

DIARY OF A WELL-DRESSED GIRL

A Blouse to Wear With the Winter Tailored Suit

Blouse of blue chiffon trimmed with head embroidery.

ALL DANCE at your wedding if you'll do something for me." This was Ethel Thompson's greeting as she met me at the milliner's yesterday. Ethel has always been so self-sufficient that I was interested to know what I could possibly do to aid such a capable person. After telling her that I'd be glad for the opportunity to do her a good turn, she continued: You know I ordered a blue tailored suit from the same tailor who made yours. It came home yesterday, and I suddenly awakened to the fact that I hadn't a blouse or hat to go with it.

materials so that we could begin the blouse that very afternoon. Ethel had ordered a hat of blue velvet, trimmed with sand-colored ostrich feathers. The color scheme was extremely smart. I suggested that we introduce a touch of sand on the blouse.

Armed with the materials and a pattern, we started for home, and immediately after lunch cut out the waist. I first made a lining of flesh-colored net. Then laying a piece of blue chiffon over the sand-colored length, I pinned the pattern to it and cut out the blouse.

Ethel basketed the sand-colored foundation together while I worked on the blue overblouse. I made three groups of tiny pinch tucks over the shoulders and stitched the seams together by hand. Ethel hand-stitched the seams of the sand-colored bodice and bound the armholes with a narrow bias fold of the chiffon.

Then I cut out the sleeves. They have bell-shaped tops with snugly fitted sub-sleeves. Each top sleeve is trimmed with two broad bands of the sleeve to hang free. I sewed the edges together, half way across and trimmed it with three blue crocheted bands.

Ethel made one sleeve and I the other, finishing them at about the same time. This was all we were able to accomplish the first afternoon. The following day I stitched the sleeves into the armholes, with only a suggestion of fullness. We had previously decided to trim the blouse with a delicate beaded design. I first made two drawings on tissue paper and basted them to the front of the blouse.

Then taking tiny red and blue beads I sewed them to the penciled outline, giving but three beads at a time. As the design was simple, it took but a short time to finish the beading. The back appeared rather plain, and I added a small beaded design just above the belt.

When this was finished I adjusted the blue blouse over the sand-colored one and the net lining. The sand-colored chiffon extends beyond the blue overblouse to form a vest, which is fastened with blue crocheted ball buttons. The effect is exceedingly smart. The turned-down collar is also sand-colored with a narrow border of blue.

The blouse harmonizes beautifully with Ethel's suit, and she looks lovely in it. Ted Hamilton has just dropped in to offer to help me with the decorations for my Halloween party. He certainly has splendid ideas, and is going to make some sketches. (Copyright.)

READING, Pa., Nov. 2. SAUERKRAUT trust has been organized here, to co-operate with the milk and bread interests in raising prices. A few years ago sauerkraut retailed at five and six cents a quart. Now it is fifteen cents.

CHICAGO, Nov. 2. The lowly doughnut has succumbed to the high cost of living in Chicago. In many of the downtown cafeterias where three doughnuts heretofore could be had for five cents, only two were served today.

EASTON, Pa., Nov. 2.—John R. Day, sixty-nine years old, of Easton, one of the oldest and best-known passenger conductors on the New Jersey Central Railroad, was found near the Phillipsburg station this morning with both legs crushed and internal injuries. He died an hour later in the Easton Hospital. No one witnessed the accident and it is thought that he was struck by a drill engine.

SUFFRAGISTS CALL STATE CONVENTION

Big Meeting November 21 at Williamsport to Prepare Amendment for Next Assembly

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 2.—Announcing that they will introduce a woman suffrage amendment bill in the 1917 session of the Legislature preliminary to another referendum in 1920, an official call has been issued from headquarters of the Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage Association here, summoning all suffragists to a State convention, to be held at Williamsport, November 21, 22, 23 and 24.

The "call" emphasizes the growing strength of suffrage, the woman suffrage plank adopted by all the national political parties, the endorsement by all presidential candidates, and in its preamble says:

Periodically, in every great patriotic and progressive movement, it is deemed wise for all adherents to gather under the common standard they have raised and followed, to take counsel—conferencing retrospectively concerning accomplishments recorded; but prospectively to measure the reserve strength of each which, combined, is the strength of the organization, and, basing future work upon these assets, to plan anew a concerted action devised with the hope that it will result in ultimate victory.

The annual State convention of the suffragists is their largest gathering, and is attended by delegates from every section of the State, including leaders widely known. At the Williamsport convention there will be notable guests, including Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, honorary president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association.

Home-Made Bread Costs Less
We are showing conclusively in our daily bread-baking demonstrations, at the Pure Food Show in Horticultural Hall (Broad Street below Locust) and in our show windows at Broad and Arch Streets, that by baking bread at home in a gas range you can save one and eight-tenths cents a loaf over a baker's 5-cent loaf of the same weight.
As a result of these demonstrations many housewives are proving our claims most satisfactorily in their own homes.
If you have not been able to attend one of these demonstrations, telephone or write us to send an instructor to your home to show you exactly how this saving is accomplished. This service is absolutely free to you.
