

JOHN G. JOHNSON IN THE ROLE HE PRIZED MOST—"A PHILADELPHIA LAWYER"

ARMED CAP-A-PIE FOR FORENSIC BATTLE
On his way from office to courtroom, fortified to wage titanic struggle with antagonistic legal giants, Mr. Johnson was undistinguishable from other pedestrians

THE PROFFERED ROBES OF JUDGESHIP HE DECLINED
Only as trustee of the University of Pennsylvania did Mr. Johnson appear in public clad in gown of office.

"THE APPAREL OF PROCLAIMS THE MAN"
Plainness of dress and bluntness of speech were two attributes by which Philadelphia will remember John G. Johnson best.

THE JOHNSON RESIDENCE
The home of the great lawyer, 510 South Broadstreet, like its owner, gave no exterior evidence of the unusual treasures stored within.

JOHN G. JOHNSON

*Now death hath laid its hand on him
Who held no man in awe;
Nor feared he that invader grim,
But at the end he saw
The white throne and the seraphim—
For this man knew the Law.*

April 13, 1917.

TOM DALY.

Made by American Press Association
ON WATCH FOR PERISCOPE
Navy's special officers keep watch for U-boats.

POLICE HORSES AT INDOOR SHOW
Philadelphia's municipal cavalry carry off honors at Third National Agency exhibition.