More Arrangements for Red Cross Benefits Are Being Made—Nancy Wynne Goes to Jefferson Rummage Sale

THE combination of a good floor and good music (and by good music I mean the Meyer Davis orchestra) is hard to beat, and they will be found at a dance which is being arranged to take place on May 7 at the Philadelphia Cricket Club for the benefit of the American Red Cross. The girls in charge of the affair are members of the Wissahickon Red Cross Unit and meet at the home of Theodora Ross, Wissahickon avenue and Upsal street, Germantown, every Wednesday afternoon. They will bandage and make all sorts of garments with a good deal of earnestness and accuracy. The dance there is for this worthy cause, so keep May 7 open and make that date a special occasion. A number of the younger set in Germantown are vitally interested, and tickets may be obtained from Miss Ross, Anna Law, Frances Kilburn, Mrs. George Carson, Mrs. Ernest Pringle, Helen Campion, Gladys Edwards, Mrs. Robert Wilkinson and Marjorie Peck.

HONEST to goodness, do you have you stopped at that sale at the Hale Building? Well, my dears, you should, if only to see the crowds of people. Why, they tell me the first morning Mrs. Emmit Hare, who is selling clothes on the balcony, was nearly pushed through the window, so great was the onrush of bargain hunters, and she finally had to scream for help. City Hall had to send over two policemen. All the women are wearing rubber gloves, which sounds as if they distrusted their own goods, doesn't it? But they don't, bless your heart. Why they buy the things themselves. It's just that it's a very dusty corner and it is more sanitary anyhow. It would kill you, the things people do. I saw one handsomely gowned woman departing to her car armed with half a dozen old high hats. I found that she had said, "I came early on the scene hoping for some very things. I skin them, you know, and make the most beautiful handbags you've ever seen." And she departed overjoyed.

MRS. FIELDING OTIS LEWIS. Photo by Marconi. Mrs. Lewis, who is the wife of Doctor Lewis, is energetically engaged in the work of the Jefferson Hospital rummage sale, now going on at the Hale Building.

There were several "gentlemen of color" who had aspirations to become butlers and were early on the premises looking for dress suits and dinner coats. I'll warrant they got good-looking ones, too. Altogether it was a refreshing sight to see the eagerness displayed by the would-be buyers of beautiful things. As I passed in the afternoon I spied a pink satin evening dress hanging in the window and a fetching sky blue one was peeping around the corner. And every morning there are new things, you know, so I think my prediction comes true that you can buy everything under the sun there.

THE inquiring young mind, as it advances day by day, finds something new to ask about. Little M— has been going to church for several Sundays with her pretty mother, but quite unexpected was the question put to her fond parent when she said, "Mother, when do you get back from heaven?" "You don't come back from heaven," answered the mother. "Why do you ask that?" "Then how does our minister know so much about it?" remarked daughter, who is six years old. NANCY WYNNE.

THE FIRST EVICTION

PELLUCIDAR Sequel to "At the Earth's Core." BY EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS Author of the "Tarzan" Stories

CHAPTER VIII—Continued I HAD paddled to the southwestward point, which looked said he believed to be the least frequented portion of the island, as he had never seen boats put off from there. I found a shallow reef running far out into the sea and rather precipitous cliffs running almost to the surf. It was a nasty place to land, and I realized now why it was not used by the natives; but at last I managed, after a good wetting, to beach my canoe and scale the cliffs. The country beyond them appeared more open and parklike than I had anticipated, since from the mainland the entire coast that is visible seems densely clothed with tropical jungle. This jungle, as I could see from the vantage point of the cliff-top, formed but a relatively narrow strip between the sea and the more open forest and meadow of the interior. Farther back there was a range of low but apparently very rocky hills, and here and there all about were visible flat-topped and jagged peaks—small mountains, in fact—which reminded me of pictures I had seen of landscapes in New Mexico. Altogether, the country was very much broken and very few higher than a dozen streams winding down from among the table-topped and conical hills into a pretty river which emptied into a northern bay or gulf toward the opposite end of the island.

As I let my eyes roam over the scene I suddenly became aware of figures moving upon the flat top of a far-distant butte. Whether they were beast or human, though I could not tell, but at least they were alive, and I determined to prosecute my search for Hoojja's stronghold in the general direction of this butte. To descend to the valley required no great effort. As I swung along through the lush grass and the fragrant flowers, my cudgel swinging in my hand and my javelin looped across my shoulders with its aurochs-hide strap, I felt equal to any emergency, ready quite a little distance and I was passing through a strip of wood which lay at the foot of one of the flat-topped hills, when I became conscious of the sensation of being watched. My life within Pellucidar has rather quickened my senses of sight, hearing and smell, and, too, certain primitive intuitive or instinctive qualities that seem blunted in civilized man. But, though I was positive that eyes were upon me, I could see no sign of any living thing within the wood other than the many gay-plumaged birds and little monkeys which filled the trees with life, color and action.

To you it may seem that my conviction was the result of an overwrought imagination, or to the actual reality of the prying eyes of the little monkeys or the curious glances of the birds; but there is a difference which I cannot explain between the sensation of casual observation and studied espionage. A sheep might gaze at you without transmitting a warning to your subconscious mind because you are in no danger from a sheep. But let a tiger gaze fixedly at you from ambush, and unless your primitive instincts are completely loused you will presently commence to glower nervously about and be filled with vague, unreasoning terror. This was it with me; then I grasped my cudgel more firmly and unslung my javelin, carrying it in my left hand. I peered to left and right, but I saw nothing. All, quite suddenly, there fell about by neck and shoulders, around my arms and body, a number of pliant fiber ropes which I was trussed up as neatly as you might wish. One of the nooses dropped to my ankles and was jerked up with a suddenness that brought me to my face with a gasp. Then something heavy and hairy sprang upon my back. I fought to draw my knife, but hairy hands grasped my wrists and, dragging them behind my back, bound them securely. Next my feet were bound. Then I was turned over upon my back to look up into the faces of my captors. And what I saw I imagine if you can a cross between a sheep and a gorilla, and you will have some conception of the physiognomy of the creature that bent close above me, and of those of half-dozen others that gazed at me from my face with length and great eyes of the sheep, and the bull-neck and hideous fangs of the gorilla. Their bodies and limbs were both man and gorilla like. As they bent over me they conversed in a monosyllabic tongue that was perfectly intelligible to me. It was something of a simplified language that had no need for nouns and verbs, but such words as it included were the same as those of the human beings of Pellucidar. It was amplified by many gestures which filled in the spaces between the words intended doing
