

CADORNA RICONQUISTA LE TRINCEE EVACUATE

Le Forze Serbe, Francesi, Russe ed Italiane Sono Giunte ad Appena Quattro Miglia da Monastir

VON MACKENSEN RIPIEGA

Il Ministero della Guerra pubblica ieri sera il seguente rapporto del generale Cadorna:

Sulla fronte del Trentino l'artiglieria è stata attiva da ambo le parti. Nella zona della valle dell'Adige e nell'alta valle dell'Isarco colonne di truppe e truppe di trasporto non sono state bombardate e disperse dalle nostre batterie. Sulla fronte della Carnia aeroplani nemici lasciarono cadere bombe sulla stazione di Carnia senza causare alcun danno. Su Moggio Udinese dove uccisero due donne e ne ferirono tre. Sulla sponda di San Marco, ad est di Gorizia, appoggiate al fuoco delle nostre batterie che stesero una cortina tra noi e le posizioni nemiche, le nostre truppe ricopiarono nella giornata di ieri la giornata di martedì. Durante la notte il nemico tentò un violento attacco di sorpresa per cacciare di nuovo da quelle posizioni. Ma esso fu completamente respinto.

Sulla fronte del Carso si sono avute azioni di artiglieria.

Ad Udine non abbiamo migliorato la nostra linea mediante una leggera avanzata. Seguito a piccoli scontri noi facemmo alcuni prigionieri e prendemmo il nemico due morti da trincee.

Aeropiani nemici hanno lasciato cadere nella zona del Vallone, sulla fronte del Carso, ma non hanno fatto alcun danno.

ALLE PORTE DI MONASTIR

Le forze serbe sono giunte alle porte di Monastir insieme con le forze francesi e con l'aiuto dei contingenti italiani. Le forze bulgare e tedesche sono state costrette a ritirarsi dalla formidabile linea di difesa di Kenali in seguito ad una riuscita manovra di fiancheggiamento. Le forze franco-russo-italiane e bulgare-tedesche hanno dovuto passare il fiume Viro, così che i francesi, i russi e gli italiani trovarono a Monastir, nella zona di Kenali, una linea di difesa di circa tre chilometri. La caduta di Monastir ci aspetta da un giorno all'altro. I serbi sono pure avanzati sulle montagne del Carso. Il ripiegamento delle forze bulgare-tedesche sulla fronte di Monastir è ammesso anche dal Ministero della Guerra tedesco. Le notizie che esse si sono ritirate in posizioni preparate in precedenza, ed è ammesso anche da Sofia.

NELLA RUMANIA

Intanto sotto la pressione di grandi forze austro-tedesche del generale von Falkenhayn le truppe rumene hanno dovuto ancora cedere terreno sulla fronte della Transilvania e precisamente nella valle dell'Alt e in quella del Jiu. A nord di Kimpulung, per gli austro-tedeschi, si sono aperte le porte di un'offensiva nella zona del passo di Perad. Sulle montagne della Transilvania si sono avute forti nevicate ed il freddo è intensissimo.

Sulla Dobruja le forze di von Mackensen sono ancora in ritirata, incendiando i villaggi che sono costretti ad abbandonare.

Bucarest è stata attaccata di nuovo da aeroplani tedeschi che vi hanno lasciato cadere venticinque bombe. Quattro borghesi sono rimasti uccisi e venti feriti.

KANSAS LOSING CHURCHES

Five Hundred Houses of Worship Abandoned in Small Places in the Last Five Years

If the chances of the last few years continue, rural churches in Kansas may soon be no more. They are rapidly disappearing. Five hundred places of worship, centers and larger village churches with better equipment, which are more democratic, more influential, and less denominational. According to the Rev. Fred E. Gates, who has been investigating these problems for the Kansas Sunday School Association, about 800 rural and small town churches have been abandoned in Kansas in the last five years.

"At least one-half of these churches should have been abandoned," said Mr. Gates. "As a matter of fact, a large proportion of these never should have been built. A lack of support and a failure to make the rural church the most powerful influence in the community have driven out the other half. A large percentage of those I have on my list as abandoned were in small towns or communities where there were churches already established, and only enough persons in the community to support one church properly."

Not long ago I visited a small town with three churches and a pool hall, and at a general meeting of the members of the three churches I told them that what the town needed most was another pool hall. The criticism of my remark was unusually sharp and pointed, but they cooled off when I told the church members that there really should be another pool hall, as the people of the town required three churches in which to worship, and it certainly could not be expected that those who could not worship together could play pool together. There is just one big powerful church in that town now, and no pool hall."

Prof. E. L. Holton, in charge of the rural extension department of the Kansas Agricultural College, has often advocated the abandonment of rural and small town churches, which are so small that they could not properly support a minister and the church. These churches were capable of accomplishing much good years ago when horse-drawn vehicles limited the area of communication, but the motorcar, higher education and the rural mail route have brought about great changes in the rural districts everywhere.

There are nearly 30,000 motorcars in Kansas. More than sixty per cent are owned by farmers, and this has greatly extended the social activities of the rural population. The great increase in the number of young folk attending the schools and colleges has brought a desire for better sermons and more social life, and the motorcar makes this possible.

THEY USED TO DO IT

Dressing Was More Popular in 1830 Than Now

Women today are constantly being accused of paying more attention than ever before to dress and to the thousand and two nuances of the moment's fashion, says Collier's Weekly. But here is a fashion from the New York Evening Post of 1830.

First Evening Dress—A gown composed of gros de Indes; the color a new and beautiful shade between lilac and lavender. Corset, white, nearly concealed by lace. Neck, composed of white blond net, draped a mile pila, and trimmed with a triple roll of the richest English blond lace. As arranged as to form the center at the bottom of the waist before and behind; it is set on narrow, and with little fulness at the bottom of the waist, but broader, and with more fulness at the shoulder. The corsage is cut round the upper part, so as to come nearly, but not quite, to the throat, and the fulness is gathered into a row of broad settling-in lace. Above a la Marie de Medici, with blond lace. Head-dress, a crepe hat trimmed with the inside of the brim with gauze ribbons, the crown is ornamented with nooses of ribbon disposed on position, with a bouquet of white roses placed in the center. The real truth is that the women of 1830 were so taken up with important topics like politics, science, education, and religion, that they never had time to have had any attention left to give to such trifles as their attire. It is a pity that the women of today are so much more interested in their dress than the women of 1830.

GERMANS TOLD HOW TO LIVE ON LITTLE

Imperial War Food Bureau Lecturer Tries to Convince the Hungry in Germany That They're Better Off

CHILDREN UNDER FED

In connection with recent reports from Germany to the effect that the restrictions in the consumption of food due to war conditions have had a beneficial influence upon the health of many inhabitants of the Fatherland, especially those who were inclined to overeat before the war began, comes a story told by the Imperial War Food Bureau in sending Prof. Ismar Boas, one of Germany's authorities on food values, through the empire lecturing before women's associations on "How One Can Almost Live on Nothing." The Berliner Vorwaerts remarks that, while the learned professor virtually proves that a person can live on almost nothing, it seriously doubts if such a life is worth living.

In one of his recent lectures, as reported in the German newspapers and summarized by the London press, Doctor Boas declared that his main object really was to dispel the prevailing apprehension that there was any danger of the national health being impaired by undernutrition. He contended that one could speak of undernutrition only when the pre-war standard was accepted as normal. As a matter of fact, the pre-war standard was overnutrition, and if in a vast number of cases war food had resulted in diminishing gain and weight, the results were really blessings in disguise which should not be taken tragically.

QUIT FOOD IDOLATRY

It was only permitted to speak of undernutrition when loss of weight and emaciation was accompanied by loss of physical and mental powers, and, for so far, no deterioration in these respects was noticeable. Professor Boas's great authority on the ability to exist on next to nothing is a Danish food expert named H. H. Hede, who for several years supported himself and his family on potatoes, bread and butter, and fruit, at a cost of a trifle over 6 cents a day per person. Herr Boas asks the Germans to follow the example of the Dane and "throw to the winds their idolatrous veneration for certain foods which they falsely regard as rich in albumen."

"Just think," said Doctor Boas, "what we might be able to do were we to get rid of this food idolatry. It would take some time to accustom ourselves to living on almost nothing, but the result would be that at this point we shall have obtained a striking victory over ourselves, and from an economic point of view the gain will be immense."

The women of the empire, he was addressing audibly expressed disapproval of this, but the professor had come provided with figures and showed them that the human body daily requires only 2,500 calories. In 2,500 grams of potatoes, as well as in 2,500 grams of beef, or in thirty-five eggs. And the price of the potatoes was only 3 cents, whereas the beef cost $2.00 and the beef $4.00. Beans were fine, he said. You could get your 2,500 calories in 825 grams of beans, and the cost, even at war prices, was only 15 cents.

DISORDER ENDS MEETING

One woman in the audience told the lecturer that, according to his theory, the less the nation ate the healthier the people would become. Herr Boas did not think that this was a fair deduction. He referred to extremes, a remark which the women greeted with laughter.

The meeting is said to have ended in some disorder. Herr Boas, as he left the platform, had some caustic remarks addressed to him about his food theories.

In the course of an interview with a representative of the local press, he said that Frank D. Gorham, who has just returned from a nine months' stay in Germany as a member of the American Physicians' Expedition, which is doing good work in several hospitals in the Fatherland, after ascertaining that the food problem in Germany had been solved in a satisfactory manner, is quoted as saying: "But in all this (the food regulation) there is no danger for the Germany of today. It is the coming generation that will have to suffer from the consequences of the shortage of food. The young persons are undernourished. This doesn't mean that the children have to go hungry. They have enough to satisfy their appetites. But their food is not made up in a way calculated to satisfy the demands of a growing body. Many of the substitutes, the artificial foodstuffs, fulfill their purpose very well for the moment, but the body is not so strong as it would be under normal conditions."

Doctor Gorham confirmed the reports that there was a serious shortage of doctors in Germany.

BADGER CHIPS STONE AX

Old Wisconsin Pioneer Goes Back to Stone-Age Ancestors'

H. L. Skavlem, of Janesville, Wis., will chip an Indian arrow head or stone ax for you while you wait. Already versed in the lore of botany, geology and anthropology, Mr. Skavlem turned his attention a few years since to the subject of Wisconsin Indian archeology. Doubtless he inherited the new study was quickened by the fact that on his farm on Lake Koshkonong is an Indian village site which for fifty years has constituted a fruitful hunting ground for the characteristic remains of the departed race. At any rate, he has developed some interesting theories, the proof of which he prepared on occasion to demonstrate to the satisfaction of the museum.

Mr. Skavlem holds that the white man of today, using only Stone Age implements, can make the stone axes, arrow heads, and other characteristic utensils of the Stone Age period as well as the primitive man himself could do. Armed only with a piece of bone he fashions an arrow head in two or three minutes' time, explaining the while the obstacles which the primitive artisan had to overcome.

In thirty minutes he fashions a stone ax, again employing only the tools of the Stone Age worker. More remarkable than the ability to make these things is the ease and dispatch with which they are produced.
