

ILL COOK THAT DINNER AND WIN THE $10,000, BRYN MAWR GIRL SAYS

Miss Helena Zinsner Assures Reporter Her Previous Efforts Brought No Disaster to Dinners

WILL DEMAND THE TEST

A homey little girl, with hair the color of ripening rye and frank blue eyes with just a sparkle of fun in their depths, told today how she was going to win $10,000 by cooking a good old-fashioned dinner for twelve persons without giving one of them indigestion.

This girl is Miss Helena Zinsner, freshman at Bryn Mawr College and daughter of Dr. Hans Zinsner, a widely known physician of New York. The will of Miss Zinsner's grandfather, August Zinsner, who died in New York October 12, allowed each granddaughter $10,000 if the granddaughter between the ages of seventeen and twenty-one could cook a dinner for twelve and serve it in a dress self-made.

Miss Zinsner was interviewed as she was walking from Radnor Hall to a recitation room. There was everything about her appearance to suggest the future successful housewife. She wore a neat and well-fitting blue skirt and a white shirtwaist, which was delightful in its simplicity. Her clothes had a certain unmistakable touch of originality, which suggested that she might have made them herself. She carried three textbooks under her left arm.

"Do you expect to be able to cook a dinner for twelve persons without giving any of them indigestion?" she was asked. "Fun glinted in the eyes of the girl, but her chin was thrust out at an angle which bespeaks determination.

CONFIDENT OF WINNING

"Why, of course, I can," she said. "It will be the easiest thing in the world for me to win that $10,000. I am not a novice at cooking by any means. I have already done a lot of cooking on camping trips and I once cooked a full-course dinner for four hungry persons."

"Did those four persons—er—you know—survive?" No offense; I mean did they like the dinner?"

Miss Zinsner laughed merrily and two girl companions giggled.

"Like the dinner—of course, they did. As far as I know they are alive and well today."

"When do you expect to cook that dinner? Have you thought about the menu? Have you selected the twelve persons who will eat the dinner? Are you going to tackle roast turkey, chicken or give your dozen guests duck or roast beef? How about entrees of peas, tomatoes, etc? What kind of a dinner will it be?"

Miss Zinsner did not appear the least bewildered as the questions were fired at her.

FOUR YEARS TO PICK MENU

"I am not worrying about that at all," she said. "She added rather whimsically, 'You see, I am very young yet, only seventeen, and I have four long years in which to select my menu and bughish up my cooking. And then I'll cook that dinner and win the $10,000.'"

"I couldn't serve the dinner right now anyway on account of the prevalence of infantile paralysis in New York. I can't go home now on that account."

"I was not at all surprised by the provisions in grandfather's will. He told his granddaughters two years ago what the provisions would be. He was a dear, practical old man, and his granddaughters idolized him."

The will of August Zinsner also provides that the granddaughters must cook and serve the dinner in a self-made dress. Asked about this, Miss Zinsner said, "This is the easiest provision of all. I will have no trouble about that, for I have made many simple dresses and gowns for myself." The other granddaughters are Ellen, a junior at Smith College, who has already passed the test and got the money; Peggy, also at Smith, and nine-year-old Margaret, who is still too young to even talk about cooking dinners for twelve. Peggy hasn't passed the test yet. Ellen says she won by building her dinner around chicken.

LARGE EXPORTING FIRM OPENS OFFICES HERE

Bernard Judae Company, of New York, Sees Great Opportunities of Philadelphia

Opportunities offered by the port of Philadelphia, which, in view of the loyalty and co-operation of merchants and business men, will speedily improve, have induced the firm of Bernard Judae Company, exporters and importers, of New York and Chicago, to open an office in this city.

In order to get thoroughly in touch with business conditions the company today appointed Joseph E. Schell, manager of the Philadelphia office. An resident of this city for many years, he has been extremely interested in the development of the port and has taken an active interest in bringing about improvements in this direction.

Mr. Schell has been connected with the largest industrial railroad and steamship business in the city, and the experience thus gained will equip him to discharge his new duties with undoubtedly good results.

Business men regard the action of the Judae company in opening an office in this city as a happy augury and believe their invasion here will be followed by other concerns who believe in progress and realize the city's opportunities.

To Prison for Accidental Killing

An indeterminate sentence of three to thirty years' imprisonment was imposed this morning by Judge Garrison in the Supreme Court at Camden on John Candelori, twenty-one years old, formerly of 1028 Ellsworth street, Philadelphia, for the killing of Angelina Piccone, a sixteen-year-old girl of Waterford, N. J., on June 12 last. Candelori offered no defense to the indictment charging manslaughter. Candelori was spending a few days with the Piccone family at their Waterford home, helping to pick berries, when the shooting occurred. He was handling a revolver in a playful way, according to witnesses, when he accidentally pulled the trigger, killing the girl.

BANDIT HUGHES, ALIAS WILSON, CAPTURED BY TRAILERS IN SWAMP

Negro Seized by Posse and Taken to Bedside of Farmer He Is Said to Have Shot

WAS HEAVILY ARMED

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 2. — Charles Hughes, alias Wilson, the big negro bandit, of this city, for whom the State police and the police of this city and county were searching since Saturday night, was captured at Tremont, twelve miles from this city, late last night. He had been hiding in a swamp where he was later surrounded by a posse of armed citizens. The police turned the headlights of the automobiles toward the swamp by which way were enabled to see their way through the dense underbrush and trees, and finally Sergeant Snyder saw Hughes crouching behind a tree and the bandit was captured, he offering no resistance, although well armed.

Captain Hagstine, of the city police, and Sergeant Snyder, of the State police, brought him to the county prison here shortly before midnight.

Prior to his commitment he was taken to the Pottsville Hospital to be identified by Daniel Wagner, the Tumbling Run farmer, whom the police claim Hughes shot on the highway near Middleport, on Tuesday afternoon. Wagner, who, it is feared, is fatally wounded, was semiconscious and failed to identify the prisoner. Hughes stoutly denies the crime. He also denies the other charges the police lodged against him, namely a pistol duel with Policeman Sutko in a swamp at Tamaqua on Tuesday, and taking a pistol from Policeman Malley earlier that day. The stolen gun, one of the two three-calibers in his possession, was identified by Malley as that taken from him by Hughes. Besides these weapons he had thirty cartridges and a long, sharp piece of steel.

WRIT ALLOWED THOMPSON Argument on New Trial to Be Heard Next Tuesday

Judge Garrison, of the State Supreme Court sitting in Camden today allowed a writ to show cause why George E. Thompson, who was found guilty on Wednesday of murder in the second degree for his part in the killing of Isaac Hibbs, a jailer of the Camden prison, on July 17, should not be granted a new trial. The writ will be returnable next Tuesday.

In making the application for the writ, Joseph Beck Tyler, counsel for Thompson, said there was nothing in the evidence to warrant a conviction for murder, and that at most the conviction should be for manslaughter. At the trial this morning the setting of a date for the execution of Wilson Ashbridge was postponed pending the conclusion of the trial of Thompson, in which Ashbridge will be wanted as a witness.
