see, Mister Ellephant thought is You see, Mister Elephant thought it would be a good joke to move Billy Bumpus, house and all, but when he came to do it he found it was a bigger task than he had thought. There are some tasks even elephants do not like to perform. His sole idea was to get even with Billy Bumpus for cating up the rope which drew the water from Mister Elephant's well.

So the big fellow grew tired and was soon on his way home, turning every now and then to see what had happened to the Bumpus home which he had been pushing. Meanwhile Billy had tumbled into hed and was peacefully snoring. Every little while he would awaken and ask: "Mother, is the house still rocking?"

"No." his good wife would reply, "It is not rocking STILL."

Billy would turn over and go to sleep again and in a short time he would wake up and ask the same question again, and his wife would answer in the same way. Pinally he said, "You think you are funny, don't you?" don't you? The last time he said this he looked around and saw his wife looking out the window. "Is Mister Elephant there?" he inquired timidly. of you have profited by keeping an account, write and tell me. I will be only

"No, he has gone; but you should see the beautiful view from our new home," said the good wife. Billy jumped out of bed and gazed out of the window. Thank you! Thank you!" exclaimed

"You're welcome," answered his good Te not thanking YOU; I'm thanking Mister Elephant."
"Tell HIM, then, and not me," repiled blu wife. Just at that moment Billy saw Mister Elephant approaching in the distance. He did not walt to tell his wife, but ran and hopped into bed and pulled the covers over his head.
