Owner of Bellevue-Stratford Began Life

CUNDAY'S Public Ledger will contain the story of George C. Boldt's rise from a menial position to that of owner of the Bellevue-Stratford and president of the Waldorf-Astoria Company.

It reads like a page from "The Arabian Nights" and has a particular interest for Philadelphians, since Mr. Boldt founded his fame and fortune with the old Bellevue Hotel on Broad Street.

In 1904 Mr. Boldt combined the old Bellevue with his Stratford across the street and called the new hotel the Bellevue-Stratford.

John Jacob Astor, impressed by Mr. Boldt's abilities, made him a proposition to manage a hotel in New York-the Waldorf-Astoria.

Two huge hotels, international in fame and a fortune estimated at millions-these were the rewards of a man once a waiter. Read his story in Sunday's Public Ledger.
