

LINE RECRUITS ASSURED AT $1000
Policies Cover Risk of Death While in U. S. Service

FOR FORT SLOCUM
30 Men Leave for Active Service in Army—Officers Seek to Boost Enlistments

Captain S. A. W. Patterson, in charge of the Marine Corps recruiting work has received word from Brigadier General Lauchlin Currier, chief Ordnance Inspector of the Marine Corps, that at the instance of the National Security League an insurance policy valued at $1000 has been taken out on every marine now in service and on all new men enlist they will be insured. The payment of this insurance, it was announced, is not contingent upon a marine's death in the performance of his duty while in the service. It covers his death from any cause while he is serving Uncle Sam.

An armored motorcar has been attracting much attention at Broad and Arch streets, near the marine recruiting headquarters. It belongs to the twenty-third company of the First Regiment, can travel seventy miles an hour, carries three men and some planks which can be thrown across streams or gullies in the formation of temporary bridges. There are a half dozen of these cars now in the service of the marine corps. This one will be used as an aid to recruiting.

One hundred men, the largest detachment of army recruits to be sent in a body to Fort Slocum, N. Y., since the beginning of the war, left Philadelphia today at noon. Today also saw the beginning of redoubled efforts by army recruiting officers under Colonel Hatfield to gain recruits to comply with the War Department's call for 100 men a day for the next thirty-five days from this district. Many new posters were placed in windows of homes asking for volunteers.

Among those who enlisted in the army today was Rudolph Kordes, thirty-seven years old, 107 North Sixth street, who had served five years in the German army. "I feel that it is my duty to fight for this country now," he said, "inasmuch as it has been my land for years."

Among those applying for enlistment in the Naval Coast Defense Reserve today were Florence Fisher, nineteen, and her sister, Ida May Fisher, of 1324 North Camac street. They were sent to the Naval Home for examination.

The recruiting officers were spurred to greater efforts by the heavy slump in recruiting yesterday, which was one of the most depressing days since the stations were opened. Only thirty-seven men applied for enrollment in the regular service. Five were accepted. Of these the army took four and the navy one. The marine corps, with two applicants, did not gain a single recruit.

The following were among the first enlistments announced today:

Twenty-five Enlist in Few Hours for Work in Great Grain Fields

Recruiting for work on the grain fields of the Northwest started briskly today at the farm bureau in the Bourse. Twenty-five men enrolled before noon.

The recruits include young men, middle-aged men and old men. Many of the young men have been rejected because of physical disabilities at army, navy and marine recruiting stations, and most of them say that if the work in the open remedies their physical defects they will apply again for enlistment in the Government's fighting forces.

A. D. Chiquoine, who is conducting the bureau, told the applicants to keep in touch with the bureau, as the Government at Washington was trying to arrange free transportation West for them. All of the applicants said they were willing to start immediately for the grain fields. Some are willing to pay their own transportation and others say they will reimburse the Government if the Government pays their fare. The men who enrolled today are:

William Goodchild, 4102 Orchard st., floor layer, Charles Swartz, 23 years old, 1928 N. 31st st., clerk.
Raymond Sells, 23 years old, 5345 S. Broad st., waiter, will take work near Philadelphia.

SOX KNIT BY "SOCIETY" GOAD SAILOR TO VERSE

Washington Woman's Effort Used as Hammock and Mitt, Writes Sarcastic Jackie

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Knitting sox for sailors is Washington society's wartime fad. Today one of the knitters, who had slipped her card in the toe of her first production, received this verified comment from a sailor:

CRAZED BY U-BOAT WAR
Search is being continued today for the body of John J. O'Neill, an officer of the steamship Sava Ramon, who jumped into the Delaware River as the vessel lay at anchor near New Castle, Del., Saturday night. He sank before members of the crew could attempt to rescue him. It is thought that he became demented as a result of dodging German submarines in the war zone. O'Neill was a Philadelphian, and lived at 2233 Pemberton street. He was thirty-eight years old and left a widow and two children.

FILM FLASHES FOR FANS

An admission charge of ten and fifteen cents will be made on Tuesday only at the Liberty. This is necessary to pay for the unusual attraction, Nazimova in "War Brides."

Mrs. Vernon Castle and Ethel Barrymore will be shown on the same bill for Friday at the Bureka. Each one is featured in separate plays.

When Albert E. Brown retired from active work in the life insurance field he decided to embark in a new business and determined to succeed in it. The appearance of the crowded auditoriums of the Overbrook looks as though his determination has been realized.

The smallness of the auditorium of the Bluebird has made it necessary for Manager Goldman to show "The Tale of Two Cities" on Friday as well as Thursday. William Farinut is the featured player in this production.

In "The Dancer's Peril," to be seen at the Toga on Thursday, Alice Brady will appear as the dancing girl. She is the daughter of William A. Brady, the manager and producer of theatrical attractions.

"Civilization" is a timely subject, owing to its remarkable scenes of warfare. It will be at the Apollo today and tomorrow.

"A Million Bid," which features Anita Stewart, is a retelling of the Vitagraph, and will be shown at the Savoy all day today. It was productions of this kind that made the Vitagraph's reputation when pictures were in their growing age.

Nance O'Neil will be featured in the cinema version of the popular book story, "Mrs. Balfame," which plays at the Princess on Friday.

"The Voice on the Wire" is the title of the new serial story which is to appear every Wednesday as an added attraction at the Market Street Theatre.

The last of the McClure series of the "Seven Deadly Sins" will be shown at the Cedar on Wednesday. It is called the "Seventh Sin."

The seriousness of the subject of "The American Consul," in which Theodore Roberts is featured, at the Frankford on Friday and Saturday will be relieved by the addition of a Keystone comedy.

Another Russian subject will be presented at the Park on Saturday, when Alice Brady appears in "Darkest Russia." It is a timely topic for films.

Another subject that has caused a lot of comment in recruiting circles is "War Brides," in which Nazimova is the featured player. This will be the main attraction at the Jefferson on Friday.

George M. Cohan in "Broadway Jones" will be the chief feature at the Leader the last three days of the week.

At the Regent "The People vs. John Doe" will be the main attraction today and Tuesday. It is a tense, forceful dramatization of life. A company of unusual merit makes up the cast. The "types" taken from life, with a scenic environment in a country spot where it happened, make the story more impressive. As an added attraction a Keystone comedy, "The Nick of Time Baby," will make a delightful foil for the drama.

Vaudeville will be given in conjunction with Sessue Hayakawa at the Alhambra in an adaptation of Robert Louis Stevenson's story "The Bottle Imp," the entire theme of which is filled with unusual and startling incidents. This play is warm with color and is executed with dramatic intensity by an excellent company of Hawaiian players in support of the talented Japanese star.

Seven featured stars of the screen will
