

MAGNATES IN NEW YORK FOR BIG SESSION—FULTON DOESN'T APPEAL TO 'BOB' MAXWELL

FRED FULTON WALLOPS WEINERT, BUT HAS MUCH TO LEARN BEFORE AIMING AT ONE WILLARD'S JAW

Referee Stops Uneven Battle in Second Round When Scarlet Flow Stains Smaller Man's Features—Winner Fails to Impress Critics

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Fred Fulton scored another "glorious" victory at Madison Square Garden last night, when he battered and pummeled little Charley Weinert into helplessness in less than two rounds of what was supposed to be a ten-round bout. For five minutes and twelve seconds forward the furious knocker of the smaller and lighter opponent all over the ring and although Weinert was far from being in a serious condition, Referee Bill Brown stopped the uneven battle.

It was an uninteresting contest because the smaller man didn't have a chance. It also had all the earmarks of a "set-up" for Fulton, for Weinert was forty pounds lighter, seven inches shorter and his reach lacked several inches of that of the plasterer. It really was pathetic from a spectator's viewpoint, but the promoters and the boxers probably were satisfied. Weinert received $1000 whether he won or lost and he surely got his money without much effort on his part. What Fulton got is a mystery, but whatever it was his face and soon he was bleeding from the nose and mouth. Fulton was in no danger and when he realized it, he fought harder than ever. Fred is a great boxer when he is winning and he showed up well last night.

In the second round, however, he slowed up when Weinert connected with his jaw several times and then backed his head to the ropes, showering lefts and rights to the body. Fulton did not like that kind of rough treatment and gazed reproachfully at his foe. It took him almost a minute to recover from the shock and then he

INGOLD ERTRESVAAG OPERATED ON TODAY

An operation was performed on Ingold Ertresvaag, right guard of the Penn football team last season, at the University Hospital this morning. The knife was wielded on the gridiron giant to remedy an injury he received in the Penn State game last fall on Franklin Field.

Following this accident Ertresvaag was obliged to play wrapped in plaster bandages. None of the coaches knew how serious his injury was till the Oregon game in Pasadena, where Ertresvaag admitted that he could not play with his usual strength. The big guard feared that unless he submitted to an operation he would not be able to make the team next year and decided yesterday to be operated on. He will go to his father's wheat ranch in South Dakota after he is released from the hospital, and hopes to return to Penn in the fall to play once more for Bob Fowlwell.

K.O. FOR HOLDOUTS SCHEDULED TODAY

Baseball Moguls Reach New York Ready to Battle With Dave Fultz et al.

MAGNATES DETERMINED

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Moguls of base ball, large and small, are on the scene of battle today, all ready for the opening stanza of the furious battle between O. B. and Dave Fultz's Frat. Although Mr. Fultz and his organization have been virtually out of the running for some weeks, the movement has not yet been officially killed and the magnates are here for that very purpose. No quarter will be given, and before the shades of night have fallen it is believed that unionized baseball will walk the plank.

The barons of the diamond are in a belligerent mood. They are shouting defiance at everything and everybody, and it's a safe bet that the one-brave players in the hold-out class will be howling for mercy when the work is put on. The corridors of the Waldorf are thronged with heroes and martyrs and some of the latter look as if they were about to be led to the electric chair.

William F. Baker, president of the Phila. found the time last night to speak a few words when cornered without the aid of a net.

"If the other magnates feel the same as I," he said, "the Players' Fraternity will be allowed to perish without a word of regret. I am in favor of ignoring it altogether and not mention it in the meeting. As for other business to come up, I have nothing to say."

Charles Hercules Ebbets, however, was in a more talkative mood. He stated that baseball would be played this year regardless of the attitude of the players, and if the holdouts did not sign up at his figures they could remain idle.

"I have thirteen men signed up at present," he declared, "and I shall start the season with them if necessary. I can find
