

OREGON, PENN'S NEW YEAR'S OPPONENT, HAS FIVE PLAYERS ON ALL-PACIFIC COAST TEAM

Captain Beckett and Quarterback Huntington Unanimous Selections, With Monteith, Risley and Snyder Receiving Recognition

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL

THIS University of Oregon is well represented in the various all-Northwest and Pacific Star football teams selected by the services in that section. Captain Beckett, the tackler and star punter of the team, is a unanimous selection. Quarterback Huntington, the quarterback, is accorded the same treatment. Monteith, an end, appears in the seven-man team of the elevens, and Risley, center, and Snyder, a guard, are members of Bartlett's team. Tegner, an end, and Monteith, a halfback, are placed on the second team. Givens' New Year's opponents eight star players in the far west.

Gus Zeigler, who is rated Bessemer's captain and saw it in action against the California team, has the same opinion as the critics. He says Oregon has a great team—a team that can trim many of the eastern teams and Penn will have considerable trouble in Pasadena.

Oregon plays straight, hard football, he says, and the attack is quite powerful. The halfbacks hit the line hard, and the ends with remarkable speed and when forward passes are used few miss the mark. Bessemer uses the University of Chicago offense, with many shifts to the right for the opponents. The tackles are up back on most every play, and the backs drift right as the University of Oregon does. No quarterback is used. Instead there are three halfbacks, with one giving the signals, a la Warner. The inference is in good, said Gua, making the team a well-balanced and well-coached outfit.

Smith and Zeigler did most of the work and had to teach the men from the beginning. It was harder than coaching a prep school, as the men were not interested in football could be taught. For more than a month the team was drilled on fundamentals, but after that some progress was shown, and in the later games California made a good showing. Eleven games were played, six resulting in victories, five defeats and one tie.

Zeigler will assist Folwell in preparing Penn for the coast battle. He knows the style used by Oregon and virtually will have charge of the defense. The Red and Blue is mighty lucky to get Zeigler's services.

Has Many Stars

"There are many stars on the Oregon team," says Zeigler, "and some are as good as the Penn players. Beckett, the tackle and captain, weighs 205 pounds, is fast and does all of the punting. He can average forty-five yards in a game. Johnny Parsons, a halfback, is regarded as the best back on the coast. He weighs 175 and is very fast. Shy' Huntington, another backfield man, tips the scale at 190 and is a wonderful player. He gives the signals. The game will be played on Franklin Field. Last year Haverford had the advantage, as the game resulted in a one-to-one tie. The championship went to the Main Liners. Penn was the winner in 1914.

Penn has played and won four games for a total of eight points. Princeton has played five but lost one game and only has three points. A win will add one point and the nine will be sufficient to assure the Red and Blue the honors.

Captain Mohr and his men are in fine condition. In all the games played this season the Quakers have outplayed their opponents and the fast work of the team speaks well for the work of Coach Stewart. Stewart has handled a severe facing a weak team, but the results are the ones expected.

Zeigler was assistant coach at the University of California football team last fall and aided considerably in re-establishing the game on the coast. For several years the American game has been in decline and rugby played instead. Sentiment against the American game is strong, but that is the reason the high school dropped it. The game has regained its popularity, however, and it is believed that more than one hundred new teams will be in the field next year.

Coaches Had Hard Task

California played rough up to 1915, and the men who came out for the squad know nothing of the other game. For one year there was considerable experimenting, but this year, under Sam Edie, Mahan and Zeigler were unable to get the players in shape. Their task was a hard one, when one realizes that the candidates never had seen an American college game. Their knowledge was gained through newspaper accounts, which sometimes are not the best textbooks.

Smith and Zeigler did most of the work and had to teach the men from the beginning. It was harder than coaching a prep school, as the men were not interested in football could be taught. Haughton Warns 1917 Candidates to Keep Up in Scholarship

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 9.— Coach Percy Folwell, of the Harvard football team, has sent a personal letter to all candidates for next year's eleven urging them to keep up in scholarship "as a part of their football duties."

"This year's defeat," he wrote, "can be traced to slackness in study between the time of last year's game and midyear, when the whole presented the scale got probation at the college office, their service being finally lost to the team."
