

CLUBS AT PRINCETON TO DISCUSS CRUSADE

Movement Against "Snobbishness" Becomes General University Topic

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 11.—The discussion of the club movement at Princeton was thrown open to the entire university today with a following announcement issued by the club elections committee.

It shall not be termed a breach of the interclub agreement for the members of the inner class clubs to discuss with members of the sophomore and freshman classes any phase of the question of changing or abolishing the club system, but matters of this character are not to be brought into the discussion. As in the past all advances in freshmen and to all sophomore classes, the question of the club system, to be designed to induce them to join or refrain from joining any club, are strictly prohibited.

Approval of the statement, it was said, "should not be confined solely to generalities." One of the leaders of the movement, when interviewed on the question, said the reform was not directed at any particular club or set of individuals. The effort is to be directed to a solution to the problem of the clubs at Princeton. No personal animus is to be found in the feeling of the leaders toward the status of club members.

It would appear from the line of the letters in this morning's issue of the Princetonian that the members of the Junior and senior classes are in a receptive mood on the topic, at any rate. They are assuredly not all in favor of the movement despite what the "inner seniors" expressed in their open letter on the subject.

One signed article, in commenting on the event, calls to task the "two seniors" who felt that the present club system fostered "snobbishness" and "snobbishness." The commentary was signed by fourteen members of the junior class, representing nine different clubs. Among the signers was F. T. Hogg, the football captain.
