

PHILADELPHIA WOMEN SHARE IN NO SMALL DEGREE THE NATION-WIDE AWAKE

PROVES HER FITNESS BY "YEOMAN WORK"
Miss Loretta Walsh, first naval woman recruit, is a potent worker at the station of the women's section of the Navy League, 1343 Chestnut Street.

ACTRESS DONATES HER TALENTS TO RELIEF WORK
Mrs. William Faversham, better remembered as Julie Opp, whose husband is playing at a Philadelphia theatre, as she appeared with her two sons at a Red Cross benefit performance for British soldiers.

A DOME THAT HAS COVERED SCENES OF WAR DEBATE.
This picture shows a portion of a public building. For the first correct identification mailed to the Pictorial Editor of the EVENING LEDGER a prize of $2 will be awarded.

ANSWER AND WINNER OF PUZZLE PICTURE
The picture published on this page Tuesday, for which a prize of $2 was offered to the person mailing the first correct identification, was that of the "Old Zane Street School," Filbert Street west of Seventh, later the headquarters of the Board of Education. The prize is awarded to Kathryn M. Alexander, 1539 West Norris street.

OPENING OF THE NATIONAL SERVICE SCHOOL
Many Philadelphia women attended the exercises of this institution, Conduit Road, D. C., where Major General George Barnett, also of Philadelphia, presided.

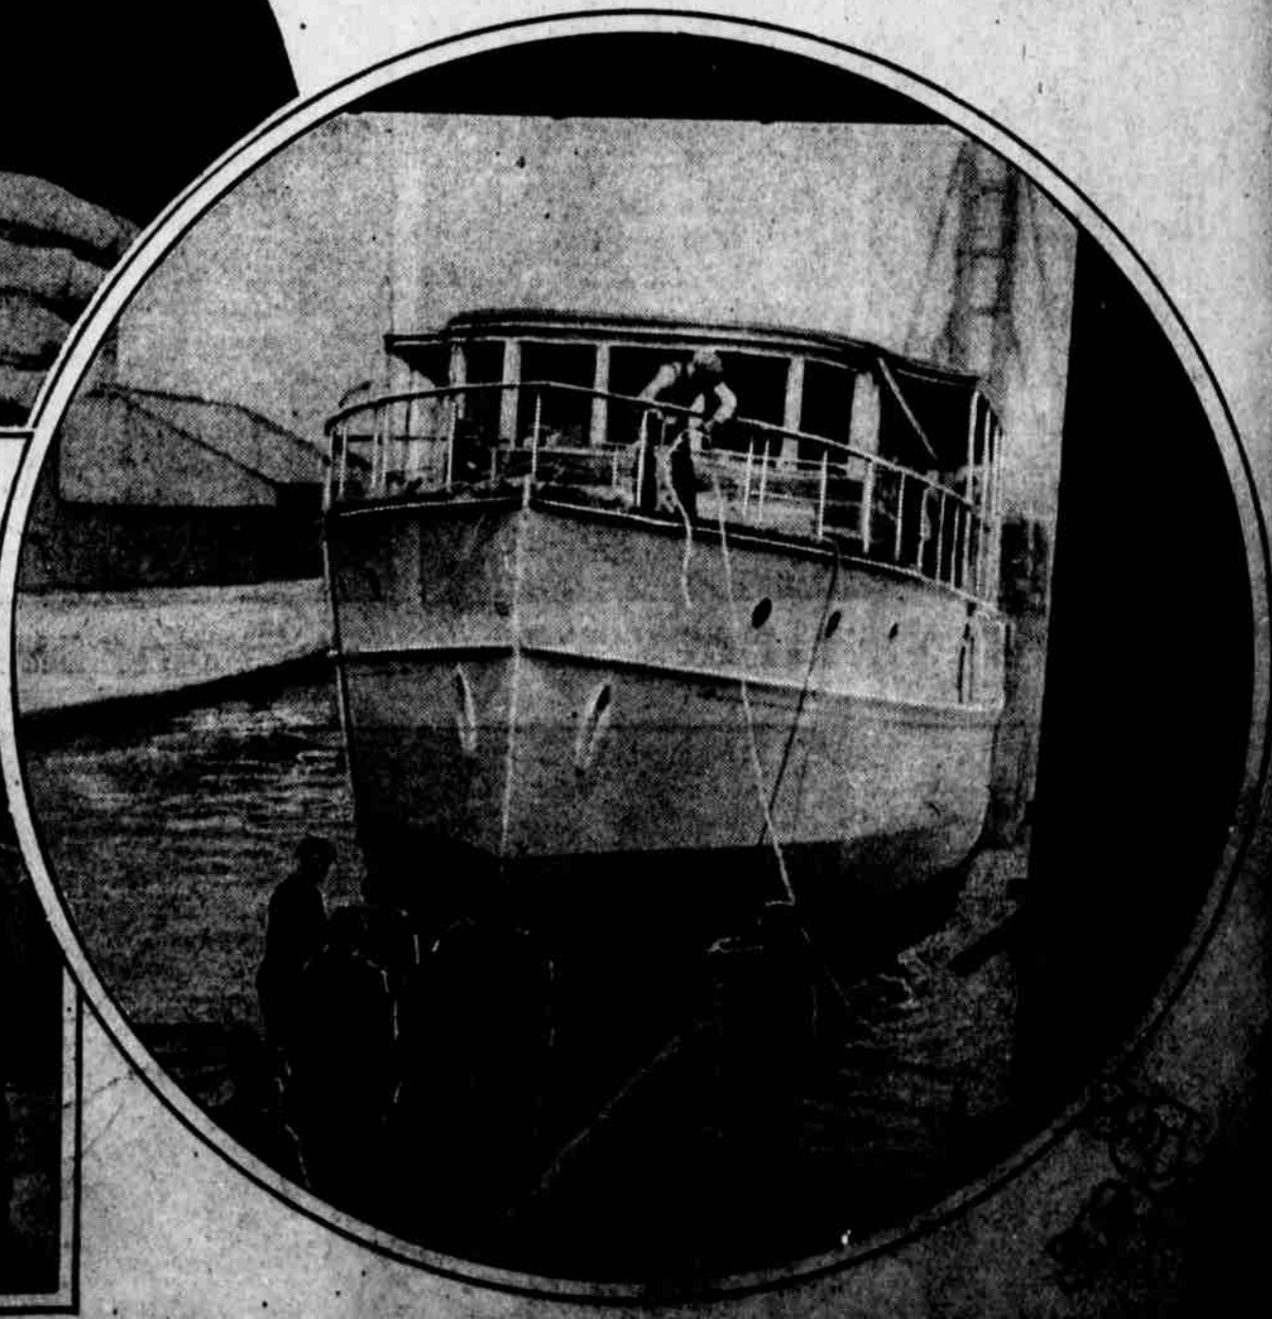

THEY STICK NO FEATHER IN THEIR HAT
Nevertheless, Philadelphia women are demonstrating their "Yankee Doodle" sentiment by their headgear.

SPONSOR FOR HER FLOATING HOME
The Commodore will leave this morning from the yard of her husband's business.

CAMDEN IS RESPONDING TO THE CALL TO THE COLORS
A recruiting station has been established on Market street, and applications for service are encouraging those in charge.

$150,000 HOUSEBOAT BOY TO TAKE MARRIAGE
The Commodore will leave this morning from the yard of her husband's business.