A Natural Inquiry

Timothy O'Brien, while passing down Main street one morning, was hit on the head by a brick which fell from a building in process of construction. He was taken to the hospital in an unconscious condition, but was soon revived sufficiently to send for a lawyer. Some days later he received a call from his lawyer, who informed him that he had settled the case, whereupon he peeled off seven crisp, new $100 bills.

"How much did you get?" questioned Tim, feebly.

"Twenty-five hundred dollars," replied the lawyer, complacently.

"Twenty-five hundred dollars and you give me seven hundred?" screamed Tim. "Say, who got hit by that brick, you or me?"

The Young Lady Across the Way

The young lady across the way says there's such a thing as being intemperate even with soft drinks, and it tells here in the paper how a man was made deathly sick by drinking too much de-natured alcohol.

THE PADDED CELL

FALSE ALARM!

Fascination of the Unknown

"My dear, I had the most thrilling moment of my life last night at a restaurant. The electric lights went out unexpectedly and he kissed me—a long delicious kiss."

"Who did?"

"Who? I don't know who. That is why it was so thrilling."

Overdraft

Mother—You and John should start right by opening a little bank account.

Newly Married Daughter—No; John used to have one, but I guess it is an awful bother and the bank doesn't appreciate it, anyway. He says that it was continually after him to put in more money.—Puck.

SCHOOL DAYS

SO! THAT'S the way you've been wearing out the knees of your stockings—scrawling chalk all over the sidewalk! Now you waltz right in the house, young man, and get a pail of water and a brush and scrub that walk—CLEAN! Don't leave a smudge on, and if I catch you down on your knees again I'll warm you GOOD!
