a number of Democratic Governors, Mr. Wilson had no voice in the councils of the national party. He was merely one of the successful gubernatorial candidates, all of whom immediately wanted to be promoted to the presidency.

These men, it was to be supposed, were destined to share with Mr. Wilson the conduct of affairs. But as the political and diplomatic weather clouded over, all vanished from the scene. Even Bryan lost his mastery, got delusions, mistook a flock of insipid peace doves for the dogs of war and fed. Marshall, forgetting that he had been a favorite son candidate for the presidency, gave that last unheard of devotion to his chief by announcing that if the mantle fell upon his shoulders he would resign.

Not only are the representatives of the various sections and classes in the Democratic party to continue to be voluntarily subject to the President's will—he is even to name his successor in the event that he is incapacitated. Mr. Marshall would rather have Mr. Wilson's Secretary of State be first in line of succession. In vain has Mr. Wilson said, "There has been no Wilson policy. I did not lead these gentlemen, I merely went forward with them." Who are "these gentlemen"? Has Mr. Kitchin really led the House? Did Mr. Hay really handle military affairs? Is Senator Stone really the genius of the Administration's foreign policy? Not if they can help it will they be as described. It's sink or swim with Wilson; the angel that will save them or the goat to take the blame.

THE wretched drones who made their living off the earnings of unfortunate women as "professional bondsmen," shyster lawyers and "runners" have received what it is to be hoped is a final blow in the decision of Judge O'Connell. The Municipal Court had taken over these cases, and was dealing with them in a humane manner. The women were not imprisoned, but were put under the supervision of probation officers, who did excellent work in leading their charges back to decency, even finding honest work for some of them. It was almost incredible that an attempt should have been made to bring these cases back to the magistrature courts, where it was to the interest of the shyster syndicate to have them fined or threatened with imprisonment, so that it could put up a pretense of defending the women while all the time it was simply taking its toll from their earnings. But the attempt was temporarily successful. Now they are to go before the Municipal Court again, and the police court rats will go hungry.

of the little Texas Midland road is $2,321,000, or about $400,000 more than the outstanding securities. These are the first appraisals that have been announced since the Commission began to make physical valuation of railroads under the direction of Congress.

PERSONAL government soon gave way to majority government in the early days, luckily for this Republic. It was the Democratic party which caused this swerve from oligarchy to democracy, that party which Mr. Wilson never tires of describing as the one party which has survived, which is the only party he believes will survive, its contemporaries.

When the Democratic party captured the House in the 1910 elections and elected a number of Democratic Governors, Mr. Wilson had no voice in the councils of the national party. He was merely one of the successful gubernatorial candidates, all of whom immediately wanted to be promoted to the presidency.

These men, it was to be supposed, were destined to share with Mr. Wilson the conduct of affairs. But as the political and diplomatic weather clouded over, all vanished from the scene. Even Bryan lost his mastery, got delusions, mistook a flock of insipid peace doves for the dogs of war and fed. Marshall, forgetting that he had been a favorite son candidate for the presidency, gave that last unheard of devotion to his chief by announcing that if the mantle fell upon his shoulders he would resign.

Not only are the representatives of the various sections and classes in the Democratic party to continue to be voluntarily subject to the President's will—he is even to name his successor in the event that he is incapacitated. Mr. Marshall would rather have Mr. Wilson's Secretary of State be first in line of succession. In vain has Mr. Wilson said, "There has been no Wilson policy. I did not lead these gentlemen, I merely went forward with them." Who are "these gentlemen"? Has Mr. Kitchin really led the House? Did Mr. Hay really handle military affairs? Is Senator Stone really the genius of the Administration's foreign policy? Not if they can help it will they be as described. It's sink or swim with Wilson; the angel that will save them or the goat to take the blame.

THE wretched drones who made their living off the earnings of unfortunate women as "professional bondsmen," shyster lawyers and "runners" have received what it is to be hoped is a final blow in the decision of Judge O'Connell. The Municipal Court had taken over these cases, and was dealing with them in a humane manner. The women were not imprisoned, but were put under the supervision of probation officers, who did excellent work in leading their charges back to decency, even finding honest work for some of them. It was almost incredible that an attempt should have been made to bring these cases back to the magistrature courts, where it was to the interest of the shyster syndicate to have them fined or threatened with imprisonment, so that it could put up a pretense of defending the women while all the time it was simply taking its toll from their earnings. But the attempt was temporarily successful. Now they are to go before the Municipal Court again, and the police court rats will go hungry.

Tom Daly's Column MCAONI BALLADS LXVI The Caged Bird Giacomo Barpaga, lasta spreng Catcha seengin' bird upon a bush; Freckles on da breast an' brovna wing— How you call een Inglicke language? "Thrush!" Een Italia "torde" ces da scordi; Eet ces verra pretta seengin' bird.

Dear Tom—Here is a sign outside my regular room eating house uptown: DOCTOR WOLLAYVER, Stomach Specialist. Office hours: When hungry. F. K.

Dear Tom—First street car ads asked us to keep an eye on Tom Daly and now we're called upon to watch "Polly Daily" in the Evening Ledger. R. B.

Dear Tom—Here is a sign outside my regular room eating house uptown: DOCTOR WOLLAYVER, Stomach Specialist. Office hours: When hungry. F. K.

Dear Tom—First street car ads asked us to keep an eye on Tom Daly and now we're called upon to watch "Polly Daily" in the Evening Ledger. R. B.

Dear Tom—Here is a sign outside my regular room eating house uptown: DOCTOR WOLLAYVER, Stomach Specialist. Office hours: When hungry. F. K.

Dear Tom—First street car ads asked us to keep an eye on Tom Daly and now we're called upon to watch "Polly Daily" in the Evening Ledger. R. B.

of the little Texas Midland road is $2,321,000, or about $400,000 more than the outstanding securities. These are the first appraisals that have been announced since the Commission began to make physical valuation of railroads under the direction of Congress.

PERSONAL government soon gave way to majority government in the early days, luckily for this Republic. It was the Democratic party which caused this swerve from oligarchy to democracy, that party which Mr. Wilson never tires of describing as the one party which has survived, which is the only party he believes will survive, its contemporaries.

When the Democratic party captured the House in the 1910 elections and elected a number of Democratic Governors, Mr. Wilson had no voice in the councils of the national party. He was merely one of the successful gubernatorial candidates, all of whom immediately wanted to be promoted to the presidency.

These men, it was to be supposed, were destined to share with Mr. Wilson the conduct of affairs. But as the political and diplomatic weather clouded over, all vanished from the scene. Even Bryan lost his mastery, got delusions, mistook a flock of insipid peace doves for the dogs of war and fed. Marshall, forgetting that he had been a favorite son candidate for the presidency, gave that last unheard of devotion to his chief by announcing that if the mantle fell upon his shoulders he would resign.

Not only are the representatives of the various sections and classes in the Democratic party to continue to be voluntarily subject to the President's will—he is even to name his successor in the event that he is incapacitated. Mr. Marshall would rather have Mr. Wilson's Secretary of State be first in line of succession. In vain has Mr. Wilson said, "There has been no Wilson policy. I did not lead these gentlemen, I merely went forward with them." Who are "these gentlemen"? Has Mr. Kitchin really led the House? Did Mr. Hay really handle military affairs? Is Senator Stone really the genius of the Administration's foreign policy? Not if they can help it will they be as described. It's sink or swim with Wilson; the angel that will save them or the goat to take the blame.

THE wretched drones who made their living off the earnings of unfortunate women as "professional bondsmen," shyster lawyers and "runners" have received what it is to be hoped is a final blow in the decision of Judge O'Connell. The Municipal Court had taken over these cases, and was dealing with them in a humane manner. The women were not imprisoned, but were put under the supervision of probation officers, who did excellent work in leading their charges back to decency, even finding honest work for some of them. It was almost incredible that an attempt should have been made to bring these cases back to the magistrature courts, where it was to the interest of the shyster syndicate to have them fined or threatened with imprisonment, so that it could put up a pretense of defending the women while all the time it was simply taking its toll from their earnings. But the attempt was temporarily successful. Now they are to go before the Municipal Court again, and the police court rats will go hungry.

of the little Texas Midland road is $2,321,000, or about $400,000 more than the outstanding securities. These are the first appraisals that have been announced since the Commission began to make physical valuation of railroads under the direction of Congress.

of the little Texas Midland road is $2,321,000, or about $400,000 more than the outstanding securities. These are the first appraisals that have been announced since the Commission began to make physical valuation of railroads under the direction of Congress.

PERSONAL government soon gave way to majority government in the early days, luckily for this Republic. It was the Democratic party which caused this swerve from oligarchy to democracy, that party which Mr. Wilson never tires of describing as the one party which has survived, which is the only party he believes will survive, its contemporaries.

When the Democratic party captured the House in the 1910 elections and elected a number of Democratic Governors, Mr. Wilson had no voice in the councils of the national party. He was merely one of the successful gubernatorial candidates, all of whom immediately wanted to be promoted to the presidency.

These men, it was to be supposed, were destined to share with Mr. Wilson the conduct of affairs. But as the political and diplomatic weather clouded over, all vanished from the scene. Even Bryan lost his mastery, got delusions, mistook a flock of insipid peace doves for the dogs of war and fed. Marshall, forgetting that he had been a favorite son candidate for the presidency, gave that last unheard of devotion to his chief by announcing that if the mantle fell upon his shoulders he would resign.

Not only are the representatives of the various sections and classes in the Democratic party to continue to be voluntarily subject to the President's will—he is even to name his successor in the event that he is incapacitated. Mr. Marshall would rather have Mr. Wilson's Secretary of State be first in line of succession. In vain has Mr. Wilson said, "There has been no Wilson policy. I did not lead these gentlemen, I merely went forward with them." Who are "these gentlemen"? Has Mr. Kitchin really led the House? Did Mr. Hay really handle military affairs? Is Senator Stone really the genius of the Administration's foreign policy? Not if they can help it will they be as described. It's sink or swim with Wilson; the angel that will save them or the goat to take the blame.

THE wretched drones who made their living off the earnings of unfortunate women as "professional bondsmen," shyster lawyers and "runners" have received what it is to be hoped is a final blow in the decision of Judge O'Connell. The Municipal Court had taken over these cases, and was dealing with them in a humane manner. The women were not imprisoned, but were put under the supervision of probation officers, who did excellent work in leading their charges back to decency, even finding honest work for some of them. It was almost incredible that an attempt should have been made to bring these cases back to the magistrature courts, where it was to the interest of the shyster syndicate to have them fined or threatened with imprisonment, so that it could put up a pretense of defending the women while all the time it was simply taking its toll from their earnings. But the attempt was temporarily successful. Now they are to go before the Municipal Court again, and the police court rats will go hungry.

of the little Texas Midland road is $2,321,000, or about $400,000 more than the outstanding securities. These are the first appraisals that have been announced since the Commission began to make physical valuation of railroads under the direction of Congress.

of the little Texas Midland road is $2,321,000, or about $400,000 more than the outstanding securities. These are the first appraisals that have been announced since the Commission began to make physical valuation of railroads under the direction of Congress.

PERSONAL government soon gave way to majority government in the early days, luckily for this Republic. It was the Democratic party which caused this swerve from oligarchy to democracy, that party which Mr. Wilson never tires of describing as the one party which has survived, which is the only party he believes will survive, its contemporaries.

When the Democratic party captured the House in the 1910 elections and elected a number of Democratic Governors, Mr. Wilson had no voice in the councils of the national party. He was merely one of the successful gubernatorial candidates, all of whom immediately wanted to be promoted to the presidency.

These men, it was to be supposed, were destined to share with Mr. Wilson the conduct of affairs. But as the political and diplomatic weather clouded over, all vanished from the scene. Even Bryan lost his mastery, got delusions, mistook a flock of insipid peace doves for the dogs of war and fed. Marshall, forgetting that he had been a favorite son candidate for the presidency, gave that last unheard of devotion to his chief by announcing that if the mantle fell upon his shoulders he would resign.

Not only are the representatives of the various sections and classes in the Democratic party to continue to be voluntarily subject to the President's will—he is even to name his successor in the event that he is incapacitated. Mr. Marshall would rather have Mr. Wilson's Secretary of State be first in line of succession. In vain has Mr. Wilson said, "There has been no Wilson policy. I did not lead these gentlemen, I merely went forward with them." Who are "these gentlemen"? Has Mr. Kitchin really led the House? Did Mr. Hay really handle military affairs? Is Senator Stone really the genius of the Administration's foreign policy? Not if they can help it will they be as described. It's sink or swim with Wilson; the angel that will save them or the goat to take the blame.

THE wretched drones who made their living off the earnings of unfortunate women as "professional bondsmen," shyster lawyers and "runners" have received what it is to be hoped is a final blow in the decision of Judge O'Connell. The Municipal Court had taken over these cases, and was dealing with them in a humane manner. The women were not imprisoned, but were put under the supervision of probation officers, who did excellent work in leading their charges back to decency, even finding honest work for some of them. It was almost incredible that an attempt should have been made to bring these cases back to the magistrature courts, where it was to the interest of the shyster syndicate to have them fined or threatened with imprisonment, so that it could put up a pretense of defending the women while all the time it was simply taking its toll from their earnings. But the attempt was temporarily successful. Now they are to go before the Municipal Court again, and the police court rats will go hungry.

of the little Texas Midland road is $2,321,000, or about $400,000 more than the outstanding securities. These are the first appraisals that have been announced since the Commission began to make physical valuation of railroads under the direction of Congress.

of the little Texas Midland road is $2,321,000, or about $400,000 more than the outstanding securities. These are the first appraisals that have been announced since the Commission began to make physical valuation of railroads under the direction of Congress.

PERSONAL government soon gave way to majority government in the early days, luckily for this Republic. It was the Democratic party which caused this swerve from oligarchy to democracy, that party which Mr. Wilson never tires of describing as the one party which has survived, which is the only party he believes will survive, its contemporaries.

When the Democratic party captured the House in the 1910 elections and elected a number of Democratic Governors, Mr. Wilson had no voice in the councils of the national party. He was merely one of the successful gubernatorial candidates, all of whom immediately wanted to be promoted to the presidency.

These men, it was to be supposed, were destined to share with Mr. Wilson the conduct of affairs. But as the political and diplomatic weather clouded over, all vanished from the scene. Even Bryan lost his mastery, got delusions, mistook a flock of insipid peace doves for the dogs of war and fed. Marshall, forgetting that he had been a favorite son candidate for the presidency, gave that last unheard of devotion to his chief by announcing that if the mantle fell upon his shoulders he would resign.

Not only are the representatives of the various sections and classes in the Democratic party to continue to be voluntarily subject to the President's will—he is even to name his successor in the event that he is incapacitated. Mr. Marshall would rather have Mr. Wilson's Secretary of State be first in line of succession. In vain has Mr. Wilson said, "There has been no Wilson policy. I did not lead these gentlemen, I merely went forward with them." Who are "these gentlemen"? Has Mr. Kitchin really led the House? Did Mr. Hay really handle military affairs? Is Senator Stone really the genius of the Administration's foreign policy? Not if they can help it will they be as described. It's sink or swim with Wilson; the angel that will save them or the goat to take the blame.

THE wretched drones who made their living off the earnings of unfortunate women as "professional bondsmen," shyster lawyers and "runners" have received what it is to be hoped is a final blow in the decision of Judge O'Connell. The Municipal Court had taken over these cases, and was dealing with them in a humane manner. The women were not imprisoned, but were put under the supervision of probation officers, who did excellent work in leading their charges back to decency, even finding honest work for some of them. It was almost incredible that an attempt should have been made to bring these cases back to the magistrature courts, where it was to the interest of the shyster syndicate to have them fined or threatened with imprisonment, so that it could put up a pretense of defending the women while all the time it was simply taking its toll from their earnings. But the attempt was temporarily successful. Now they are to go before the Municipal Court again, and the police court rats will go hungry.

of the little Texas Midland road is $2,321,000, or about $400,000 more than the outstanding securities. These are the first appraisals that have been announced since the Commission began to make physical valuation of railroads under the direction of Congress.

Evening Ledger PUBLIC LEDGER COMPANY EDITORIAL BOARD: CHAS. H. CURTIS, President; JOHN W. LEITCH, Vice President; JOHN W. LEITCH, Secretary and Treasurer; PHILIP B. QUINN, John H. Williams, Directors.

of the little Texas Midland road is $2,321,000, or about $400,000 more than the outstanding securities. These are the first appraisals that have been announced since the Commission began to make physical valuation of railroads under the direction of Congress.

Tom Daly's Column MCAONI BALLADS LXVI The Caged Bird Giacomo Barpaga, lasta spreng Catcha seengin' bird upon a bush; Freckles on da breast an' brovna wing— How you call een Inglicke language? "Thrush!" Een Italia "torde" ces da scordi; Eet ces verra pretta seengin' bird.

of the little Texas Midland road is $2,321,000, or about $400,000 more than the outstanding securities. These are the first appraisals that have been announced since the Commission began to make physical valuation of railroads under the direction of Congress.

HELP YOURSELF NATIONAL POINT OF VIEW So far as the Hague convention for the protection of neutrals is concerned Greece concerns us more nearly than Belgium, though the internal affairs of Greece have given the Allies some excuse for the course taken.—Springfield Republican.

of the little Texas Midland road is $2,321,000, or about $400,000 more than the outstanding securities. These are the first appraisals that have been announced since the Commission began to make physical valuation of railroads under the direction of Congress.

The Northeast Corner Old Bill Terrell, on reading of Mr. Henry Clay Frick's purchase of Rembrandt's "An Old Woman Reflecting Over the Lament" suggests it possibly in a snapshot of Dutchmen. When thinking over the last Hughes speech.

THE AVERAGE NET PAID DAILY CIRCULATION OF THE EVENING LEDGER FOR SEPTEMBER WAS 115,663 Philadelphia, Tuesday, October 24, 1916.