WILLIAM PENN GIRLS LAUD SCHOOL'S WORK

Twenty-one Members of Graduating Class Tell of Influence Exerted on Their Lives

Twenty-one girls acted as mouthpleces or the members of the February gradu-ing class of the William Fenn High School Cirls this morning at the school, Fifteenth and Mount Vernon streets, when for the first time in the history of Philadelphia high schools, an anonymous symposium of effects of high-school life on the young graduates was given for the 160 graduates.

Some months ago each girl in the class was asked to write an unsigned statement of what William Penn High School had meant in her life. Each girl did, not knowing what it was for. Today the twenty-one best ones in the clars were given by twenty-one girls who did not know who wrote er own and her mother's clothes, and to renovate old cluthes and make hats, thus reducing the family expenses. Another told ow she had been able to complete her edueation, as a result of the information she secured in home economics, because she could take care of the hous coping as item. and go to school at the same time. Other told what the reading of the newspaper as urged by the history teacher, had meant to them; and especial emphasis was placed on the good done by the salesmanship ourse, which taught girls that the "dreaded nonster (the public) is made up of human beings," and gave the girls self-confidence, oise and ability to meet people.

Diplomas in the general, commercial, colegs preparatory, salesmanship, art and home economics courses were awarded to the Fedbruary graduating class by Wiliam D. Lewis, principal of the school.

The Rev. Dr. Edwin Heyl Delk, pastor The Rev. Dr. Edwin Heyl Delk, paster of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, pronounced the invocation after an orchestral prelude under the direction of A. H. Rosewig, Solos were sung by Dorothy Blumenthal, Margaret Bond, Esther Mails and Elsie Thatcher. Ethel Eddowes gave the introductory explanation.

C. La Rue Kellar delivered the valedictory. The class officers were Miss Kellar, president; Rose L. Lischin, vice president; Jeannette Ettelson, treasurer, and Helen Einert, secretary. The graduates

Graduating Exercises of School's Seventh Class Held Today in Auditorium

Thirty-nine young girls, clad in white dresses, some of them made by their wear ers, were graduated as the January, 1917, lass of the Northeast Annex of the Wil-Bam Penn High School for Girls when the seventh graduating exercises took place in the William Penn High School at 2:20 clock this afternoon

The first class was graduated from the Northeast High School for Girls in January, 1914. High school students have been in the building for seven years under the di-rection of Miss Boulah A. Fenimore, who rection of Miss Beulah A. Fenimore, who has been in charge of the school. The principal of the William Penn High School and the two annexes, William D. Lewis, gave the diplomas to the young graduates. Mr. Lewis and Miss Fenimore were the platform with the graduates. T Board of Education members had section reserved for them in the front of he auditorium

The Rev. Henry Hess, pastor of the Ken-Marlborough street, offered the opening rayer. "The Pageant of the Spring Flow-rs." written by Miss Elsie Rush, was elivered by the class president, Miss Kathyn Gutekunst, while the farewell, entitled "How Manifold Are Thy Works," written by Miss Ethel Kalitzky, was read this afternoon by Miss Christine Turner. Chorus vork under the direction of Miss Amelia J. Strodick, who has had charge of training the girls in music, was another feature of the program. Miss Buth Gacks gave a piano solo and there was other m the chorus. The girls carried red roses The officers of this graduating class include: President, Miss Kathryn Gutekunst; vice president. Miss Grace Becker; assistant treasurer. Miss Jeanette Collen; secretary, Miss Anna V. Le Compte.

By the Photoplay Editor TANLEY—"THE WAX MODEL." Palling Paramount, with Vivian Martin and Thomas Holding. Story by G. Vers Tyler, directed by E. Mason Happer. Photographed by James V. Van Trees.

In spite of a story that dwindles into the onventional, after a most promising start. this deserves the name of feature-so often misapplied. It has been artistically done from first to last, and is prettily and convincingly acted, particularly by little Miss Martin. What makes it a motion picture to attract and hold the eye is the detailed heauty or the direction. Sun-splashed studies, everhead lighting, dexterous use of thick shadow and rich sunshine, sculptural effects in human figures—these may not make a plot, but they do gratify and stimulate the vision. The author began well, with a narrative that was both human and dramatic. If he could have resisted the temptation to "pull" that old stunt of one woman shielding another at the expense of her "good name," be might have made a miniature musterniere instead of a rewrite. niniature masterpiece, instead of a rewrite of "The Social Secretary." The and cutting are generally good: that one regrets his making the French girl remark to ber doll: "Cheric, nozzing hap pens like ze storybooks." a most remark able macaronic.

ICTORIA - 'THREADS OF FATE.' Metro, with Viola Dana and Robert Whittier. with Viola Dana and Robert Whittier.

It is a big loss to Metro that dainty Viola tana is no longer with them. She is one of our best actresses in the portrayal of of our best actresses in the portrayal of outhful types. Her latest appearance is it the part of a foundling, who lives with her foster parents. At first they are poor and later wealthy, but her manner shows the same type of sweet simplicity. It is not alone the star that carries this seventy-five-minute story to a happy conclusion, for every member of the cast has a reputation for good work that testifies to a rise above the old players seen in past General Film plays. Most of these, however, are from the Edison company. Robert Whittier, Augustus Phillips, Elchard Tucker, Fred Jones, Helen Strickland and Nellie Grant are the principal players. The extra sup-port was well selected in regard to their fitness for types. An outstanding feature of the photography was the vision scenes, while the use of the irising was also well done. Few locations and continuity story attested to the director's skill,

LIQUIDATING

My Philadelphia Business

This SALE Defies All Competition for Value-Giving

HERE isn't a merchant in Philadelphia who could give you the kind of values I am offering right now without taking a severe loss, and that would not be good business. With me, it's different, for regardless of advancing cost of woolens and production-

I Must Turn Stock Into Cash

in the liquidating of my Philadelphia business. The enormous overhead expenses of this store force me to quit. This is my Last Sale in Philadelphia-and I am slashing prices to an extent that it will long be remembered for its sensational bargains. It's the biggest Clothes-buying opportunity ever offered in Philadelphia. Every Garment in Stock for Men and Young Men SACRIFICED Regardless of Cost or Loss

Remember-These are all Georges famous Model Clothes -built in my own custom shops and expressing the most
