CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—Notwithstanding a decrease of 1,336,000 bushels in the visible supply in the United States for the week to 62,027,000 bushels, the wheat market finished weaker today under active selling. The setback followed strength after heaviness early. The temporary improvement was due to good buying brought about by wet weather in Argentina, where harvesting is under way, and larger clearances from New York and Baltimore.

Popular sentiment appeared to be bearish, and it was plainly evident that longs were still timid about carrying wheat overnight. Influential operators bought under cover; at one time shorts purchased and cash houses absorbed, and there was evidence of further takings by the Greek Government. The market, however, could not be sustained.

Prices at Buenos Aires opened about 5c lower and there was a tendency to raise estimates on the crop in the center and south of that country.

Cables from Liverpool, where the market was steady, said that lack of tonnage was restricting buying in America. World's shipments for the week were 9,385,000 bushels, against 143,490,000 bushels last year.

The high on December was $1.67⅝, and the low $1.62⅝, closing at $1.62½, against $1.66 at the end Saturday; May's top was $1.75¾ and the low $1.71⅞, finishing at $1.72¾@½, against $1.73¼. Saturday's last price; July's high was $1.44 and the low $1.39¾, ending at $1.41¾, compared with $1.51¼ at the close Saturday.

A statement issued by B. W. Snow had a bullish long range aspect. He said that reports from mills, elevators and local grain men indicate that the reserves of wheat on farms as of December 1 were 30 per cent in Nebraska, 20 per cent in Kansas and 8 per cent in Oklahoma.

GUARDSMEN'S FIRST DUTY TO U. S. GOVERNMENT

War Department Tells Congressman More Requests for Discharge Cannot Be Granted

By a Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Personal and professional business interests do not warrant the discharge of members of the National Guard from service along the frontier, according to a letter received by Representative J. Hampton Moore this morning from the Adjutant General of the War Department. Long continuous service on the frontier has led many of the soldiers who left their business and professional interests with the thought of performing patriotic duty to complain of the losses they are sustaining at home.

The Philadelphia case taken up by Representative Moore with the War Department was that of a member of the First Cavalry, Pennsylvania National Guard, which is composed largely of business men or those engaged in professional life.

"The case presented by you," the Adjutant General wrote to Representative Moore, "is one of a large number being continually received, in which the discharge is urged of members of the National Guard on the ground that their business or professional interests demand their immediate personal attention. The department is not unmindful of the urgent necessity that prompts many of these applications for discharge, and under ordinary conditions the reasons on which they are based would readily be deemed sufficient to justify favorable action. But, unfortunately, the applications are so numerous and are increasing so rapidly that favorable consideration of all of them would disrupt many militia units and greatly impair the efficiency of the service. No just or equitable basis for discrimination has been found upon a careful consideration of the numerous applications thus far received, and the Secretary of War has been constrained, in simple fairness to all concerned and in order to avoid the discrimination that would be involved in granting any individual application, to adopt a strict rule that all of the applicants must be treated alike, and that no application of this nature shall be favorably entertained."

Police Court Chronicle

A rather dark negress of bulging form was pushing a basket along the sidewalk.

Directly in her path was a youth of string-bean physique. He was encased in headlight spectacles of the near tortoise variety, and also carried an internal burden which seemed to cause him much inconvenience. The negress asked him to move. He yawned at her and blew the smoke of an imported cigarette in her face.

At the hospital the young man said he wasn't quite sure whether it was a trolley or merely a motortruck which wafted him into the street. But as his face pained when he talked, he was not pressed for an explanation.

In fact, none was necessary. A cop who witnessed the controversy between the negress and the youth took the woman before Magistrate Imber. She explained very clearly why the young man found it necessary to visit the hospital and said she wasn't the least bit sorry. A few minutes later the youth himself appeared. Then it dawned upon him that the negress was responsible for his injuries. But when the woman explained that the youth blew smoke in her face and refused to get out of her path, the Judge concluded that she was not altogether to blame.

"You're discharged," he said, while the prisoner was scowling at the chap who appeared against her.

"Good," said the woman, who gave her name as Nancy Lukens, "now ah'll go out to da Zoo an' let ma' little boy see da' animals."

"Did you ever see a giraffe?" asked the cop, who brought Nancy before the Judge.

"No," replied Nancy, "I don' go out much."

ROSE TAPLEY

Who is in Philadelphia this week to tell film audiences why certain motion pictures are better than others. She is a Vitagraph actress and a firm believer that woman's place is in the movies—as spectators, at all events.

ETHEL BARRYMORE WILL QUIT THE STAGE

Decides to Devote All Her Time to the "Movies" as a Larger Field for Her Art

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Ethel Barrymore, the dramatic star, has announced her intention to abandon the speaking stage entirely in favor of the motion pictures. The reason for her decision, according to her friends, is that she believes motion pictures offer a larger field for her art.

Miss Barrymore has had the subject under consideration for some time and her announcement followed the completion of the picturization of Margaret Deland's novel "The Awakening of Helena Ritchie," in which she appeared as star. Miss Barrymore was given a free hand in this production to work out its artistic possibilities, and was so pleased with the result that she is content, her friends say, to devote her time and art to the making of motion pictures.

SARAH BERNHARDT BETTER

Unable, However, to Appear at Benefit for French Wounded

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—"How is the war going?" "Are the Rumanians still holding their own?" "Bucharest hasn't fallen yet, has it?" These were a few of the questions hurled at newspaper men gathered to welcome Madame Sarah Bernhardt last night by the great French actress.

"My heart aches for the poor Rumanians as if they were my own people. They have been so strong, so brave, that I hope they will be able to withstand the furious German attacks. Do you think Bucharest will be another Verdun? I have been told so, and I pray and hope that it may be."

Mme. Bernhardt was suffering from a severe attack of laryngitis, accompanied by a high fever, contracted at Wilmington, Del. Accompanied by her manager, William F. Connor, Mme. Bernhardt motored to New York, hoping that she would be benefited by the open air.

SHORTAGE IN GRAND JURORS

Only Ten Obtained and Special Venire Must Produce Four

Not enough members for the December grand jury could be obtained when they were drawn today to form a quorum, and it was necessary, for the first time in the history of the jury, to draw a special venire. Some of the jurors selected were found to have moved from the addresses given on the assessors' list, others were sick, one was deaf, and several gave sufficient business excuses.

Eighteen prospective members appeared before Judge Barratt in Quarter Sessions Court, while twenty-four, the legal number, had been drawn from the wheel. Fourteen members constitute a legal grand jury, and twelve a quorum. After the choosing, the ten who remained were discharged until tomorrow morning, when the special venire will be summoned.

School Janitors Ask More Pay

Janitors in the public schools sent a petition to the Board of Education today, asking for an increase in salaries. Higher cost of brooms, dusters and other cleaning implements, together with increased wages of their assistants, were given as the cause. Increases asked for range from two to twenty per cent.

ROSE TAPLEY TALKS AT LOCAL THEATRES

Vitagraph Player Comes Here to Address "Audiences" on the Film Art

By the Photoplay Editor

It is rather late in the day to pull that old pun about real and reel, but something of the sort suggests itself in connection with Rose Tapley, of the Vitagraph Company, and her appearances in this city this week. Miss Tapley, who may be called one of the Vitagraph veterans without hurting her feelings (since she is old only in point of service), came over to Philadelphia today to speak at the Victoria and Ruby tonight, and at other local playhouses throughout the week. In her little talks the actress stresses the importance of women in the film profession.

"With them rests the future of the motion picture," she declares. "So that is why I am stealing time from my studio work to tell the women what I know about motion pictures and what they should know about them. A woman will not buy an article at the department store sight unseen, unless it bears a trademark that she knows well. There isn't any more reason why she should buy her motion-picture pleasure sight unseen.

"The good ones, like the department store articles, are trademarked. All she has to do is to demand trademarked pictures from the exhibitor. I want to aid in educating her to know these trademarked pictures; to know all about them; to demand them because they represent the highest standard both morally and artistically.

"I want to show these women how good pictures are made; what good pictures are like. I want to take them on a little journey through motion-picture land—a journey that begins with the author and ends with the finished production. And this screen excursion must typify the best that there is in pictures. Each step of the way I want to drive home to my listeners why it is a good picture and how easily it might have been made a bad one.

"My desire is to give them a start toward an intimate study of the motion-picture world. They know too little now of those they see upon the screen, and far more too little about those producing companies that are striving ever for a higher standard in plays and players, artistry and cleanliness of motive and action. I want to make them begin to think about the motion picture; to realize that all they need to do to see the best produced is to demand it."

Consequently Miss Tapley has been given a recess from production, and is making a tour to deliver her message. She illustrates her talk with a specially prepared Vitagraph picture, "From Script to Screen."

H. Tims writes to this department that the editor's advocacy of an "all-Keystone night" has already been made a reality. He says: "For the last three summers Manager O'Keefe, of the City Square Theatre, Atlantic City, has put on a Keystone comedy night every Tuesday, and the police are on hand regularly to keep order in the overflow." Keystone cops, maybe.

Many applications are being received daily from persons who wish to join the Stanley Exhibitors' Association, designed to establish better business and social relations between those engaged in the film industry. The advantages accruing from such an association are obvious.
