CHAPTER XXI Eve Becomes an Amazon

STERN laid a hand on her shoulder strivling to draw her away. This spectacle, it soemed to him, was no fit sight for her to gaze on. But she shrugged her shoulders as if to say. "I'm not a child! I'm your equal, now, and I must see." So the engineer desisted. And he, two, set his eye to the twisting aperture.

bers of the horde a strong revulsion came upon him.

To welled a deep-scated love for the memory of the race of men and women as they once had been—the people of the other days. Stern almost seemed to behold them again, those tall, athletic, straightlimbed men; those lithe deep-breasted women, fair-skinned and with lixuriant hair; all alike now plunged for a thousand years in the abyse of death and of eternal oblivion. Never before had the engineer realized how dear, how infinitely close to him his

by the freshening breeze through Madison forest and by the higher rising sun. Both watchers could now see further into the woods, and both perceived that the horde was for the most part disposing itself to sleep.

Only a few vague, uncertain figures were convenient about with a strangely unnow moving about, with a strangely un-steady gait, weak-kneed and simian.

In the nearest group, which Stern had already had a chance to study, all save one of the creatures had lain down. The man and woman could quite plainly hear the rancous and bestial sporing of some half-dozen of the gorged things.

"Come away, you've seen enough, more than enough?" he whispered in the girl's She shook her head "No, no" she answered, under her breath. "How horrible—and yet, how wonderful!"

Then a minfortune happened; trivial, yet For Stern, trying to readjust his position,

A little fragment of loose marble, long ince ready to fall, distodged itself and counced with a sharp click against the steel

The mound, perhaps, was no greater than you would make in enapping an ordinary lead pencil in your fingers; yet on the in-stant three of the things raised their bulbous and exaggerated heads in an attitude of intonne, suspicious listening. Plain to see that their senses, at least, excelled those of the human being, even as a dog's might.

The individual which, alone of them all, had been standing, wheeled suddenly round and made a step or two toward the building. Hoth watchers saw him with terrible distinctness, there among the sumacs and hirches, with the beauty of which he made a shocking contrast. Plain now was the similar aspect, plain the sidelong and uncertain gait, best back and crooked legs, the long, pendulous arms and dully feroclous face. And as the Thing listened, its hair bristing! it thrust its villainous, apelike head well forward. Open fell the mouth, re-vealing the dog teeth and the blue, shrivled-looking guins.

A wrinkle creased the low, dull brow, Watching with horrified fascination, Stern

Watching with horrified fascination, Stern and Beatrics beheld—and—heard—the creature smill the air, as though taking up some scent of danger or of the hunt.

Then up came the right arm! they saw the class-hand with a spear poise itself a moment. From the open mouth burst with astounding force and suddenness a anarling yow! inarticulate, shrift, horrible beyond all thinking.

An instant agitation took place all through the forcest. The watchers could see only a small, facilike space of it—and even this, only a few rods from the hallding—yet by the confused, vague noise that even this, only a few rods from the building—yet by the confused, vague noise that given to the whole Horde.

Here, there, the cry was repeated. A shifting moving sound began. In the visible group, the Things were getting to their

Sudden, numbing fear seized Beatrice

About Beatrice he drew his arm. Together, almost as soundlessly as wraths, they stole away, out through the office, out to the hallway, into the dim light of the arcade once more.

of the arcade once more.

Here, for a few moments, they knew that they were safe. Retreat through the Markle Court and up the stairs was fairly clear. There was but one entrance open into the arcade, the one through Pine Tree (fate) and this was blocked so narrowly by the giant hole that stern knew there could be no general mob-rush through it no attack which he could not for a while hold back, so long as his ammunition and the girl's should last.

Thus they breathed more freely now. Most of the tumult outside had been cut off from their bearing by the retirement into the arcade. They paused to plan their cutres.

"Ugh" thought he, disgusted beyond measure at the sight before him. "And all these things are just as much alike as so many ants in a hill! I question if they've got the rearm and the socialized intelligence of ants!"

He heard the girl breathe quick, as she, too, watched what was going on outside. A certain change had taken place there. The mist had somewhat thinned away, blown by the freshening breeze through Madison breeze through Madison breeze through Madison breeze through Madis yellow, caught at the throat with the clasp of raw gold.
