CRAPTER XXIX-Continued Gardia, who had been standing in his stirrups scanning the long flut road ahead, spoke sharply "Caramba! Here come those very soldlers now! See!"
Fur away, but evidently approaching at a smart gait, was a body of mounted men. After one look at them Dave cried.

"Into the brush, quick." He burried his ompanions ahead of him, and when they had gone perhaps a hundred yards from th had gone perhaps a hundred yards from the road he took Juan's Winchester, saying 'Ilide in a little way further and wait. I'm going back If you hear me shoot break for the river. Ride hard and keep under cover as much as possible.' Before they could remonstrate he had wheeled Montrosa and was gone. This was luck he told himself. Ten miles more and they would have been safe, for the Itle trande is not a difficult river either to ford or to spine. He dismounted and made his way on foot to a point where he could command a view, but he had barely established limself when he found Alalre at his side.

"tio back," he told her But she would not, and so they waited together. There were perhaps a dozen men in the approaching equad, and Dave saw that they were heavily accontered. They rode fast, too, and at their head galloped a large man under a wide-brimmed felt hat it soon became evident that the soidlers were not uniformed. Therefore, Dave reasoned, they were not Pederais, but more probably some rebe; scouting band from the south, and yet. He rubted his exes and stared again.

Germany's Food Problem

OMORROW the Public Ledger will publish the second of a series of three articles by William C. Bullitt on Germany's Food Problem. Mr. Bullitt has carefully investigated the economic condition of different sections of Germany. He tells us just how the Germans regulate the consumption of food-one egg per week, cost 10 cents; 8 ounces of meat per week, cost 40 cents; 41/4 pounds of bread per week, cost 19 cents; 9 pounds of potatoes per week-when potatoes can be had!

The German Food Problem is the source of more rumors than any other aspect of the war. Mr. Bullitt gives us the inside facts. His articles are especially interesting in view of the possible appointment of a British Food Dictator. Read the second article in
