Johnson, Tener, Connie Mack and Comiskey Revolted Against Organization in Bygone Years. George Stallings Has Record of Loyalty

A SCORE of baseball magnates are gathered in New York today for the purpose of forever destroying the Players' Fraternity headed by Dave Fultz-hold no brief for the organization, but it is interesting to note the record of several of the men who will take a leading part in the interment ceremony. The magnates have decided that the fraternity must be obliterated-Fultz has been found guilty of lese majeste and the organization which he heads is doomed for the good of baseball," and yet some of the very men who arranged the demise of the fraternity were in their youth numbered among the liveliest opponents of organized baseball. It was Ban Johnson who led the American League revolt in 1901. John K. Tener, as a pitcher, hopped from the National League to the Brotherhood. Connie Mack also hurdled from organized baseball to the Players' League during his active career on the diamond. Charlie Comiskey captained the Chicago Players' League team after leaping from the Browns. And these are among the men who will within the next few days take grastic action against the Players' Fraternity. Verily, it makes a big difference which side of the fence a man is on.

George Stallings, one of the stormy petrels of modern baseball, is one of the few baseball leaders in an ethical position to push the case against the re-volting players. In 1890 George refused to jump from organized baseball and, as gunior catcher, backstopped for the Brooklyn team. And Stallings is one of the few men prominent in organized baseball who has not burst forth into print against the methods of Dave Fultz and the men he represents.

And it is the Ban Johnson who led the greatest revolt in the history of the game who says that John Henry, the Washington catcher, must go for his activity in the threatened strike of the players. It is to laugh,

"Tuffy" Conn Will Not Break

"TUFFY" CONN, the well-press-agented youth of the Far West, will not twirl the brakes of some of our best trains to Atlantic City as the preamble to entering the University of Pennsylvania as he had intended. The credit list of studies the youthful but alarming halfback of the Oregon Aggies presented was not accepted by the faculty of Penn. and yesterday the news was broken to the all-Western backfielder that he would have to brace up certain departments of his university preparation before he could have a fling at gridiron fame on Franklin Field. Accordingly the stocky little fellow will enter La Salle College, peruse his books diligently and enter the University when the autumn leaves are falling "Tuffy" was to the Oregon Aggies what Howard Berry was to Penn last season. His specialty is the sensational and long runs a-yipping for the goal line of the enemy. He is a great broken-field runner and hard to stop because he is built so close to the turf.

"Tuffy" Has Seen Much in His Life

TUFFY" announced when he first landed in town that if he could not get into Penn he would get a job as a brakeman and try to enter the University as a freshman next year. He is a splendid trackman at that. But his hobby on the cinder tracks is not railroading so much as it is sprinting. He has won many events in the Golden Gate area togged out in his spiked shoes, and has almost as great a reputation for his running as for football. He will be a valuable piece of mechanism Penn athletic circles, though the one-year rule will keep him out of service right at the start.

"Tuffy" says that he has covered more than 4000 miles on trips with athletic teams since his school days.

"Out where I live," says "Tuffy," "they don't think anything of a slight 1500mile trip to play some other team. I have taken plenty of trips up and down the

"Tuffy" says that Howard Berry didn't have chance in the game at the Coast for the reason that the enemy were "laving for him" and he couldn't break away because they smothered him every time he got the ball.

"I don't believe he gained five yards in the whole game," said "Tuffy." "I could sympathize with Berry. It was the same with me. When I was playing football around Los Angeles and in Southern California they were all on to me and watched me so I couldn't make a break. But when I got up north there in Oregon where I wasn't known it was a cinch to get away any old time."

. Kicked Around With Doug and Charlie

STRUFFY." like all other inhabitants of the movie-star-inhabited stretches of California, has seen considerable of movie scenario action and has even kicked around with some of the stars. He and Doug Fairbanks, for instance, are old cronles, and many is the time he has gone fishing with the athletic movie hero. Many is the time he has passed Charlie Chaplin on the street, and "Tuffy" says Charlie is just like anybody else.

Conn said he was one of a big crowd that watched the action of the filming of "Intolerance." The towers, he said, were built of cardboard, but some of the construction in the big scenes was really remarkable.

"Seventy-five men are still in the hospital out there as the result of falling off the towers and walls in the big battle scenes. They were supposed to fall in nets. Some did and some didn't. But at that, you wouldn't catch me doing some of those falls. I'd rather play in a tough football game than go through some of the stunts they ask the supes to do in the movies."

which the youthful athlete has as much terror as stunts in the movies and that is trips on the billowy deep. He never fails to be afflicted with the most rabid sessickness.

Benny Leonard in Line for Welsh

WHEN Benny Leonard, with an injured hand, fought a pair of scraps a counie of weeks ago in New York and pasted Phil Bloom and Frankie Callahan all over the same number of rings he proved conclusively that he is ready for another crack at Champion Welsh. Efforts undoubtedly will be made to get the two lightweights together in a twenty-round match. If they do mingle over the marathon route it is freely predicted that Leonard is bound to win. It is pointed out with considerable seriousness that, even if Leonard didn't lay a glove on the elusive Britisher in the first ten rounds, he would be certain to eatch up before the score was over. And when he did! They point to the deadly execution of Leonard's right hand.

In the bout with Bloom Leonard's left hand was absolutely helpless. The best he could do with it was a very poor attempt at guarding. He couldn't stab with it. He made a show of holding it in front of him, but it did little good. But in no less than three rounds he had Bloom in a very had way. And Bloom is one of the toughest lightweights in the game.

Frankie Callahan Found the Same Conditions

FRANKIE discovered that Leonard's left hand was in bad shape and he directed his efforts toward that side of his opponent with some success. He made a better showing than Bloom, but in the end he was just as badly cut up by the vicious uppercuts and crosses from the Harlem boxer. Leonard was fast, and an excellent judge of distance, and he stopped numerous heavy blows from the gloves of his opponent. Such a showing as this entities Leonard to some consideration from the champion. Welsh has engaged in only one twentyround contest since he won his title. He never has risked it more than that one

It is time another real match was made for Weish, and Leonard apparently is the man.

· Willard-Fulton Battle Next on the Boards

TEN-ROUND bout between Jess Willard and Fred Fulton may be expected by boxing fans for the next big heavyweight contest. By disposing of Charley Weinert so easily in two rounds last night in New York, Ferocious Fredck virtually gained the right to mingle in combat with the heavyweight chamon. All Reich, Tom Cowier and Weinert have fallen before the hefty wallops of Fulton and there appears no other barrier, unless it be Frank Moran, who is said be shot to pieces, between the latest heavyweight sensation and Willard. Whether Fulton can knock out Willard is the big question. But if a tend bout between them goes the limit both will be panned as a pair of dubs. other hand if Willard stops Fulton, Fred's knockouts will be forgotten he will be looked upon as poor a heavyweight as others now hopelessly conag for Big Jess's scalp. However, there is no getting out of it, Willard and on are going to meet, and it is up to Jess to place Fred in the discard with other big hams. Likewise—that is if a Willard-Fulton encounter goes ten the prowess of the champion still will be scoffed at.

It's got to be a knockout or both Willard and Fulton will be roasted like a couple of big, healthy hams.

Then it was a grandstand rally in the sixth by Jackson that enabled him to leave the ring undefeated, yet not the victor. It was a most interesting contest from the opening gong until the finish, with terrific punches landed by both parties. In the last period Jackson crossed a right hand punch on Root's chin while the latter was backing away and Art, slipping on the wet canvas. nelped Bill score a questionable knockdown. One big redeeming feature in Jackson's favor was the proof that he has no "glass" jaw, for he withstood a number of vicious ight hand wallops on this vulnerable spo right nand wattops on this value and some popped some real haymakers off Willie's chin. Jackson, too, connected with some healthy slams, and Root's strong jaw also was in evidence

The melee was far from a tea party for either. It wasn't expected to be for Root, but Jackson was the one who suffered rather than enjoyed the surprise of having to box at his very best form. Root's mouth showed crimson from beginning to end, while Jackon's left eye was gashed in the third round and his nose bled beginning with the fifth.

At the finish Lewis's face was badly cut and covered with blood, leaving the ring a rather rough-looking customer instead of the good-looking was on entering.
Wally Hinckle outboxed Danny Fields

Al Fox stopped Johnny Murphy in the fifth after the latter had taken an unmerciful lacing, and Doc Phelan coached Battling Mills to victory over Johnny Plazzi.

Half a dozen extra bouts were put on in different sections of the arena, and like the five scheduled numbers they were "nodecision affairs." Another bad featur decision anairs. Another pad reature was that all of the speciators were unable to see the unscheduled battles, and there was no room for argument as to the winners.

Henny Leonard's bout with Jimmy Duffy, which was set for tonight in New York, has been declared off owing to Leonard's left hand again soing wrong.

Nannarell A. C.'s first Wednesday night show, tomorrow night, will nave formmy Cole-man and Gus Sudenberg, a middleweight, from the west, in the wind-up. Other bouts will be Charley Daley and Mike Burns, Indian Russell and Young Cuban, Benny Harrison and Marty McKenns and Charley Pat and Eddie Hughes.

Rattling Murray was the only Philadelphian who won his match in Baltimore last night. He was given the referee's decision over "Baltimore Frankie" White. Toung Medway was stopped by Steve Pleasner and Harry Mitchell quit to Jee Chaney. Frankie White failed to show up for his match with George Chaney, and Willie Jones, of Brooklyn, substituted. Chaney stopped Jones in the fifth.
