FARMER SMITH'S RAINBOW CLUB

WHAT CAN YOU DO?

Do you know that we have received for our CHRISTMAS RAINBOW EX-HIBITION the daintiest, cutest, little bonnet you can imagine and it was made by a little girl EIGHT YEARS OLD? It will make some other little girl very, very happy. What can YOU make that will gladden some other little girl's heart? Of course, you can go to the big stores and buy something, but that will not be half so nice as MAKING SOMETHING YOURSELF.

You know the old saying, "A thought in every stitch." I am extremely proud of one of our boys who has sent us some beautiful pictures made with leaves. They are going to adorn our walls when we have our PARTY. I KNOW it will make me happy and it will make you happy to have something you made put on exhibition so that our visitors may know that the Rainbows are DOERS and WORKERS. There will be some Children who will have no Christmas unless YOU give it to them. Begin NOW. FARMER SMITH, Children's Editor.

Lovingly, P. S. 1.—Be sure to ADDRESS your package in your bestest writing to FARMER SMITH, EVENING LEDGER, PHILADELPHIA. P. S. 2 .- If you don't understand about the Christmas Rainbow Exhibition, write and ask. Our Postoffice Box

Margaret lives at 2920 North Orlanna street. Would any of our little girls care to write and tell her how serry they are?

Margaret Hayes Kenderdina, Germantown, liked the Good Night Talk about music very much, and no wonder she is a musician. Margaret says, "I take music leasons and I love them, too. I have the sweetest little piece to play and the sweetest little song to sing."

est little piece to play and the sweetes the song to sing."
Siddons Harper, Jr., Ardmore, has been on the sick list. He has had an abacess in his car. We trust that the doctor has it all fixed up as fit as a fiddle by this time.
Lillian, Bertha and Samuel (libson are three new Rainbows, Lillian and Samuel spent the summer in the country and had a most wonderful time climbing trees, picking cherries and strawberries. These little members have a dear little nephew who loves dogs, pussies and horses. We wonder the would love a Rainbow button? loves dogs, pussies and horses. We if he would love a Rainbow button?

The Wonder Clock

The Wonder Clock

By VIRGINIA BARNHURST, Alientown, Pa.
One day Jeannette sat down beside the "Great Grandfather Clock." The old clock, which had stood many a long year, ticked on and on., Jeannette fell asleep!
She dreamed that a fairy stepped out of the clock and that she herself was crying. The fairy said, "Why are you crying?" Jeannette answered, "My father asked me what I wanted when he went downtown, and I said I wanted just one dress. Then he added, I will get it when the ship comes in." When he came back he said that the ship had gunk."

The fairy said, "Never mind; cheer up;

The fairy said, "Never mind; cheer up; look at yourself." Jeannatte got up and looked at herself. There she stood with a rainbow dress on!

And who do you think sent this fairy?
Farmer Smith himself, because Jeannette had a Rainbow pin on!
Jeannette cried in her sleep, "Look at me," and her mother ran in and she woke up. "Jeannette," cried her mother, "father has brought the Rainbow dress!" Then the little girl told her dream.

The Faithful Friend

The Faithful Friend

By BESSIE GREENBERG, Cherry Street.

Buth lay sick in bed. Rover, her dog, came up to Ruth's bed and licked her hands and face. She was glad to see him. She teld Bover to bark for her mother. Ruth's mother came up to her immediately. Buth said she wanted to see Florence, one of her playmates. Florence came and Ruth said:

"Yesterday I was standing near the chorewhen a big wave came up to me and dashed me in the ocean. Bover grent home and barked and mother came out and Rover showed her the way. When they got near the shore, Hover dashed in and pulled me out." Physones said, "I think Royer a very

He was hungry. wonder how these cobble taste." He bit a piece off one of the stones and said:

"My, my! I don't like the flavor. I never knew one could get so hungry at the bottom of a well. Still, I have seen the stars by daylight and I am a wise goat now—the way will open. It always does—wise or otherwise."

"Are you there?" asked a voice.
"Yes." answered Billy, meekly.
"Are you ready to bring up my rope

Billy scampered up the side of the well, even as he had gone down.

When he reached the top Mister Elephant not seeing the rope said. "Here you, where is my rope?"

"I am a wise goat now," answered Billy. "I kept my premise—I brought up your rope.

But before Mister Elephant could swing his trunk at Billy, the wise goat, Billy Bumpus was GONE!

Mister Elephant had shut the top of the well and closed Billy Bumpus in the dark dark hole, all because he would not promise to bring up the big fellow's rope so he could get some water from the well.

Then he laughed at his joke.

Suddenly his foot struck something soft.

"Ah, the rape!" he cried.

Then his heart sank. If he ate the rope, now would he ever get out?

His heart sank and he became hungrier.

Suddenly he looked up and saw Mister Elenhant's eyes.

Suddenly he looked up and saw Mister Elephant's eyes.

"Close that top," shouted Billy. "The light hurts my eyes."

Bang! went the top once more.
Billy waited and waited. "It must be day after tomorrow," thought Billy. He was so hungry.

He kicked the rope with his foot and then—and then—he began slowly to eat it.

And what do you think? Inch by inch, foot hy foot, Billy Bumpus, the wise goat, ate Mister Elephant's rope.

Then he took a drink of water and signed.

Then he took a drink of water and sighed:
"My but that was good. I wonder what y patient wife is doing today. I wonder she missed me?" A small streak of light entered the dark

"Yes," answered Billy, still very meek. "Come up!" commanded the hig fellow. Billy scampered up the side of the well.
