NATURALLY, as time goes on we are more and more interested in the war and the bills before Congress and all that going on about us in the matter. It is selightful also to hear more intimately what some of our young men are doing who are already in France.

A friend has written me of the splenid work which has been done by Cleon, ne of the Krouse boys, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Krouse, of Haddonfield. who left Christmas Day for France. William Krouse, who is only seventeen. left last Saturday for France, where he will also be a member of the American Ambulance Corps. In which Cleon has now made a name for himself. The father of these two boys is very well known in insurance circles in this city. and is proud to give his boys to help France and now, better still, to help the

A letter addressed to his mother, dated April 7, gives us a tiny idea of the enthusiasm among the French and the Americans in France over our entry into the war. He says:

"As you may know, very heavy fighting is now taking place at the front, for the Allies are making their wonderful spring drive, which you have perhaps read about by this time. Well, the War Office has called fifteen cars of our sec tion to the front line, and I have been honored with taking full command of the quad. We leave here (Juilly) early Monday, 4-9-17.

"Now there is more in this than you may perhaps imagine, for 🗢 are the first section to go to the French front after America's declaration of war. So is it not an honor? And to think that I am to take command of a squad!"

In the same letter he tells of the joy in France at the entry of the "Stars and Stripes" into the war.

"If you could see France today you would think you were home in the land of Uncle Sammy. I never saw so many American flags even in the States as there are flying all over-everywhere. It is perfectly wonderful, indeed, and it makes us all feel so proud and happy. Every store, every building, in fact, everywhere you look, you see 'Old Glory.' Oh, it is wonderful!"

Pretty thrilling, isn't it, when you think how close these boys are to things over there, and realize how soon many of them will not only be at the front carrying and aiding the wounded, but actually in the trenches and on the firing ines and taking part in the actual warfare themselves? God grant that it will not be for long and that they come home

Preparations are going on with great celerity on every hand for the annual pony show and bazaar to be held on May 16 at the Wynnewood estate of William J. Clothier in aid of Workman Piace House and the Main Line Branch of the Red Cross

The biggest event of the day, of course, will be the pony show. Interest centers in that department of the affair, and inastruch as it comes fully two weeks before the lieven horse show the first big show of the season in this victnity, there is really more attention being paid to the exhibition because of the nearly to be above with aure some of the pontes to be shown will be exhibited in the big show, and because also there are to be several new animals in the ring.

Among the children there is great excitement. It has leaked out that "Brother" Mather, otherwise Charles E. Mather, 2d, has a new pony which he has been jumping at every opportunity. He fully expects to at every epportunity. He fully expects to take all the prizes Miss Frances Powell, who has several ponies, will be one of the exhibitors. While possibly not the best n point of quality or performance her pony Tommy is by far the best known. Tommy has cut many capers in the show ring, and he may perform in approved style this time. "Hillie" Ashton is another exhibitor who will spring some surprises.

Mrs. Victor C. Mather is chairman of the pony show committee, and has given one of the cups. Others among the denors are Mrs. Charles A Munn. Jr. Mrs. Alexander Brown. Mrs. William W. Porter, Mrs. George H. Karle, Jr., and Mrs. William J.

Besides Mrs. Mather the members of the how committee include Mrs. Charles Miss Kitty Smith, Mrs. Brown and Miss Giad's Earle. Miss Earle was for-merly one of the best-known child exhibi-tors. Now she has reached the grown up stage and is to be a debutante next sea-

Another important feature of the affair Another inhertant leafure of the affair will be the dog show which will be conducted in every way in a real up-to-date exhibition of canthes. Mrs. E. Florens Rivinus is chaltman of the dog show committee and the other members include Miss E. Gwen Martin. Moss Evelina Walbaum, Miss Helen Dougherty and Miss Helsey W. Davis. All but Hollis, Vera said McCann are saved and blocked up by the boat. Hellis forces McCann to help him liberate the sir! locked in a stateroun. The three then escape in the light dary trailing from the stern of the yacht.

The third night out they sight a craft, the Indian Chief, of Philadelphia, which takes them on board, when it is learned that Hollis can navigate the beat. The Indian Chief is in a pittable condition, having been weeked in a storm. The versel is leaded to the hetches with a carso of munitions of war consigned to Hamburg.

PHILIP BASCOM, the owner of the ship, has staked his entire fortune in the venture. Upon its success depends his future, and that of his mother, in Philadelphia When Vera recognizes Bascom as an old paim Beach acquaintance, she urses Hollis to take command of the ship and run it into Hamburg. Bascom his a cripple as the result of a shooting affair in which McCang, in a featous rang, fired at him. Bascom, however, was innocent of any completty with the woman.

Hollis takes command and chooses Leavord as his first mate and Gison as second mate. He then learns that McCann has informed the crew of, the war, and is apreading money and glurious promises amone the ment of they land him asfoly at an American McCann is made a prisoner in order to McCann is made a prisoner in order to McCann is made a prisoner in order to FERGUS McCANN, a millionaire, slight-

But you knew he recognized me; that we had been friends." "All the more reason why I should remain silent. As long as you evidently preferred that I should not know—"Oh but I didn't. Mr. Hollis." she interrupted. "It never once occurred to me that you were still in doubt as to my identity. I—I do not wish you to feel like—like that toward me. Of course at first I thought it safer to guard my secret; I,—I did not know you at all then, only by name; you were merely a guest on board my father's yacht." "Your father's yacht! Why, of coursehow stupid of me. Vera, Vera, why the name had a strangely familiar sound from the very first, but I could not recall the

"But I supposed you to be in Europe?"
"Did papa say so? You must have misunderstood. Mother would have taken me with her, but I had so much I wanted to io in New York."

There was a moment's silence, the girl standing close against the rall gazing out into the darkness. The fact that she was really Vera Carrington served only to add a fresh complication to the whole affair. She proke the embarrassment.

"It is so strange you should not have suspected; that no one should have told Why, both Mr. Bascom and Mr. Mc-"Not McCann. surely?" "Why not." We have met socially in New York. It seems hardly possible, now that I realize the true character of the man. But probably you never asked; never discusse ne between you?" "That is the truth. Of course, it was quite impossible for me to question McCann, and I have seen very little of Bascom. Besides, you rather threw yourself on my

"On the Esmeralda—yes. It was neces-sary then, for I simply had to keep my presence a secret until we were a safe disance at sea. There were several on board who would have recognized me at once and would have told papa. That would have spoiled everything. It was so for-tunate you were the only one who chanced to see me."

"Fortunate," and I glanced about doubtfully. "It can hardly be termed that. Do you realize fully the condition to which I have already brought you?"

"Why do you speak in that tone?" she questioned "Sureiy you do not think me more deeply interested than I should be?"
"Assuredly not; yet your request was certainly based on your personal interest in Philip Baseom. It was not until you recognized the owner of this vessel that you have done, and are now loing, every duty at my request. Why, Mr. Hollis, I realize far more than you can ow all this has occurred through the mad whim of a girl. But for me you would not so here on this unbucky ship. You would see with those others rescued from the Esmeralda safely in New York."

"It was a girl's whim, then, which caused."

You would be with those others rescued from the Esmeralda safely in New York."

"It was a girl's whim, then, which caused you to secrete yourself on board the "That and that only. I had asked to go

"Why, I thought we were very quiet-"No: I was lying down, but had not undressed even. Who was the man? and what had he done?"

"Our old friend Fergus McCann," I answered deciding to be frank with her. "It was not so much what he had done, as what he proposed doing. He was attempt-ing to corrupt the crew forward by the use of money, and, unfortunately, there are some scamps aboard only too willing to make trouble. I felt it safer to nip the

"To have the Indian Chief returned to an American port. I'll do him the credit of saying that, until I told him a while ago, he possessed no knowledge whatever that Bascom owned the vessel or was on board. However, he said nothing which would rrake me think this fact would interfere in the least with his plans. The fellow doesn't seem to know how to forgive; he encourages a spirit of revenge. He hates Bascom yet, and will be only too glad to ruin him. And he hates me, because of what occurred in the boat. "This is what underlies his action no

"It was not Philip Bascom alone, then?"
"You have no excuse for that question, yet I will answer you. It was not Philip Bascom alone. But if he had stood alone in my mind, the decision would have been exactly the same. I knew him when he was strong, well and prosperous. I was only a girl then, but he was very kind and considerate. I am not one to desert a friend, Mr. Hollis. I like Philip Bascom, if that is what you wish to know; I like him very much indeed. Does this acknowledg-ment have any effect on your decision?"
"It does not," I said honestly, "If it did I should have to revise my whole estimate of your character." "But," she insisted, "It was not my choice which determined your taking command of the Indian Chief. You were willing and ready to do so out of sympathy for the owner—Philip Bascom. Your only hesitancy was over my willingness to accompany you on the voyage. I merely consented to your plan. Is this not true?"

"Yes—In the form you put it."

"Which means that you still think my in-terest greater than I choose to confess. Well, why argue over that? You have no right to draw a conclusion.
