Something has been gained in the fight against the dope evil, in that now every case is at once referred to its origin. Sam Green, who put up a three weeks' struggle to "get religion" in exchange for the drug habit and falled, got his first taste of cocaine when he was sixteen years old. The manager of a burlesque show gave him some to make his act a success. The anti-narcotic bill. which is endangered by the factional quarrel at Harrisburg, would make it wellnigh impossible for boys to be thus started wrong. There is something terrifying about that struggle in the Inasmuch Mission of the man fighting to keep the Sermon on the Mount between him and his demon. He repeated to himself the wonderful words of hope, which phrase by phrase would be blotted out by the corruption within him as waves blot out writings on the sand. Knowing, as we do, the absolute truth of "seek and ye shall find," its apparent failure in this case makes us see Sam Green as in the actual | it would have greater possibilities than grip of a tangible fiend incarnate.

WHAT DO YOU THINK ABOUT IT?

A DISREPUTABLE woman has been murdered and her slayer has killed himself when the law's grip was about to close upon him. In connection with the affair there is nothing but a mass of sordid details, a record of laws, human and divine, floated and broken, a brothet tragedy, in which have become involved the names of men of wealth or standing. What is the duty of a newspaper in handling a story of this sort? Editors from New York and Chleago either have sont special writers to cover it or have telegraphed urgently for more copy from local writers. The press associations have given it great papminence in their dis patches. Every detail has been paraded before morbid readers. The Eversing LEDGER, seeing in it nothing more than fifth, has kept the story off the front page, where unwholesome accounts of this character are usually put for circu fation purposes, and has reported only actual news developments, a somewhat novel method of handling such a situation.

EXILE!

It is written of Mr. Perceval, I HAVE seen hundreds of my flock in mier of England during the Napo. on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday last he safely brought the bill for increasing from morn to eye, I went about the regions whence the foremost worsmen and artisans of my dincese were raken by force into exile. At Wayrecourt, St. Etienne, Nivelles, Tubize and Brains l'Alleud I entered more than a hundred half-empty homes. Husbands were absent, children were orphans, msters, sadeyed and with mort arms, sat beside their sewing muchines. A giooms silence reigned in these cottages. It was as though there were a corpse in the house. But hardly had I addressed a word of sympathy to the mother when there was an outliment of cobs and lamen tations, of angry tones, with movements of magnificent pride. Cardinal Mercier.

"The Tragic Exception"

The storm in Dublin last Easter had the usual effect—it cleared the air. Suspicion gave way to downright knowledge of a tevolutionary movement in Ireland; the Cabinet was seriously undermined. But the people of England and of Ireland recognized that the situation is impossible. They also began to thirk back, in actual politics this thinking back, not of the wrongs of Ireland, but of the causes of those wropgs, may have little effect. But in the long run it will be the only effective thing. It is easy to sum up the conclusion to when thinking men and women have come in regard to Ireland.
