

PHOTOPLAY WORLD GOES REELING ON WHILE THEATRES FEEL LULL OF COMING HOLIDAYS

PHILADELPHIA PHOTOPLAY PARAGRAPHS

The Strand Theatre was built by Mrs. J. Emery and Herbert Effinger, who likewise built and operated the Leader Theatre, West Philadelphia.

Marguerite Clark in "Miss George Washington"—the bare announcement brings to us the promise of a most interesting picture. "Miss George Washington," which is the Alhambra's attraction on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, is one that introduces Miss Clark in one of the most pleasing roles in which she has ever appeared.

"The Spotters" will be the feature at the Bluebird on Tuesday. The first show will begin at 1 o'clock.

One advantage offered in motion pictures shown in this city after their New York presentation is the original cast appearing in the parts they created. The spoken drama does not always give this when playing here.

The Savoy is an example of what efficiency in theatre management means. It is true of all the better class houses. Every film is inspected, cleaned and reviewed before the public is permitted to see it. They are run upon a schedule and the entire performance averages about one and a half hours.

Entertainments of every description can now be secured from the new bureau at the Stanley Company Palace Theatre Building. It is in charge of Director Einstein.

Now that the season for printing annual passes has arrived, why not have them made on celluloid, which will be serviceable?

Carefully selected short-length subjects help make up the program of the Fifty-sixth Street Theatre. The president of the Stanley Exhibitors' Association is the manager, and Joseph McCready also owns the Philadelphia press bureau.

"The Sunbeam," with Mabel Taliaferro as the star, will be seen at the Fairmount Theatre on Friday. The story of "The Sunbeam" was written by Shannon Yife, once a resident of Philadelphia in the Lubin heyday, it was pictured by June Mathis.

For the first half of next week at the Arcadia "The Hu Ya Do" features Frank Keenan. A remarkable cast appears in Mr. Keenan's support. Marjorie Wilson, who appeared in "The Trimalchus," "The Eyes of the Night" and "The Return of Draw Kean" plays the principal female role. Others are David M. Hartford, Margaret Thompson, Howard Hickman, Louise Brownell, Jack Gilbert, Walter Whitman and Cleo Marrow.

Alice Brady will be seen at the Regent throughout the coming week in "A Woman Alone." The rise of this young lady to the front rank in stardom has been rapid.

In the way of photoplay entertainment there is much to commend in the program to be presented both halves of the coming week at the Palace. The first three days Alice Joyce appears in the first presentation of the Vitaphone feature, "Whom the Gods Destroy." In this play, which is written by S. Stewart Blackton and Cyrus Townsend Brundy, and directed by William P. S. Earle, Miss Joyce appears with a splendid cast.

At the Market Street Theatre on Saturday next William S. Hart, in "The Return of Draw Kean," will be the feature. As will added attraction, Chaplin, in "The Rink," will be shown, and on January 3 the new Universal Serial, "The Purple Mask," featuring Grace Cunard and Francis Ford.

A cast of notable screen stars assist

"You hold yourself like this," as the immortal Gilbert said. "Back stage" of Keith's, you may find Theodore Kosloff very busy these days. Something of his difficulties in evolving a Russian ballet of his own is told elsewhere in these amusement pages.

Harold Lockwood and Mae Allison in "Big Tremaine," which is to be presented at the Locust on Monday and Tuesday of the approaching week. This photoplay is based on Marie Van Vorst's novel of the same name.

This play also will be shown at the Liberty on Friday.

The week before Christmas is considered a dull one and some managers present only ordinary shows. This is not true of the Stanley as there is only one standard prevailing at this house, and that is the best entertainment for the least money every week in the year. You will again be convinced of this fact by glancing at the announcements of the photoplays for the week that precedes Christmas.

Earl Williams appears with Clara Kimball Young at the Victoria next week in "My Official Wife."

Manager Neils, of the Coliseum, is also general press representative for the Tiooga, Cedar and Frankford theatres. Columbus Stamper is the general manager.

William S. Hart in "The Devil's Double," will provide entertainment on Friday at the Ruby.

Chaplin in "The Rink," will be shown at the Eureka on Saturday next as an added feature.

"Little Mary Sunshine," Pathe star, isn't fishing for compliments. She gets plenty from Uncle Sam's mailbox every morning.

This time the actor beat the camera to it. Fred Stone, of "Chin-Chin," at the Forrest, puts his diminutive dancing partner through a few evolutions that even the snapshot cannot catch.

Thomas H. Ince, of Inceville, tells the actors of "Civilization" a few cogent facts concerning photoplay art. Patrons of the Lyric may judge of the result.

The modern Maud Muller, or dress reform in the movies, Kathryn Williams does a bit of gardening every morning before she hies herself to the Morocco studio for such purposes as the manufacture of "The Redempting Love," which comes to the Stanley the latter half of next week.

New Playwrights Are Mrs. Fiske's Fad

cap of the actress. She accepted his play, "Salvation Nell" when he was still at school at Harvard, and it was due very largely to her interest and encouragement that he wrote the succeeding plays that brought him fortune and fame.
The author of "Mrs. Humphreys' Story," Henry James Smith, had never had a play produced until Mrs. Fiske brought forward that delightful comedy. It was thought to be, at the outset, rather too fantastic for Mrs. Fiske's talents, but she illuminated the character to such a degree and played it with such delightful vivacity that it became one of her most popular roles, and she revived the play again and again with success.
Marian de Forest, who wrote the play, "Strawberry Susan," in which Mrs. Fiske appears at the Broad Street Theatre soon, had already one distinction, through her dramatization of "Little Women" before her work was presented by Mrs. Fiske. However, Miss de Forest declares that she first undertook play-writing because of Mrs.

Fiske's words of encouragement to her in that direction. She had called upon Mrs. Fiske for the purpose of getting an interview with the actress for the newspaper in Buffalo, of which she is the dramatic critic. Owing to Mrs. Fiske's dislike of interviews, Miss de Forest was not successful in her mission, but during the agreeable conversation that she had with the noted actress, she gained inspiration that impelled her to enter the dramatic field of literature. "Strawberry Susan" is only the second play that Miss de Forest has written, and it bids fair to be as successful as any of her other plays. Mrs. Fiske has produced dramatic plays written by newly arrived dramatists that Mrs. Fiske has produced.
