LAYS CONSPIRACY TO RESERVE BOARD

Minnesota Congressman Asks House to Impeach Harding and Warburg

SAYS PUBLIC IS CHEATED

Law Framed and Members Appointed, He Says, to Serve Big Interests

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Charge of "high crimes and misdemeanors" in the administration of currency laws, Representative Lindbergh, of Minnesota, today on the floor of the House asked impeachment proceedings against Governor Harding, Paul Warburg and other members of the Federal Reserve Board.

Lindbergh alleged "conspiracy" with J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., in which Paul Warburg formerly was a partner, the First National Bank of New York and other great banking interests. Paul Warburg, Lindbergh declared, had been active in framing the Federal Reserve legislation in the interests of big business and, with others, had "by secret means" sought to influence and obtain the appointment of the present members of the board.

FOOD INVESTIGATION TO BE SWEEPING ONE

Federal Trade Commission Prepares Figures on Cost of Inquiry Requested by President

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The investigation into the soaring cost of living ordered by President Wilson will be a sweeping and far-reaching one, officials declared today. Under orders from the White House to speed up, the Federal Trade Commission was working diligently today preparing figures on the cost of the inquiry, as requested by the President.

Little difficulty in getting the funds for the investigation is anticipated in administration circles. It is expected that Congress will provide the funds immediately, and enough for the Department of Agriculture to co-operate to the fullest extent. President Wilson let it become known that he considers it of utmost importance that the nation know where it stands on the food supply situation in the present crisis. Conferences between heads of the Department of Justice and Agriculture and the Trade Commission were held today.

COAL PLentiful; WARN PUBLIC AGAINST PANIC

Buying of Unnecessarily Large Quantities Alone Can Create Shortage, Dealers Say

Some of the largest coal dealers in the city have assurance today that there was enough hard coal in Philadelphia to go around if house-holders did not become excited and order more than they actually needed. They pointed out that there was no call for consumers to become alarmed over the coal situation, for there is no particular shortage.

It has also been ascertained that the anthracite mines supplying Philadelphia are shipping more coal today than in December of last year.

A representative of the S. D. Hall Coal Company, Thirty-ninth and Parrish streets, said:

"There is absolutely no cause for alarm in the Philadelphia district. There is sufficient coal stored in Philadelphia yards to meet all normal demands, and if house-holders don't get panicky and order more than they need, we will have no trouble to matter how long the cold snap lasts. It is true that there is a shortage in pea coal, but there are plenty of other grades with which to make up the shortage. Several carloads of coal arrived in our yards this morning from the mines, and we are having no trouble supplying our customers. House-holders should be cautious to buy only what they actually need. If they do that there will be no coal famine in Philadelphia."

John A. Greer, of the John A. Greer & Co. firm, said:

"I fear if house-holders lose their heads and order more coal than they need there will be a coal famine in Philadelphia. But the truth of the matter is that there is enough coal stored in the city to meet all normal demands. We have plenty in our North Philadelphia yards."

W. J. Richards, president of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company, said:

"There is no cause for alarm in the hard coal situation. More coal was shipped in January, 1917, than in January, 1916. There is no reason to believe to suppose that February shipments will not be as great as in the same month of last year. There is enough coal to go around if people only buy as they need it."

CITES QUEEN OF SHEBA'S TRIBUTE TO STATE CRAFT

Archaeologist, in Address to Reformed Ministers, Points to Divine Hand in World's History

Dr. M. G. Kyle, a distinguished archaeologist, was the speaker at the regular Monday meeting of the Ministerial Association of the Reformed churches of Philadelphia, held today at their regular meeting place, Fifteenth and Race streets. His subject was, "Where the Archaeologist Finds God in the History of Israel."

"History is a cycle," he said, "ranging from the machinations of politicians to the guiding judgments of the Lord. God is in all history, but no one has ever equaled the religious statesman of the Bible, David the King of Israel. The Queen of Sheba made a trip equal to those days of a trip around the world today, to acquaint herself with the advanced civilization of those days. Doctor Kyle cited the example of the Egyptian dye industry. He told of a beautiful colored linen in the Cairo Museum, made more than 2000 years ago.

ONE-ROUND BOAT STAGED IN CORRIDORS OF SENATE

Patents Chief and Washington Lawyer Disagree Over Registration Bill and Use Fists

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—The Capitol was treated to an entertaining diversion from the German crisis today when E. W. Bradford, president of the patent bar association, and W. W. Dodge, prominent Washington attorney, staged a snappy one-round boat with bare fists in one of the Senate corridors.

The principals had disagreed in the Senate Patents Committee room over the patent registration bill. Relations became so strained that they decided to "step outside" and adjust their differences with bare fists. Rows were being exchanged vigorously when alert guards on the lookout for bomb plots intervened.

CITY OFFICIALS CLASH

Tax Collector Refuses Mayor's Demand to Submit Books to Council

SEASIDE HEIGHTS, N. J., Feb. 12.—Mayor Kramer and Tax Collector C. G. Marvey, of this place, have clashed on the subject of Marvey submitting his books through council. It was alleged there were discrepancies in Marvey's accounts, but an examination by an expert accountant showed only a few errors aggregating less than $10.

Marvey and his friends declare the men back of the movement for an investigation are Marvey's political enemies, and he will not consent unless ordered by the court to surrender his books.

4 CENTS FOR LONDON TIMES

Will Cost Even More if This Increase Does Not Reduce Circulation

LONDON, Feb. 12.—The London Times announces an increase in price of February 19 to four cents, the purpose being to reduce the sale and save white paper tonnage. This is preferred to reducing the size.

The Times appeals to its readers to revive old customs, such as one paper for two families, who would divide the cost and thus cut circulation. If this is not effective further increases in price are quickly probable.

ELIZABETH HILL DIES; LED IN PREPAREDNESS

Lost Health in Paris Hospital Work—Led Women's Division Here

Miss Elizabeth N. Hill, executive manager of the Pennsylvania Women's Division for National Preparedness, died early today at the Pennsylvania Hospital, virtually a victim of the European war, although the cause of her death is given as double pneumonia, which she contracted a week ago today.

Miss Hill ruined her health doing war hospital work in the American Hospital in Paris for many months. Last year she came to this city and took up the work of organizing the Pennsylvania Women's Division for National Preparedness with untiring zeal, without taking time to recuperate.

She has been ill for many weeks, and when the war clouds began to hover over this country, last week, Miss Hill worked at the organization of the Pennsylvania women with renewed energy. She kept the office at the State headquarters, 221 South Eighth street, open all day Sunday, February 4. Monday she was unable to be at the office and Monday night her illness was diagnosed as double pneumonia. Her sisters, Mrs. William J. Lester, of Kansas City, Mo., and Miss Josephine Hill, of New York, were sent for and have been at her bedside ever since.

Mrs. Lester says no one could have been more thoughtful for her state's welfare than the Pennsylvania Women's Division for National Preparedness. She said today that her sister was overworked as a result of her ambition to be of service.

She worked with the doctors and nurses right in the operating room at the American Hospital in Paris, said Mrs. Lester. "Days and nights, she herself was not a nurse, but she did regular work, volunteering her services, giving them to the country and the soldiers, just as though she had been a nurse. The work was too much for her. There she came to Philadelphia, where she was well known as a result of the years she spent in an official capacity at Miss Baldwin's School at Bryn Mawr. She had been working in the preparedness organization ever since it started."

Miss Hill was born on the Hill plantation, near Atlanta, Ga., fifty-three years ago. She was educated by her governess, she came North a number of years ago and was associated in an official capacity with Miss Baldwin's School, Bryn Mawr, for many years. Some years ago Miss Baldwin sent her to Paris to open the French branch of the Baldwin School. Miss Hill opened it and conducted it for American girls until the war in Europe. She then gave her services to the American Hospital at Paris, where she worked for more than a year before she came here.

THIRTEEN DIE IN FIRE IN MINNEAPOLIS HOTEL

One Woman Leaps to Death. Others Seen to Fall as Ledge Collapses

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 12.—Thirteen lives are believed to have been lost in a fire which destroyed the Kenwood Hotel here today.

Bodies of twelve of the victims are believed to be buried in the incandescent debris. The body of the other victim, a woman, who died from injuries suffered when she jumped to the street from a third-floor window, is at the morgue.

A mob attacked firemen when they arrived late without ladders, but was driven off.

The blaze, which originated on the lower floor of the old stone structure, was discovered about midnight. Lives of sixty-eight persons living in the building were imperiled by the flames, which caused a loss estimated at about $25,000.

Firemen base their belief that many perished in the fire on the statement of Allen Pahlson, one of the first to arrive. He said he saw many persons come to the third-floor windows and cry for help, then fall back into the flames. All of those perished, firemen believe.

An account of the heavy snow of ice which formed over the entire frozen lake was given by the firemen. They said that the fire started late today or tomorrow.

George Omland, who was on the ledge until the firemen were frozen. When he fell he struck Ernie Johnson, who was entering the building to help those on the lower floor. Johnson broke Omland's fall and probably saved his life. Both men were slightly hurt.

Miss Ruth Beams, who roomed with Mrs. Lucille Squire, who leaped from a third-story window, jumped from the same window about five minutes after Mrs. Squire leaped. She was caught in an improvised net made of spectators' overcoats. Several women jumped from the second and third stories.

E. D. Stalker, proprietor, went back into the burning building after rescuing his wife to save $1000 which he kept in his room. He was overcome by the smoke and was carried out by firemen.

Ray Davis crawled twenty feet along a three-inch ledge to escape the flames and was finally carried down by firemen. Moore leaped to the street from a second-floor window and was only slightly hurt.

PENN QUINTET EN ROUTE FOR BIG YALE GAME

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 12.—Hundreds of fans are expected to gather in the Yale basketball forum tonight for the clash of Old Blue with the University of Pennsylvania. Yale's tossers are in great shape and are set to give the Red and Blue a hard battle for the large end of the score when the last blast of the referee's whistle goes off. Penn's team is expected to arrive late this afternoon.

PENN QUINTET EN ROUTE FOR BIG YALE GAME

It is understood that reports received here of the injuries to Captain McNichol, Penn's forward, and Lavin, the other point, are exaggerated. McNichol is in fine shape and will lead his teammates in the game. Lavin wears a bandage, but it is said to cover a slight cut on his forehead, as the result of a collision with McNichol during a scrimmage last week, and he is able to play here and there as frolicously as ever.

Yale and Pennsylvania are deadlocked for several years, a Princeton on top with a lead of half a game. This is a crucial game tonight, therefore.

The motor coupe was driven by Isaac F. Barton, of 5219 Wynnewood avenue, Overbrook, an officer of the Victor Talking Machine Company. After the accident he went before Magistrate Lewis, of Bryn Mawr, and was released on his promise to appear if wanted.

This was the first fatal automobile accident in Lower Merion township in nearly four years.

MONTREAL MAN SAYS HE HELPED KILL MODEL

Surrenders to Canadian Police as Accomplice of Lewis—Local Authorities Doubt Tale

A man has been arrested in Montreal, after telling the police of that city a story that he participated in the murder of Marie Colbert, the model, in the Wilton Apartments at Fifteenth and Poplar streets.

Captain Tate, of the Detective Bureau here, received a telegram today informing him of the arrest. The prisoner said he was Frederick J. Farrell, of the Montreal army medical corps. He told the police he was with Bernard W. Lewis, who committed suicide in Atlantic City, when the murder occurred. He said, too, that he helped Lewis place the dead woman in the bed where she was found. Captain Tate, following the receipt of the telegram, went into consultation immediately with former Knight, District Attorney Roian and Superintendent Robinson.

The communication, which revives one of the most talked-of murder sensations in Philadelphia's police history, after a full of several weeks, was sent by O. Champagne, chief of police of Montreal.

The communication said: "Frederick J. Farrell, connected with the army medical corps of this city, gave himself up today and said he was wanted in your city in connection with the murder of Marie Colbert in the Wilton Apartments. He stated that all was with Lewis when the girl was killed and assisted Lewis to put her in bed. Wire immediately as to disposition."

By the last line the police chief meant whether or not he should arrange for the transportation of the prisoner to this city. At the conference with the other officials, Captain Tate, who had previously insisted that Lewis was the guilty man, will determine whether or not Farrell should be brought here.

Three possibilities have been developed by the man's arrest, Tate explained. The man may be insane and his story may simply be the product of a disordered imagination. Or, Lewis may frequently "confess" to connection with crimes in cases where they are really innocent.

The man, having been enlisted in the army, may have been arranged here for the tale to obtain release from his military duties. And the third possibility, Captain Tate admitted, that his story may be true, is pointed out, however, saying "Believe that Lewis was the guilty man, will determine whether or not Farrell should be brought here."
