STRENGTH FOR THE WEAK My Dear Children-I wish today to call your attention to just two sayings: One-"My parents do nothing for me." Two-"My parents do everything for me." Let us go back to nature and see what happens there. The mother bird pushes her darling out of the nest and the little bird flies, too. The way to learn is by trying!

Suppose Mrs. Fish tried to read to her little son the directions for swimming-would the dear little fellow learn? Some day your parents will be gone. This is not a prophecy, for all parents

Listen to what a wise man says: "If a parent does everything for a child, the child probably will never do anything for himself. It is Nature's plan-she seems to think that no one needs strength excepting the struggler, and being kind, she comes to the rescue; but the man who puts forth no effort remains a weakling to the end." FARMER SMITH, Children's Editor. Lovingly,

By Farmer Smith

Handsome Harry, the paper doll, thought Graceful Gertrude was so bright to know Handsome Harry, the paper doll, thought Graceful Gertrude was so bright to know where paper dolls came from that he thought and thought in an effort to find out where paste came from. Did not their Little Mistress use paste all the time?

He. Handsome Harry, would find out where paste came from and then he would be bright like Graceful Gertrude, who knew where paper dolls came from.

One night when all was still he crept into the big library and found a book which told everything—yes, everything in the world, except one thing, and that one thing had never been told in any book, and that one thing was, where paste came from.

However, Handsome Harry was not to be outdone and po he went to the paste out which was on the desk in the library and said:

"Oh, Paste Pot, live forever! Tell me where paste came from."
The lid slowly uncovered from the paste pot and up came the brush. "I know where paste came from." said the brush, clearing its throat.

P. S .- I wish you would put the above quotation in your scrapbook. no graus on the earth and the ground was bald like your Uncle Jimmy, there lived on the Edge of the World a very, very she called "Paste." No one had ever heard of that name before.

The only trouble with Paste was, he could not stop talking—he talked and he talked and it seemed to his poor mother that he never would stop.

One day she became so tired of his talking that she took some dough which she was making and plastered it over poor Paste's mouth and—strange woman who had an only son whom she called "Paste." No one had ever heard of that name before

HE NEVER COULD OPEN HIS MOUTH AGAIN. AGAIN.

The poor boy's mother cailed upon all the wise men in that part of the world, but none of them could tell her what to do, BUT one of these wise men discovered that flour mixed with water made a sticky substance which would hold things together, and when he went back to his own part of the world he mixed some flour and water and made something which he cailed "paste," after the boy whose mother had abut his mouth with the material with which she made her broad.

And from that time even to now, this very minute, this mixture has always been called "paste."

This, then, is the story the brush in the paste pot told Handsome Harry and he told it word for word to Graceful Gertrude and the other paper dolla and so now they and you, and everybody, for that matter, know just how we came to have PASTE.

Esther and Ruth Miller, of Rexborough, and Thelma Baghurst, of Telford, Pa., received a very lovely letter from a lady in the hospital this summer for some "sunshine" they tried to spread in her path. Here is the letter in part: "I want to thank you for your very nice letter and the pretty cards. My dear little friends, I often think of you and hope you will always be well and strong. You must have a dear mother and I am sure she is proud of you. Farmer Smith's Rainbow Club has a very pretty name and his little members surely do put sunshine into the world."

Madeleine Magee and the other little Magees, who number four in all, lost their very dear mother just before last Christmas and she and the others are living in Uncle Billie's house in Mt. Airy, where they are very happy indeed. Not so long ago Uncle Billie bought his little charges lots of children's books. Madeleine is very fond of reading. Here are some of the books she has read:

"Aesop's Fables," "Pollyanna," "Knights of the Holy Grail," "Oz" books, "Princess and Curdie," "Georgina of the Rainbowa," "The Master's Violin," "The Dutch Twins" "The Master's Violin," "The Dutch Twins" "The Master's Violin," "German Fairy Tales," "The King of the Golden River," "Under the Lilacs," Alcott; "The Daring Twins," Baum; "The Little Lame Shepherd" and "David Copperfield."
