LAW TO BE ENFORCED

Existing Statute Adequate—Doctor Jump Points Out Dangers of Filthy Conditions

Law in Pennsylvania on Keeping Streets Clean

BE IT enacted, etc. That from and after the passage of this act, it shall be unlawful, and is hereby forbidden for any person or persons to throw waste paper, sweepings, ashes, household waste, nails or rubbish of any kind into any street, in any city, borough or township in this Commonwealth, to interfere with, scatter or disturb the contents of any receptacle or receptacles containing sweepings, garbage, household waste or rubbish, which shall be placed upon any of said paved streets or sidewalks for the collection of the contents thereof. Any person or persons who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall upon conviction thereof before any magistrate be sentenced to pay the cost of prosecution and to forfeit and pay a fine not exceeding ten dollars for each and every such offense, and in default of the payment thereof shall be committed and imprisoned in the county jail for a period not exceeding ten days.

Enacted April 20, 1905.

A law has been unearthed which covers every phase of street littering and which provides punishment for all transgressors. This was announced by Albert Cross, director of the Child Federation, in a discussion of the effect of dirty streets on public health at the Monday Conference held in the New Century Drawing Rooms, 111 South Twelfth street. Mr. Cross emphasized the fact that he did not wish to criticize the police department. He said that perhaps it was in all sincerity that municipal department awaited the passage of an act sanctioning strict action, but that there was no further need of waiting, as the existing act fully covered existing cases.

Inspector Cornelius Cahalane, of the New York city police department, outlined the cooperative "clean streets" plan of New York. He laid stress on the obligation of the police to act at all times in strict accordance with the law.

Mr. Cross drew attention to the fact that Philadelphia is the only large city in the United States whose police do not co-operate in keeping the streets clean. He strengthened his contention by reading letters from heads of the police systems in various large cities in which the fact was invariably felt upon that enforcement of keeping the streets clean was as big a job of the police as keeping them peaceful.

Mr. Cross referred to a newly formed committee and subcommittee on clean streets of which he has been appointed chairman. The office of this committee will be to receive complaints from citizens about instances of dirty streets being overlooked by policemen.

Dr. Henry D. Jump, president of the County Medical Society of Philadelphia, discussed dirty streets from the standpoint of public health. He enumerated various diseases directly or indirectly traceable to the filth of the streets.

"In infantile paralysis," he said, "the method of transmission is unknown; but there is a general belief among physicians that the disease may be transmitted by dust."

"In an interview with Director Wilson he agreed with us that cleanliness was a better health, and told us that he was satisfied that the law was sufficient and would assure us that the police department would be back of this movement. In an interview with the Mayor he said that the matter had been under consideration for some time, and that he was satisfied that movements about to be started would result in better conditions."

"I am informed that tomorrow Director Wilson and Chief of Police Connelley will call the heads of police together and inform them of this new movement, and will insist that the orders issued shall be carried out, and these orders will be enforced by the ordinance."

JERSEY TAKES FIRST STEP IN UNIVERSAL TRAINING

National Guard Armories and Drill Halls Placed at Disposal of Civilian Patriotic Bodies

TRENTON, March 26.—Announcement was made today that New Jersey has taken a step forward, unofficially, along the lines of universal military training. Following the suggestion made by Governor Edge, Adjutant General Charles W. Barber has forwarded instructions to the commanding officer of each organization of the National Guard occupying armories and drill halls within the State, that the State's facilities for aid and training of the members of civilian patriotic societies, such as the League of National Defense, Home Defense Guards, etc., shall be extended as far as may be practicable without diminishing the authority or responsibility of the organization commander or materially interfering with the regular and required use of the State facilities by the National Guard.

These instructions have been sent to the commanding officers of the National Guard, and these are cautioned to handle the applications from such organizations according to the sound judgment of the responsible officer on the ground, the accounts to be granted only after the organizations applying have been carefully investigated as to their respective character.

The adjutant general also advised that the personnel of the guard should contribute their services as instructors for such organizations.

It is announced that the encouragement of independent military training will be with due regard for the care, preservation and safekeeping of the State's armory property, and it was also stipulated that the legitimate and required activities shall not be suspended or materially interfered with.

BRITAIN "WORKING HARD" ON THE IRISH QUESTION

Douglas Law Tells Dillon Government is Deeply Concerned Over Its Solution

LONDON, March 26.—The Government is sending every day toward the settlement of the Irish question, according to information revealed in the House of Commons today.

Responding to an appeal by the Irish leader Dillon, warning him of the necessity of no delay in such a settlement, "Chancellor of the Exchequer" Douglas Law said the Government was "deeply concerned and working hard."

Law, an intimate friend of Premier Lloyd George, said the Prime Minister has been almost constantly occupied with the Irish question since last Thursday.

Harold Yarnall Slain by Burglar

After the shooting Mr. Yarnall was taken to the Pennsylvania Hospital, where he was operated upon by his family physician, Dr. John H. Gibson. Mr. Yarnall is fifty-one years old.

Mrs. Yarnall collapsed after she had rushed to the window and called for help and is now under the care of Dr. Hobart A. Hare at her home. She described the fugitive as a man with a beard and a coat with a saffron-colored lining and a hat with a saffron-colored band. Mrs. Yarnall says she believes he was admitted to the house by a colored woman who was cooking for the family just for the day in the absence of the regular cook, who was ill. The substitute cook fled during the melee.

Mr. Yarnall had been in the company of his brother, Charlton Yarnall, during the afternoon at the latter's farm near Newtown. They returned shortly after 6:30 o'clock, and were to dress for dinner which Charlton Yarnall had been giving at his home on Sundays during the winter. While Mrs. Yarnall went to her room, which is on the second floor, her husband went to the bathroom and was in the bathtub when he heard her shout.

CAME TO WIFE'S AID

The door to Mrs. Yarnall's room was opened. It swung back a barefooted intruder who had her jewelry and a mesquite which contained $100. As she stepped to the bureau for her comb she espied the cooler intruder crouching behind the door. The burglar flung the door shut and then sprang at Mrs. Yarnall. She grappled with the man while she screamed for her husband. The intruder smothered her cries with one hand, opened the door with the other hand, and then attempted to drag her into the hallway, all the while trying to shake off her grip.

The bathroom is on the same floor with Mrs. Yarnall's room, and Mr. Yarnall had just completed his bath when he heard the cries.

Mr. Yarnall rushed at once to her aid. As he jumped at the negro he pulled a revolver from his hip pocket and fired. Mr. Yarnall staggered forward, and released her hold. As she did so, Mr. Yarnall half pushed and half threw the negro toward the head of the stairs. Then, although his wound was bleeding freely, he either kicked or fell down the stairs with the man.

As the burglar reached the bottom he arose and fired again at his victim. The shot went wild, however, and buried itself in the wall.

During the battle Mrs. Yarnall rushed to one of the bedrooms and called for aid. George Mason Chichester, a neighbor, at 820 Pine street, heard the screams and the sounds of the struggle, and arming himself with a revolver went into the Yarnall home. When he arrived the desperado had disappeared.

Mr. Yarnall, after the burglar fled, had arisen and staggered up stairs, still conscious, although suffering from the wound in the groin. He hung over the balustrade and directed the latter to search the premises to see if he could find the burglar. Then he walked slowly to his own room, where he lay down on the bed. When Chichester reached him Mr. Yarnall said calmly:

"Get Doctor Gibson and send for the ambulance at the hospital."

Mrs. Yarnall's cries had reached the ears of the ambulance driver across the street, and he hurried to the house. By this time Chichester had telephoned to the family physician and informed the latter of the affair. He had just gone in to dinner at his home, 1719 Locust street, when the telephone rang, and he learned that his brother had been shot.

Charlton Yarnall went at once to the home of his brother, where Mrs. Harold Yarnall told him the circumstances of the shooting. He then hurried to the Pennsylvania Hospital, where Daniel Frost, the superintendent, met him, and, with several friends, went to the ward. Harold Yarnall, still conscious, related his story to Charlton Yarnall, and then Doctor Gibson took charge of his patient.

Rapid Strides Made in City Preparedness

WHEELS SET IN MOTION

The opening of the recruiting office in the Third Regiment armory was ordered even before the receipt of the official orders. Last night the officers of the Philadelphia regiments generally were uncertain as to the next steps to be taken. Telephone messages from Adjutant General Stewart, at Harrisburg, started the wheels in motion, and every effort will be made to bring the regiments up to war strength before orders for their movement are received.

Great activity was manifested today by the officers and men of the First and Third Regiments, the local organizations of the United States National Guard of Pennsylvania, which have been ordered to mobilize and hold themselves in readiness for an immediate call from the War Department. Brigadier General William G. Price, Jr., was notified of the summons yesterday by Major General Charles M. Clement. He immediately issued the orders to the commanders of the local regiments.

Colonel George E. Kenn, commander of the Third Regiment, and, in the absence from the city of Colonel Charles C. Allen, Jr., commander of the First Regiment, Lieutenant Colonel Millard D. Brown, commander of the orders and notified the captains of companies. A hurry call to come home was sent to Colonel Allen, who is in the South on army duty.

Colonel Brown called a meeting of the regimental officers this morning, and requested them to get their companies in readiness for the muster-in Wednesday. He told them that he had no inkling as to what duty the regiment would be assigned.

The officers were assembled through hurry calls over the telephone, by special delivery mail and by notices read from the pulpits of various churches last night.

FIFTY RECRUITS REPORTED

Nearly fifty prospective recruits were reported by the company commanders. The regiment will not open a recruiting office until the arrival of surgeons from Harrisburg.

The First and Third Regiments returned from Mexican border service on October 9 and 11, respectively. They were the first Pennsylvania regiments and among the first National Guard units in the country to get back into civilian harness. This fact, it is thought, caused their selection by the War Department over other local guard organizations for present "protection" purposes.

Colonel Kenn explained that when the situation with Germany became acute he had had his commissioned officers and enlisted men do "missionary" work among the young men downtown, with the result that scores of recruits have been gathered. These "recruits" will take the places of the men who have served their terms of enlistment and have been placed on the reserve.

The equipment of the First and Third Regiments is in splendid shape, the officers say. Supply wagons and other necessary equipment are ready to be removed from the armories at a minute's notice.

The services of ten trucks, seven passenger automobiles and from 300 to 500 men were offered to the navy today by F. S. Stover, sales manager of the Class & Naught Brewing Company, Tenth street and Montgomery avenue. The offer was made at the Naval Home by Mr. Stover, who said that the company could place that number of men at the Government's disposal.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., March 26.—Claude Minsler, eighteen years old, late last night called on Mrs. Louise Goodlayer, sixteen years old, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Schreiner, and holding a Bible in one hand and a bullet in the other told her to make her selection.

The young woman, a bride, went into hysterics and Minsler was locked up. He is an admirer of the girl, who married James Goodlayer, his rival, now working in a munition plant in Canada. Minsler says he wanted to enlist today and this was only his farewell, one evening last week he grabbed her as she was returning from the theatre, but she broke away.

W. POTTER EASILY WINS COURT TENNIS LAURELS

Jennings, Despite Big Handicap, Is Beaten in Straight Sets for Racquet Club Title

Outplaying his opponent at all stages of the match Wilson Potter easily defeated C. B. Jennings in the final round of the Class A court tennis singles handicap at the Racquet Club today, 6-1, 6-1, 6-4. All the matches in the previous rounds had been close and interesting, and a hard fought contest had been looked forward to in the final round. (Jennings received a handicap of fifteen and two biggies.) Jennings, however, was completely off his game and never stood a ghost of a chance against the steady play of Potter.

After Potter had run the score up to five games to none in his favor in the first set Jennings took his two biggies in a jump with the score thirty-five in the eighth game and saved himself from a shutout. Potter won the seventh game and the set in the second set Jennings made better use of his biggies and by means of them he won the second and sixth games by means of them and followed it up by taking eight. It was the best he could do, however, and Potter against won, this time by six games to three.

Having run the score up to five games to one in the third set Potter slackened his efforts somewhat and Jennings seized the opportunity to win these games. With the score forty-five in his favor in the tenth game Jennings missed a fine opportunity of making it five all by losing three points in a row. Having brought the score up to three points and won the set and match.

Wilson Potter..... 5 6 6
C. B. Jennings..... 1 3 4
Jennings received 15 and 2 biggies.
