HUMAN BROTHERHOOD the Editor of the Evening Ledger,

Sir-Let's forget we are Americans. Frenchmen, Englishmen, etc. and remember we are all human beause. We were not other for the purpose of destroying each other for the sport of kings, the Roman guidators or besits in the forest, we are put in earth to advance civilization and not to tear it down with instruments of feath.

THE INCREDIBLE BRYAN To the Editor of the Evening Ledger:

Sir-Kindly inform me if it is true that William Jennings Bryan has turned against William Jennings Bryan has turned against government ownership and operation. I just happened to read a few words tucked away in a magazine a few days alnce that he has; that when testifying before the Newlands Senate Committee some weeks ago on the railroad problem he spoke against the Government taking over the railroads or something to that effect. I can hardly believe it true. I must have dreamed it on one of the nights my indigestion was last. Pending further information don't tell me 'tisu't true, for 'twill make my indigestion worse again, and I will take as not dream it all over again—I will take, an awful chance and say: "It is never too late to mend," and "Better but than never."

THOMAS CARLYLE phramed the matter

THOMAS CARLYES phramed the matter rather delicately when he said. Speak your sincerest, think your wisser; there is still a great grif between you and the fact." And we are led to quote this as the experior opinion of a philosopher who realized something of the elernal verilles, having in mind the career, unhappily now ended, of colonel William F (ody.

That he was not the typical mainman, as those of its who know our West fully understand, was entirely true. He was something even better. He visualized for us, hy mere example that, something of the deales—something of the dream of what deales—something of the from the highest which we had believed to be existent, and in doing this he performed a great service. He made dreams room true, and that is no millimportant must of the days work. Facili, maked facts, are not all of truth. It is what we believe them to be that sends one a imagination far afield in search of the ultimate, and if that quality were removed—that quality of picturesque imaginings—the day would be gray Indeed, Speaking on similar lines the Chicago Tribure rays:

And perhaps his realest critics wars not so nearly right as they thought themselves. America needed the illusion if it was an illusion, which huffalo Hill's ride art created. Fact, after all, is not all of truth. Truth is fact perfected by our own drawn, fact plus our emotional reactions from fact. This will tree with us while more facts sink into the shadows of the formation past. They are dead. It is what we give facts that makes them immortal.

So when we come to know that real truth.

facts that makes them immortal. So when we done to know that real truth is pathing but plain fact "perfected by our own dreams," we shall come to a sort of paradice apart; we shall come to a sort of paradice apart; we shall come into that examiny where Resalind and Images live, and keep within ourselves consthing of the raint which may, at those, make a mountain out of a mofelill, but we shall have, too, the dollary to find sliver linings in clouds and keep our lingsom.
