Dorothy's Thanksgiving

By ELLEN WHITE.

Dorothy was going to grandpa's for Thanksgiving. She could hardly wait.

Her cousins, Mary and John, were to be there, too. At hast the day arrived and she and mother were snuggled in the back seat of the automobile and father and Prince, the dog, were in the front. As they neared the barnyard Mary and John ran out to meet them and then led them cagerly into the house. "Oh," cried Mary, after they had been in the warm sitting room, laughing and talking for a while, "grandpa showed us the turkey yesterday. Would you like to see it, too?" They replied that they would. But when they got there no turkey was there.

"Where can it be?" said Mary. They ran breathlessly to grandpa, where he was feeding the horses. "The turkey is gone, said Mary. "Gone?" said grandpa. "Well, well; we'll bave to see about it. Where could it have gone?"

Just as they reached the turkey house there came a noise from the hillside, and there sat Jerry, the turkey. "Ho! Ho!" said grandpa. "He must have known that Thanksgiving wasn't very far off. I must have left the gate open when I fed him."

The next day was Thanksgiving, and such a savory smell from the kitchen! Mother and grandma came in and asked them if they didn't want to take some Thanksgiving dinners in hankest to the poor, and such fun as they had! There was poor Hattle, the washwoman; Jim, the hired man; Mrs. Brown, the widow, and many others. The dinner was lovely—turksy, mashed potatoes, gravy, cranberries, jams, pumplin ples, nuts, candies Prince had all the bones. A very nice dinner, lo-deed.

As Dorothy was on her homeward trip the said alsently, "I don't believe I ever

ded. As Dorothy was on her homeward trip she said sleeplly, "I don't believe I ever had such a nice Thanksgiving," and Prince wagged his tale.

Mary Ann's Thanksgiving Dinner By MALVINA HOLCOMBE, Cynwyd.

By MALVINA HOLCOMBE. Crawyd.

Mary Ann gave a relieved algh as Bob oame in with a large turkey, fine had decided to have turkey, cranberry sauce, manhed notatoes and celery.

Though Mary Ann was only fifteen she was virtually the only guardian of the five Warrena. Elizabeth, aged twelve: Rohert, aged eleven, and the twins, Bert and Bertie, elight years old, and baby Ted.

Mary Ann had been Mrs. Warren's zervant as long as she could remember. Mrs. Warren had died a mounth before. Pear, ignorant Mary Ann did not know what to do. But as she and the children complete only three rooms of the small home see turked it into a branding know that to do the could be made to be made to Mary Ann had three boarders and several people that stayed at night. Many people came for dinner, and Mary Ann expected quite a crowd for this holiday. She just popped the turkey in and requested Bob to read the recipe for cranberry sauca. When this was done Mary Ann put on the potatoes which were done half an hour sooner than the betries. "There's a crowd waiting, Mary Ann," said Elizabeth, coming in. "Miss Elizabeth," said Mary Ann, "you go and lie down. I'll get the twins to help me."

"Alberta Warren, don't you say a word."
she continued, "Elizabeth is sick, I tell you."
Bert, take this in. Land if you're not able to help, you're not able to eat."
The guesta ate heartily, particularly a white-haired gentleman, who said he would stay over night, and gave hob a tip.
The next morning Elizabeth served. The gentleman had his breakfast in his room and so he did not see her. Just as he was leaving he saw her. He turned suddenly pale.

pale.
"What's wrong, sir?" exclaimed Elizabeth.
"Child, child, who are you?" he asked.
"Elizabeth Van Buren Warren," she answered.

THE TALKING DOLL By Farmer Smith

"I think this is going to be a wonderful Christmas," said Santa Claus to his good wife one night as he had finished eating his third turkey. Why do you think so?" asked the good

"I can tell from the letters I receive," answered the jolly fellow. "I am getting more this year than I did last. Yesterday I read a million and a half letters."

"Mercy!" exclaimed Santa Claus's wife, so surprised she almost dropped a plate of

"Yes, I read sometimes over two million letters. I have a Readophone. The post-man comes over from Cloudland and dumps my letters into the chute and they are then dumped into my Readophone which reads them to me. Then I push the buttons and away the letters go, each to the place it belongs. By the way, I am having a ter-rible time this year getting talking dolls. Can you help me?"

Santa Claus's wife thought a long time. "It seems to me that you ought to be able to make a talking doll—one that will say the sweetest word in all the world." Santa Claus put down his knife and fork. "What is the sweetest word in all the world?"

"Others may not think as I do, but the sweetest word I know is mother."
"Of course! Of course! That's the time you caught me napping. I think the word Mamma is easier for a doll to say." HOW TO MAKE THE SCRAPHOOKS Get a composition book or make one out of pieces of wrappins paper cut the size of a composition has and tied at the edges with ribbon or string. There are three different ways for you to make your scrapbook.
First, Cox starles or ralks from Farmer
Smith's Exispow Club News and Illustrate them with pictures cut from any part of the Evening Labries.
Second, Cut bictures from the back page of the Evening Lubries are from the inside pages and write steples, neems or composilains about these pictures.
Third, Cut stories or talks from the Exisbow Club News and illustrate them with your fraviours for lastance, in a story about Billy Eumpus, draw the picture of a goat.

Mamma is easier for a doll to say."

"What ever will please you will please me," answered the good woman, "but we must not forget the children. What do the little girls want?"

"I do not know, but let us ask them. Send for Feaches and Cream, she might know. If not, we will send her down to that speck—what is it you call it?"

"The Earth," prompted his good wifs.

"Yes, yes, that's it. We will send Peaches and Cream to find out what the little girls on the Earth want." Then, turning to the butler, Saw Sir, Santa Chaus said: "Bring littler Peaches and Cream, that we may send her down to the Earth. 'Make haste."

And so it happened that Peaches and Cream was sent to the Earth and such a strange time she had.

Thanksgiving By WILLIAM Z. PORTER

When time comes to address Mr thanks for His dealings, No word will express My sincerest feelings. Words will be hard to may—Thoughts difficult to part
With Thanksgiving Day,—
But He shall know
What's in my beart!

Thanksgiving Day BY WILLIAM ROSEN Thanksgiving day at last is hors;
The day we lave and haid so deay.
Thanksgiving day which comes once a year!
On how I like Thanksgiving day:
It is then that we are so inerry and gay.
We feast and frolle and game and play!
The turkey so brown that I how.
And pumpkin pie, it can't be beat.
