NEW OFFICE BUILDING WILL RIVAL FINEST

Fidelity Trust Company to Set New Standard at Broad and Walnut

NO IMMEDIATE ACTION Building Cost Too High Now, Says Vice President, and Leases Have Not Expired

The new Fidelity Trust Building, in Broad street, between Walnut and Sanson streets, which is virtually assured since the acquisition to the title of the present property and the plot of land by the Fidelity Trust Company a few days ago, will be equal in height and style of construction to any other building in Philadelphia.

Because of pending leases on some of the properties in the area, the demolition of the present buildings will not be started immediately, and some time will elapse before definite decision on plans of construction.

The new building will have a frontage of 225 feet on Broad street and 170 feet on Walnut and Sanson streets.

equal the 2nd title since of twenty-one shows, or 221 feet in height, which is the present the tallest office building in Philadelphia.

J. C. Neff, vice president of the Fidelity Trust Company, said this morning that while no definite plans have been constructed, it is to be announced that the new building will be "as big and fine as any office building now in the city."

"It is yet too early to say much about the building," he continued, "because we have only just acquired control of the property and because of the pending leases on some of the present properties have almost three years before their lease expires, of course, no work can be done within that time—unless it is arranged to buy out the lease rights."

It is intimated that this procedure was not probable, and also hinted that the present high cost of building materials and of labor is not conducive to pushing new building operations involving large expenditures.

Although the probable amount of money to be expended on the new building could not be learned, it is thought that an investment of $1,000,000 will suffice for a structure of the size and construction spoken of.

The ground was formerly the site of the old "Yellow Machine" building, better known as the "Yellow Machine" building, a record-holding lot was sold by the Broad Street Realty Company, which bought it about ten years ago from the Lippincott estate for $2,500,000.

The price paid by the Fidelity Trust Company is believed to have been about $4,000,000, which would be approximately $100 a foot for some of the leases held in the same neighborhood have doubtless in sale price within the same period of time.
